Endorses Request For Higher Grant

The Board of Governors of Civic Hospital Thursday night endorsed a resolution by Waterloo city council requesting the provincial government to increase the statutory grant for indigent patients to an amount more closely related to current ward rates.

The resolution will be forwarded to city council with the rider that the contribution at both the provincial and municipal levels of government should be nearer the actual cost.

The request was made by Waterloo city council on the grounds that a large number of the indigent patients in Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital are not residents of either Kitchener or Waterloo and, under the Hospitals Act, municipalities are obliged to pay only $3.50 a day for each indigent patient.

The resolution was subsequently endorsed by St. Thomas city council and the St. Thomas Memorial Hospital Board which forwarded a copy to the Civic Hospital Board.

In view of Board Treasurer T. T. Rodger's opinion that the problem was that of one municipality paying for the indigent patients of another municipality, it was decided to forward a copy of the resolution to city council.

"Actually, the city and the county underwrite the cost for us and so the problem is theirs and not ours," Mr. Rodger said.

Board Secretary John Hornal said that the government grant this year was $1.82 a day for each indigent patient, compared to $1.29 a year ago. A cheque for $16,223.48 was received from the province as the 1952-53 grant for indigent patients.

HIGHER HERE

While the Waterloo resolution referred to $6.50 a day as current ward costs for each patient, it was pointed out at Thursday night's meeting that the figure would be higher locally.

"It should be pointed out to city council that we want the contribution at both levels of government nearer the actual cost," Acting Mayor T. D. Miller, a regular board member, said.

T. J. Carley, QC, said he didn't see why the province didn't assume the full cost of indigent patients.

Mr. Rodger pointed out that 15 per cent of the indigent patients in Civic Hospital came from beyond the city. "Our problem would be solved if every municipality would pay the full cost," he said.

"I don't think the burden should be on the property-owner," Mr. Carley said. "It's a social problem that all tax-payers should be responsible for."

Mr. Hornal said that the problem had come before the Ontario Hospital Association several times and representation had been made to the provincial government. The government appeared to take the attitude that the difficulty was one of setting a rate applicable to all hospitals.

"Regardless of the fact that most hospitals have deficits," Mr. Hornal explained," some hospitals do not and apparently the government hasn't been able to arrive at a formula whereby the hospital that gives service is rewarded and the hospital which doesn't is not rewarded.

"I feel that this should be directed to the Ontario Municipal Association rather than the government because this recommendation comes from a hospital that is complaining of bearing the cost of the indigent patients of another municipality."

Planning Monument To Sir Robert Borden

OTTAWA (CP)—A monument to Sir Robert Borden, former Canadian prime minister, will be erected west of the West Block of the Parliament Buildings, overlooking the Bank street gate to the Parliament Hill grounds, the citizenship department announced Thursday.

The department is sponsoring a competition open to Canadian sculptors. The memorial will be either a full-length statue or a monument with a portrait bust, costing not more than $50,000.

The artist with the best design will be commissioned to carry out the work.

Congressmen Want Voice

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chairman Alexander Wiley of the Senate foreign relations committee today proposed that President Eisenhower temper possible congressional criticism of Big Three conference decisions by taking along representatives of both parties.

Eisenhower will be under pressure from congressmen on several vital issues to be discussed with Prime Minister Churchill and whoever is French premier at the time of the mid-June meeting in Bermuda.

Wiley, Wisconsin Republican, said in an interview he believes the presence of a Republican and a Democratic congressional leader as conference observers "might help give Congress a better understanding of the problems faced by our allies."

One of those problems is an apparent determination by Britain to back Communist China's bid for a seat in the United Nations as part of the price for a settlement in Korea.

Wiley has joined a group of Republican senators publicly committed to opposing Red China's UN entry under any circumstances.

Mayors, Reeves Want Poll Tax On Women

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Federation of Mayors and Reeves Thursday approved imposing a poll tax on females between the ages of 21 and 60 who are not entered on assessment rolls by a 34-to-30 vote.

Alderman Ada Pritchard of Hamilton said she would favor the move if and when women are given equal pay and equal rights with men. Reeve Dorothy Hague of Swansea opposed the resolution.

Reeve A. G. Briggs of Stamford township said women, earning in many cases as much as men, should be prepared to accept a poll tax.

Civic Hospital Staff To Get Holiday

The Board of Governors of Civic Hospital has declared Coronation Day, June 2, an official holiday for the hospital and as many as possible of the workers will be given the day off.

Workers required to work on Coronation Day will be given an extra day's pay in lieu of the holiday except in the case of student nurses on duty that day, who will be given a day at some other time.

Superintendent John Hornal pointed out that to give the equivalent time off at some other time to workers who are required to work on Coronation Day would seriously cut into the effectiveness of the hospital working staff at these other times.

TRAVEL: with Jean Stenton

First Ontario Holsteins Flown To Mexican Ranch

MEXICO CITY —The first man to fly Canadian Holsteins into Mexico on a commercial basis, Sr. Marcus Ortiz of the Santa Monica Ranch, a few miles outside Mexico City, today has a herd of 700 cattle, one of the largest in Mexico.

In 1943-44, Sr. Ortiz flew in more than 80 Ontario Holsteins as the basis of a herd he was building up and most of them came from an Oakville farm near Toronto—Hays Ltd. This was the beginning of Canadian Holstein business with Mexican cattlemen on a large scale.

"The offspring of the Canadian cattle which I imported give a greater amount of milk than did the Canadian cattle themselves," Sr. Ortiz told me proudly. "They have improved in size, production and weight."

Sr. Ortiz went into farming as a hobby. He is an industrialist and at the beginning he thought it would be nice to have a farm for his children. So he purchased a small one and there was already a herd of 60 cows there. So he selected the best and sold the remainder. Then he began buying Holsteins from Canada and the United States and by cross breeding has built up his present herd which is a noted one in Mexico.

FAVORITE BULL

His favorite at present is Carnation Tip Top, one of his herdsires. This bull is a son of the famous U. S. Holstein Carnation Homestead Daisy Madcap whose yearly record of 36,414 lbs. of milk containing 1511.8 lbs. of fat is the largest butterfat record ever made in the Americas. When making this record just recently, she exceeded her own former championship mark of 1413.6 lbs. fat. Now 10 years old she will calve for the eighth time in 1953. Tip Top is the only male calf she has had and he stood first at the Pacific International Exposition. Sr. Ortiz paid $30,000 for him.

During the hoof and mouth disease outbreak, many cows had to be sent to the slaughterhouse. So Sr. Ortiz began buying again to replace the lost animals. He has 160 Canadian cows in his herd.

"There is a small loss before Canadian cattle become acclimatized to this altitude," Sr. Ortiz remarked. "Usually on the first birth there is much suffering. But after that it is easier and the offspring of these splendid animals are much better in production than their parents. The Canadian cattle were averaging about 13,000 pounds of milk a year."

An offspring of a Canadian sire birth out of Far-Land production Principe in the second birth gave 21,301, 5 lbs. and after the third birth is 68.35 lbs. and afterreac reached 22,777 lbs. The average per day after the second birth is 58.36 lbs. and after the third birth 62.40 lbs.

Leafing through some of his records, Sr. Ortiz said: a Mexican-Canadian cow out of Marmon from the first birth gave a total production of 11,901 lbs. of milk per year and 32.60 lbs. per day. After the second calf out of Lochin it was 14,963 lbs. per year and 44.80 lbs. per day .

WANT THEM REGISTERED

Besides being interested in Canadian Holsteins for his herd in the first place, Sr. Ortiz had an eye to the publicity of educating Mexican cattlemen to their value. Prior to that Mexican farmers had been buying cattle from the United States of the commercial type and not registered. Ortiz was a personal friend of the Mexican Secretary of Agriculture, Sr. Nazario Ortiz Garza and the ex-governor of Jalisco, Laywer Gallo. They bought Canadian battle after seeing those of Sr. Ortiz.

"I can find little difference between Canadian and United States Holsteins so far as production goes. But the Canadian cattle have a better apperance," Sr. Ortiz told me.

"Far Land Mollie was nominated for all-Canadian heifer calf for 1950. It was one of the first offspring of the present herdshire Far Land Historian Supreme. It is particularly gratifying for a breeder to know that his herdsire has produced calves to warrant all-Canadian consideration," Sr. Ortiz declared.

"Right now I am proud to say I have as good cattle as any Canadian or American has except for a few minor factors. Feeding conditions in Mexico are better than in Canada. We have better weather; all the grounds are well fertilized and more feed grasses are used. The tragedy comes when the matter of mixing comes up. We don't have or produce the concentrates required for cattle purposes. However Mexico is preparing to start giving the right proportion of proteins for cattle."

EMPLOYS 85 MEN

Sr. Ortiz employs 85 laborers on his ranch. Sixty are steady employees and 25 are temporary help. The Santa Monica Ranch is 3,750 acres. Total production per day from his herd is 4,550 litres of milk. Sr. Ortiz operates a dairy right at the ranch from where the milk is sent to Mexico City.

"We have been given A quality for the fats in our milk. That is the best milk and it all depends on the feeding given the cattle."

But the thing that Sr. Ortiz is proudest of is his milking plant. There are only three cattlemen in Mexico with the setup he uses, and he claims only two in the United States and none in Canada. Our National Film Board has been so interested in his methods that they have ben down to make pictures.

LIKE A HOSPITAL

The inside of the building is all white tile and is kept scrubbed and sterlized resembling a hospital. The cows come in and are bathed under a shower-like arrangement, disinfected and milked by suction, all without being touched by a human hand. The milk is sterilized, bottled and kept at a cool temperature. Sr. Ortiz is proud that he has a lower bacteria count than can be found in the United States.

"We favor the new method for handling cattle," he said. "We turn them loose in the fields till 12 o'clock so that they get the maximum of sun and air and they have a greater sense of freedom which improves production."

Farm Wife Slain Hired Man Blamed

STRATFORD (CP)—A 44-year-old farm wife was slain Thursday by a hatchet-swinging hired hand in her Downie township home, about three miles southeast of here, and her son, Billy, 4, suffered serious head injuries.

The hired hand, Bronislew Milart, a Polish immigrant, died in hospital here soon after the attack from what police said were self-inflicted wrist wounds. They described it as murder, attempted murder and suicide, but said they have not established a motive.

George Lupton returned home from a neighboring farm to find his wife's body on the floor, his son unconscious and Milart bleeding from the wounds.

The boy was taken to hospital in London. He has a fractured skull and underwent an operation.

There are two other boys in the family, Gary, 8, and Brian, 6.

An inquest will be held.

Operate On Siamese Tw

BOSTON (AP)—Forty-one-year-old Siamese twin sisters from Holyoke came to hospital here Thursday for surgery on one of them. Mary Gibb is to have an abdominal operation today but Margaret S. Gibb also must be anaesthetized. The sisters are reputed to be the only U.S.-born twins, with bodies joined, to live to the age of 41.

Royal Children Enjoying Rehearsals

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

LONDON (CP)—Amid mounting tension at Buckingham Palace, Prince Charles and Princess Anne —oblivious to grown-up worries— are learning a new game called "helping mummy with her Coronation."

The Queen holds most of her rehearsals for the big moment at the palace, and she likes to have her high-spirited children along to take the edge off what to a certain extent must be an ordeal. Excited comments from four-year-old Charles and 2½-year-old Anne help to brighten these last-minute preparations.

When the Queen, in state dress, practices entering and leaving the gilded state coach drawn by eight Windsor greys, Charles and Anne stand quietly by until they are allowed to enter what they call "mummy's golden carriage." Then they ride around the palace courtyard watching delightedly as mother and father bow and smile to empty palace windows, anticipating the tributes that will follow the carriage on Coronation Day.

REHEARSALS STEPPED UP

Rehearsals now have reached a stepped-up tempo. With the Coronation ceremony just 12 days away, the Queen spends long periods daily pacing to and fro in the ballroom of the palace, getting used to the weight of the robes she will wear and memorizing a complicated series of movements.

The two royal children are expected to watch the Queen's procession leave the palace gates, most likely from the nursery windows.

Charles will go to the abbey briefly, though details have not been announced. Anne will not accompany her brother but will get her share of attention from the palace crowds.

Canada Welcomes Big Three Talks

OTTAWA (CP)—The big three talks in Bermuda are welcomed here as a move that can hardly help but do good for the slightly-battered cause of western unity.

The only official public comment came from Defence Minister Claxton as acting prime minister He said Canada was informed at once of the Anglo-Franco-American conference and that "we naturally welcome a meeting which we hope will result in even greater unity among the free nations."

Canada will not take part in the talks among President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Churchill and a new French premier. But a round of talks topped off by the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London after the Coronation will have left the Canadian viewpoint on key matters fresh in the minds of all by the time the meeting assembles.

Then there were Prime Minister St. Laurent's talks with Mr. Eisenhower in Washington this month. Mr. St. Laurent now is en route to London.

Wants Canada To Give Leadership In NATO

WELLAND (CP)—J. W. Murphy, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Lambton West, said Thursday night Canada should give leadership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization toward economic co-operation among member-nations.

In an address prepared for a nominating convention, he said the government has given no indication following the Paris meeting of NATO that Canada suggested the organization consider the problem of greater international trade.

He said it is essential to recognize that communism works towards its objective in the economic field as well as the military. If Canada is to build her defences, NATO countries must work effectively in defence and multilateral trade.

Board Adopts Teacher Scheme

TORONTO (CP)—Board of education Thursday night adopted a scheme designed to make sure that secondary school teachers in Toronto schools get fair treatment.

Toronto secondary schools were pinklisted last week by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation which warned its 6,500 members not to accept jobs in high schools here. If they did, they would lose federation support.

The action was taken because the board refused to change its single salary schedule, which the federation opposes.

The scheme to replace federation help will provide that if a teacher needs assistance, he can request an investigating committee.

Genest Convicted Of Woman's Murder

MONTREAL (CP)—Roland Genest, 26, was convicted Thursday of the murder of Marie-Paule Langlais, with whom he had lived, and was sentenced to be hanged Aug. 28.

The jury in Court of Queen's Bench, under Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure, deliberated only 15 minutes.

In a signed statement admitted at the trial Genest admitted clubbing and stabbing the 23-year-old woman last Feb. 23 and said she first struck him with a baseball bat.

XV

There is a great deal of organization needed for a Royal visit. There is tremendous advance excitement and detailed preparation. All the local dignitaries get out their robes or have their best suits pressed. Their wives are thrown into a frenzy of ironing and other activity.

Those responsible for the ceremonies of the occasion are busy too. Precedence of presentation to Royalty is a matter of great importance to them.

If the Princess was to arrive by train there was an official welcome to prepare, police arrangements to be made at the station, and then the planning of a day packed with visits, speeches, and drives.

This was the day of days for the town and its citizens; but for the Princess this was her life, day after day. She can look forward to a future of similar functions; the trip by train or car; the loyal speech of welcome; her gracious reply—everything falling into a set and familiar pattern. Local newspapers filled their columns with descriptions of her smile, her voice, the names of people who had been presented to her, the decorations in the streets, the crowds.

Unforgettable for them! But what of her, who must be somewhere else tomorrow, walking the aisles of another cathedral, listening to the Dean's reminiscences, inspecting more walls filled with paintings, and making bright and memorable remarks about them?

Surely the wonder is that she remembers any of the hundreds of people she meets in a week of such visits.

But she does remember. To keep names and faces in her mind is part of her task. And her memory starts working even before she comes to a place.

This may be her first visit to the town, but she knows that her father or her grandfather visited it long ago. Perhaps he received a gold casket or some other memento.

Memento is for memory, and Queen Elizabeth is careful to recall the gift in reply to the Lord Mayor's loyal address. She knows his name and the names of other local notabilities who may be presented to her. And she will recall their names and faces if ever they come before her again.

No one who has seen her on one of these visits has felt for a moment that it was just routine for her. Because it was not so, really. It was meeting people—and she likes people.

I have seen her stand for hours at the window of her apartment in Buckingham Palace from which she could see, through the lace curtains, Big Ben's face and look right down the Mall to the Admiralty Arch. Then she would look down to the scattered sightseers in front of the Palace gates. They would look up, asking one another which room is the King's, where the Throne room is, trying to imagine what is behind each window.

They little thought that at the same time a Royal Princess was wondering about them!

It was the same in Canada, where Princess Elizabeth was undertaking the first State visit of her career, as the representative of her father.

To the King and Queen at home the daily news of the progress of their daughter's tour of the Dominion must have recalled vivid memories of their own visit to Canada and the United States in the summer of July, 1939.

Queen Elizabeth knew for 15 years the dignity and responsibility that the Heir to the Throne must carry.

Although she could not have realized then all that the change would mean to her, she certainly did know that in leaving the old home at 145 Piccadilly, after the Abdication, she would be leaving some of her childhood behind.

She was no plaster saint, but always a human little person—sometimes quick-tempered and inclined to be a little overcritical. The curious thing, however, was that she was quick to see her own faults when they were pointed out to her, and eager to correct them.

Seeing her so perfectly dressed, whether for a military parade or for a garden party, it seemed strange to me to recall that in her teens she was never particularly concerned about her appearance. But since wearing the right things at the right times was a duty, she conformed without demur.

At one time she had a great deal of fun experimenting with various styles of make-up. One day she came down with a vivid splotch of crimson caked around her lips. This apparition in the sober surroundings of our schoolroom at Windsor Castle was as startling a splash of red as a poppy in the snow.

She saw me looking rather dubiously at her. "Crawfie," she exclaimed, "what is the matter with you this morning? Why have you been staring at me?"

"It's your mouth," I said firmly. "You look as if you'd dipped it into a pot of plum jam. It doesn't go with your coloring at all. You need a light cherry lipstick."

Nothing more was said. She did not wipe the paint off at once, but before the end of the morning the smear had become a little less obvious.

Fear U.S. Strike To Affect Ford

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Officials of Ford of Canada and Chrysler Corporation of Canada warned Thursday their manufacturing operations will suffer if strikes at United States supply plants are prolonged.

A Ford spokesman said the plant will revert to a 40-hour work week with no overtime shifts and will suspend operations of the passenger assembly line on Saturdays.

"The shutdown of Ford operations in the U.S. as a result of the strike in the Canton, O., supply plant is a matter of serious concern to us," Robert S. Bridge, vice-president in charge of manufacturing, said.

Chrysler officials said they do not expect a complete shutdown here as a result of a strike at a feeder plant in Detroit. But they said operations will be affected by the strike.

79-Year-Old Churchill Won't Slow Up As Premier

By FRASER WIGHTON

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Churchill's friends say he is working far too hard for a man of his age. But most of them have given up trying to persuade the prime minister to ease up, because it is a sheer waste of time.

"Winnie," well into his 79th year, is at present in one of his galvanic moods. His "East - West talks" speech recently, which started a wave of Anglo-American controversy, was symptomatic of this bounding energy.

When he led the Conservative opposition from 1945 to 1951, Churchill seemed to lose much of the dynamism he displayed as Britain's war leader. But recently he has recaptured a good deal of his old form, thriving on the hard work which accompanies power.

In addition to his numerous tasks as head of the government, he is handling the foreign office until Anthony Eden, the foreign secretary, recovers from two operations. He is involved also in the Coronation preparations.

Churchill solves all his problems by burning the candle at both ends and depending on a tough constitution to ensure that he himself is not burned out in the process.

Though he is no early riser, one day in his life would tire many a lesser mortal for weeks. He may do two hours' work in bed before dressing.

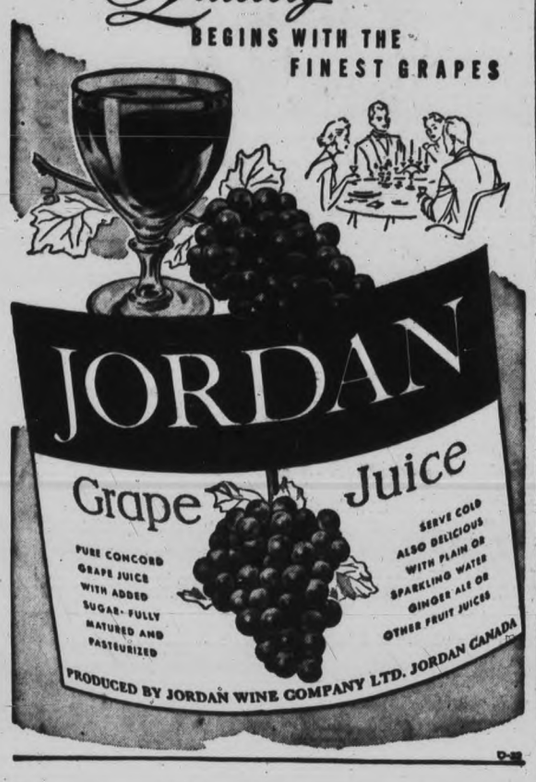
If there are no early cabinet or other engagements, the prime minister may not get up until about 11 a.m. Then he will dictate at high speed until lunch—probably roast poultry and a glass of champagne, followed by a brandy and a cigar.

Except in unusual circumstances, lunch is followed by one of his most important engagements—the short daily nap which many people believe is the chief secret of his vitality. He undresses and gets right into bed, snatching from 10 minutes to an hour.

If he is attending Parliament, he will be at work again by 3 p.m. refreshed and ready to carry on indefinitely. He does not stop for tea, but likes dinner about eight.

Over the day so far he may have smoked about three at havana cigars. His drink before dinner will probably be a whisky, and after a good meal there will be another cigar and a brandy.



Then the real work of the day begins. The prime minister is liable to work, write, confer and dictate until 2 or 3 a.m.

When he gets to bed he allows himself six hours' sleep.

High Level Of Prosperity Proves Cheering

VANCOUVER (CP)—The president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, concluding a tour from the Atlantic to the Pacific, says he found faith in a continued high level of prosperity throughout the country.

L. W. Simms of Lancaster, N. B., in the midst of a swing through British Columbia, had encouraging words for the province's big base metal mining industry when he said protectionists in the United States are fighting a rearguard action.

He expressed full confidence that the "strong sentiment in the U. S. against high tariffs will prevail."

Fresh from a meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce in Washington, Mr. Simms said discussion there indicated full business support for free trade.

"LAUD MINORITY"

Congressmen in favor of maintaining trade restrictions were a "loud minority" but it was evident that the administration plans to fight impediments in world commerce.

The subject of Mr. Simms' remarks also became a topic of discussion at the Pacific Northwest Trade Association meeting in Tacoma, Wash., recently.

The association passed a resolution expressing concern over a balance of trade unfavorable to Canada. In a separate resolution, it also advocated two-nation development of Canada's gas resources and opposed a proposed bill in Congress that would restrict the piping of gas across the border.

The association acted after Senator J. G. Turgeon, a Canadian delegate to the meeting, warned the good relations of the U. S. and Canada are threatened by the possibility of new import restrictions.

The senator said some Canadian legislators wanted to place export restrictions on nickel and asbestos, of which Canada is the greatest producer, in retaliation.

Believe Gov't Should Handle Children's Aid

TORONTO (CP)—Waldron A. Gof of Brantford, executive secretary of the Association of Children's Aid societies of Ontario, said Thursday that there is widespread feeling that the responsibility for children's aid belongs to the provincial government.

"Municipalities have been hard pressed financially and they have sought to rid themselves of every expense possible, including the children's aid bill for ward maintenance," he said at the association's annual convention.

It was clear from the daily newspapers, he said, that the municipalities have kept up a steady pressure on the provincial government to take over these expenses, "and I am not criticizing this effort on their part."

The special provincial committee studying possible changes in child welfare legislation was urged by the convention to consider amendments which affect adopted children in inheritance privileges.

Irene Annen of Toronto, chairman of the association's committee on adoption, said the present Child Protection Act provides an adopted child with no part of intestate grandparents' estate unless the child is specifically named in the will.

Married Workers Told To Stay Home

TORONTO (CP)—A London city clerk gave some blunt advice Thursday to delegates to the annual conference of the Association of Children's Aid Societies of Ontario.

R. H. Cooper told them family life would benefit if married social workers stayed at home and looked after their own children instead of running around looking after someone else's.

Puts Record Straight

TORONTO (CP)—George Ferguson, 68, was given an 18-month reformatory term Thursday for picking pockets in a hotel.

The magistrate told Ferguson: "You have been a thief for 35 years."

"No, I'd say closer to 40 years," Ferguson replied.

2 Drowned In River

QUEBEC (CP)—The bodies of Roch Boivin, 22, of Quebec and Maurice Tremblay, 26, of St. Urbain, Que., were recovered late Thursday, several hours after they were drowned in the Jacques Cartier river, near Stoneham, 20 miles north of here.

Electric Storm Spectacular, Little Damage

Ignited Barn Hydro, Phone Lines Minor Interruptions

Storm damage in the city and district was not great, according to reports received today, though it was one of the most spectacular electrical storms the district has seen in some time.

Lightning struck a barn owned by M. A. Scott, R.R. 3, Indian River, and started a fire which destroyed the building. Mr. Scott was able to save two cattle and three horses, lost a calf and between 80 and 90 chickens.

Other damage was confined to hydro and telephone wires.

The rural hydro office here had a crew of eight men working all night on repairs in the district. Damage was scattered from Reaboro east to Keene and the Warsaw road. Two poles were broken by trees, two transformers were burned out, and power was cut off for lengthy periods in Emily township, Keene, Hiawatha and along the Warsaw road.

Hydro manager Bob Aspinall said there were 30 individual trouble calls, mostly of a minor nature.

HALF INCH RAIN

Half an inch of rain fell overnight, and winds blew in gusts up to about 30 miles an hour. The main path of the storm was eastward through the area between the city and Lakefield.

The Bell Telephone offices here reported slight damage. Falling trees downed wires in two places, and rain caused harm to other lines, none of it extensive.

North of here, damage was not reported as severe, although telephone lines into Bancroft have been out of order since early today. They were expected to be repaired by mid-afternoon.

OPP Constable Jack McKendry at Apsley reported he had seen no damage to speak of. There was one tree down across Highway 28 north of Burleigh Falls, but telephone and hydro circuits had suffered no great harm.

BRANTFORD SPENDING

City council of Brantford has authorised the spending of $820,000 on storm and sanitary sewers. Mayor T. E. Winter objected that the project should be submitted to the ratepayers. The city also has to build a sewage disposal plant for which they have already set aside $600,000. Another item of expenditure is $200,000 on a 80-bed nursing home.

Reformatory At Millbrook Still A Castle In The Air

Millbrook's reformatory-to-be is still a castle in the air. Both in Toronto and in Millbrook, indications are that the Frost government is delaying the project. Millbrook reeve Dr. J. W. Wright said today he had heard there might be a delay because soil on the proposed site is unsatisfactory for some reason.

In Queen's Park, the select committee on reform institutions unanimously approved a suggestion to the Government that no more reform institutions be built on land acquired for them until the committee had reported on needs.

SPEAKING FOR GOVERNMENT

The motion was made by W. M. Nickle (PC, Kingston) and Alastair Johnston (PC, Parry Sound). The feeling was that Mr. Nickle was speaking for the Government.

The Examiner has for a week been trying to speak with the Hon. John Foote, minister of reform institutions. Mr. Foote, touring various reformatories in the province, has not been available for comment.

However, it has been reported that Mr. Foote, who favors the Millbrook project strongly, has denied that the Government plans to drop the reformatory.

The reformatory was to be a "maximum security institution"; that is, the hard case convicts would be sent there. Plans were that it was to provide treatment of psychopathic criminals, with a diagnostic centre and specialists trained in criminology.

Reported as another point favoring delay of the project was the Government's reported fear that magistrates and judges might tend to send to such a reformatory convicts that should go to federal penitentiaries.

Furthermore, dropping it would save the provincial budget $2,500,000 in capital costs.

Only word received in Millbrook came to one farmer whose land is optioned as part of the reformatory site. He was told his land might not be used. No reason was given.

Isolation Hospital May Get Use

If it were put in a state of repair, could it be used as additional facilities for Civic Hospital?

If so, how much would it cost to equip and operate it?

The property committee of the Board of Governors of Civic Hospital has been asked to try to find the answers to these questions before June 15. Until that date, the building is being advertised for sale by city council.

Acting Mayor T. D. Miller put the matter up to the board at Thursday night's meeting.

"Has the board any interest whatsoever in the hospital?" Ald. Miller asked. "The council has been offered $20,500 for it but we feel we shouldn't dispose of it hastily if better use can be made of it. It was valued at $36,000 by the assessment department in 1951 and couldn't be replaced for the amount we've been offered."

Although many doubts were raised about the possibility of the building being used by the hospital, it was suggested that it might be used for indigent patients who are chronically ill.

Dr. G. S. Cameron thought the matter should be very carefully gone into with the department of health, even though most new buildings for elderly people are of one storey.

It was decided to have the property committee investigate the cost of making the building habitable and equipping it.

Cedar Lakes Pk. To Be Opened By Harold Scott

Cedar Lakes Park, Peterborough district's public park, will be officially opened Saturday by the Hon. Harold Scott, acting Minister of Lands and Forests.

Work has been progressing on the park for more than a year. Now there is a road from Highway 28 where Little Cedar Lake touches it five miles north of Burleigh Falls into Big Cedar Lake.

The 500-acre park was designed as a place for families and groups to have picnics and outings. With much of the accessible lakeshore property in the Kawarthas taken up by summer cottages, there is little left for people without a cottage to have a picnic.

START DEVELOPING

Although there is much work still to be done in developing the park, a start has been made with the road into the second larger lake. There are many places to turn off and park and frontages has been cleared on both lakes.

Most of the work done so far has been voluntary, president Norman Gainer hopes to raise money to speed up the development of the tract. The directors are selling memberships in the project for $1 with the idea that contributors may take more than a casual interest in the park.

At the offical opening scheduled at 3 p.m. other prominent people in the county will be present: Reeve Normal Wilson of Burleigh-Anstruther townships, County Warden Ernest Leeson, Max J. Swanston, Ald. P. J. Anglesey representing Peterborough's mayor, Mrs. Fred Marshall and representatives of the three main religious groups in the city, Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish.

It is expected many residents of the county will witness the opening and take the opportunity to become acquainted with the park.

Union Claims Quaker Using Bypass Tactics

Say James Wharry Talked With Pickets Urged Direct Action

Top Quaker Oats Co. officials are trying to bypass the union to arrive at a "backdoor agreement" with their striking employees, Sam Hughes, Eastern Canadian director of the UPWA (CIO-CCL) charged Thursday night.

Mr. Hughes was making his first visit to Peterborough since the 435 production workers in this city and the 130 in Saskatoon went on strike April 22.

"The company is licked," said Mr. Hughes. "They've never had a strike before in Canada and they didn't think it would happen. They've made a mistake.

"You people don't have to worry," Mr. Hughes told a membership meeting in the Labor Centre. "You're going to be looked after financially and otherwise.

"The company thought some of you would be crawling back to work after four weeks, but the strike is now in its fifth week. Seventy-five per cent of you have jobs and the rest will be looked after by the resources of the union."

MAKING OVERTURES

"Indications are, right now, that your company, behind the scenes, is making overtures to get somebody in here to settle this," said Mr. Hughes.

He also cited two examples of what he called company attempts to bypass the union in order to deal directly with the striking employees.

He said that on Thursday James G. Wharry, vice-president and general manager of the Quaker Oats, Co., had visited the picket lines and chatted with strikers at the London St. entrance to company property and also at the main entrance, on the Hunter St. bridge.

The Eastern Canadian Director accused Mr. Wharry of making three points in his talk with the strikers: 1. That the union had been unwilling to compromise in its talks with the company. 2. After the conciliation board report the union didn't try to negotiate, and 3. The best way to end the strike is to bypass the executive of the union, pick their own delegation and visit Reginald Faryon, Canadian president, at his office.

Mr. Hughes said that when he heard of Mr. Wharry's talk with the pickets Thursday afternoon he jumped into a car—along with President William Triggs of Local 293—and raced to the London St. picket post, but Mr. Wharry had gone. They then went to the main entrance on Hunter St. but Mr. Wharry had gone again.

"That's the first time I've heard of a vice president of a company coming to a picket line and telling the strikers to pick their own committee and then come in and speak with company officials," said Mr. Hughes.

Mr. Fayron and Mr. Wharry were out of town today and could not be asked for comment.

Bill Watts, one of the London St. picketers, later gave the Examiner this account of Mr. Wharry's conversation:

"He invited me or any of the pickets to get together a delegation and go to Mr. Faryon's office in the plant and Mr. Faryon would verify Wharry's statements to us on Thursday."

WITHOLDING INFORMATION

"He told us that the negotiating committee was witholding information from the membership. He said that in talks with the

22 Degrees Chillier

The temperature of the Peterborough district dropped 22 degrees from the high point of Thursday to the noon temperature today. And citizens could feel the difference as they buttoned up for protection from the brisk breeze. The mercury was only one minor casualty in a night that brought disaster to Sarnia and Western Ontario and a spectacular display of lightning in the central part of the province.

New Ambassador Began Career In Peterborough

R. Douglas Stuart of Chicago, who has been appointed by President Eisenhower as United States ambassador to Canada, virtually began his business career in Peterborough.

Now 67 years old, he was assigned by his father, Robert Stuart, for experience on the staff of the Quaker Oats Co., in the early days of its establishment here.

Mr. Stuart is now president of the Quaker Oats Co. and vice-president of the board in Chicago. It is expected that he will resign from both those positions to begin his diplomatic duties in Ottawa.

DRAFTED BY PRESIDENT

Appointments by President Eisenhower have caused two shifts in the top ranks of the American company of the Quaker Oats. Donald B. Lowrie, who was president of the company until a few months ago, was drafted by the President as assistant to the Secretary of the Department of State. On his resignation from the Quaker Oats Company, he was succeeded by Douglas Stuart, now coming to Canada as successor to the career diplomat, Stanley Woodward, who left Ottawa last January.

Mr. Stuart has been treasurer of the Republican national committee. His transfer from the field of diplomacy will remove him from the board of Quaker Oats and also, it is expected, from the party executive.

Two Drivers Injured As Cars Crash

Bridgenorth Woman's Condition Fair; Hit During Storm

Two people were seriously injured Thursday night when their cars crashed head-on, just inside the city limits on the Lindsay highway, during the heavy downpour of rain.

Most seriously injured is Mrs. Edward Cochran, 35, of Bridgenorth, who is in Civic Hospital, her condition only fair. Mrs. Cochran's right leg is broken in two places; her left leg is broken in one place, and her scalp is badly cut.

Also in Civic Hospital is Thomas O'Donohoe, 33, of Smith St., Port Hope. He has lacerations on his face and right leg and he is suffering from shock. After his injury Thursday night he complained of chest and neck pains but at press time there were no reports on the X-ray results.

Police report that O'Donohoe was driving north on the Lindsay highway during the heavy rain that was falling about 8.15 p.m. Visibility was down to a few feet.

Opposite the Kawartha Furnace and Supply shop he collided headon with a southbound car, driven by Mrs. Cochran, who was coming into Peterborough. The impact smashed the front end of O'Donohoe's 1953-model car causing $650 damage, and another $650 was caused to Mrs. Cochran's.

The injured were taken to hospital by ambulance. There were no passengers in either vehicle.

Confusion was added to the scene because the city boundary is not clearly marked. Since the annexation of Jan. 1 the boundary has been some 6,000 feet north, at the top of the "mile hill."

Three OPP at first investigated the accident—Cpl. Fred Rawlings and Constables Don Lacombe and John Cawood. When it was realized that a mistake had been made, the investigation was turned over to Constable William G. Scott of the city police.

County Farm Notes

By HARRY THEOBALD

Approach of June Reminds Dairy Farmers of the Merchandising Set-Aside.... Hereford Heifer Calves Arrive at Norwood From Lethbridge.... Peterborough Included in the Hog Quarantine Area.... Millbrook Spring Show Wednesday, June 10.

Among other aspects of significance in the dairy industry, June is also set-aside month. For three years, Canadian milk producers have been contributing one cent a pound butterfat to a fund of their own which has been used in advertising their products.

This is a business enterprise of the dairy industry of Canada, and its scope and effectiveness depends on the sustaining spirit of the owners of milking herds. If every producer cheerfully assents to the June set-aside, the month's total could reach the national objective.

Essential to the fund's success is the co-operation of milk producers, and furthermore, the goodwill and assistance of precessors. Presumably the dairy farmers endeavour as June approaches to rekindle the interest of their members and also of the plants which receive and retail their milk. The whole procedure is optional, but it is hoped that few farmers and processing plants will be indifferent next month to the June Advertising Set-aside (one cent per pound of butterfat).

It is a proportional contribution, call it a levy if you like, although that is not an exact term because there is no element of compulsion in it.

At any rate, it is a project which farmers have to take in hand, and do their own promoting. The whole plan is their own responsibility.

WAS BEGUN IN 1950

This voluntary fund was proposed in the realization that dairy products to day have to be sold, and that the producers have to do the selling. Towards the end of 1950, the first advertisements of dairy foods appeared in newspapers, magazines, radio broadcasts and other media of publicity.

Early in 1951, the Dairy Food Service Bureau was organized, and since then has been merchandising, advertising and service division of Dairy Farmers of Canada, representing more than 400,000 afrmers. Continuing strength of the bureau will be of their own making. Its advocates are emphasizing the fundamental of producer support and processor co-operation. Somewhere in the planning there should be some agency of responsibility for recruiting the largest possible response from both those wings of the dairy industry.

The experience of the bureau, together with the results of its merchandising campaigns and the recognition of the competitive elements that are abroad today, should stimulate rural interest in its maintenance.

HAS CUMULATIVE EFFECT

It would be presumptuous to try to impress on dairy farmers the wisdom of continuing their publicity propaganda, for that is what it is. Advertising programs have to be kept active and eye-catching for the accumulative effect they carry. It means plowing in some small part of the individual's revenue to catch consumer attention, and share in the consumer's dollar. And dairy farmers have the assurance that they are offering the public one of the best food products the public buys.

Peterborough Jersey breeders will remember the selling talk they heard at one of their winter meetings. They and the other milk producers have the goods, the home market is expanding, but competitive foods and beverages are bidding for it through various advertising mediums.

Producers will be hoping, and perhaps more actively than wishful thinking, as June approaches with the month of building up the bureau treasury, to provide an adequate budget for 1953-4.

'A "BUTTER DAY"

"Missouri Ozarks dairymen, tired of hearing about "that dern oleo,' held their own 'Butter Day' here, and also sold more than a ton in less than ten hours, at 59 cents a pound.

"The dairymen of Wright county promoted the show. It drew between 2,50 0and 3,000 persons to this town of 1,025.

"In ten hours, they sold 2,400 pounds of butter. According to an inventory of the seven groceries here, only 3,224 pounds of butter were sold during the entire year of 1952."

RETAILER SUMMONSED

Then there was the report from Hull this week that eighteen storekeepers of that Quebec border city have been summonsed to appeared in the Hull magistrate's court (today) on charges of selling margarine.

"By law margarine may not be sold in Quebec. The cases against the 18 storekeepers, Crown Attorney Avila Labelle, QC, said, were conducted by Quebec Provincial Police officers from the Montreal headquarters, and the charges were laid last Friday. The law provides a $200 minimum fine upon conviction."

More Delaying Rain

No sale at the opening of the Belleville cheese board, the outbreak of hog cholera in western Ontario , and Thursday night's heavy rain, were of special interest to district farmers this week.

Peterborough county, as already reported in the news Thursday, is included in the cholera area of quarantine comprising 29 counties in western Ontario. The dividing line appears to be between Hastings county on the east and Peterborough-Northumberland. Shipments of live hogs from the western section is temporarily prohibited.

Indemnity for loss of infected hogs that are ordered destroyed and buried is $50 for purebred animals and $30 for ordinary commercials.

Hogs from eastern counties that are usually shipped to Montreal, may be diverted to Canada Packers during the coming week.

One breeder in the Perth county area is reported to have lost 54 pigs. A news bulletin from Ottawa says hog cholera is not transmissible to human beings.

That soaking rain Thursday night will halt further seeding this week. It is late now for spring grain anyway. Decline in the acreage of oats in Lambton is estimated at 15 to 20 per cent under last season's sowing.

Agricultural representatives in their crop reports this week swing into superlatives such as:

Huron: "Fall wheat, old meadows, new seeding and pastures have been making tremendous growth" . . . Northumberland: "Early planted grain, peas, potatoes and meadows look excellent." . . . York: "Wheat and grass crops are making excellent growth."

Heifers At Norwood

Norwood Fair board's Hereford heifer calves arrived from Lethbridge, Alta., Monday and were distributed Friday afternoon to the boys and girls who are buying them for club purposes. They were obtained from the McIntyre Hereford Ranch, one of the best known in the west.

G. A. Brethen, president of the board, reports them a fine thrifty-looking lot, and unusually quiet and contented after roughing it through a long winter on the range.

"They should make a very impressive showing when they are brought out Thanksgiving Day at Norwood Fair, and shown by their young owners," Mr. Brethen said.

✦ ✦ ✦

"Yellow Rocket"

Designers of aircraft might well have taken a leaf from the book of Yellow Rocket for here is a week that spreads as if jet propelled.

A few years ago considered a "mere nuisance" farmers are now realizing that it plays a real part in lowered production, and, as a result, a lower return per acre.

Known variously as winter cress or St. Barbaras Herb, the weed usually appears as an impurity in grass or clover seed. First warning of the unwelcome visitor is usually towards the end of May.

"Chemical control is not practical in a clover field, but on road-sides or waste places 24D at 6 or more ounces of acid per acre will control Yellow Rocket in late May or early June," says C. H. Kingsbury, of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. "When clover is in the mixture, early ctuting is the most effective method of stopping the spread of seed. Yellow Rocket cut in the first week of June and cured for hay or ensiled doesn't get a chance to go to seed. If only a few plants are present, hand pulling not only removes the rocket, but reduces the waist line."

"Good drainage, through fall and spring cultivation will rapidly clean up Yellow Rocket. If permitted to go to seed however, mature seeds are dropped by the end of July and in September a second wave of Yellow Rocket seedling are present to plague the unhappy farmer."

Silver Seal Holsteins

The latest Holstein to qualify for a Silver Seal Certificate of longtime production by producing over 150,000 lbs. milk is Cedar Dale Man-O-War Dorothy, owned by Cedar Dale Stock Farms, Oro-no, Ont. In ten lactations, Dorothy has produced a total of 155,664 lbs. milk containing 5,315 lbs. fat. All of her records except that in two-year-old form has been made on twice-a-day milking and she has four times qualified for the 305 day division.

Dorothy's largest individual record was made in six-year-old form when she gave 607 lbs. fat from 18,173 lbs. milk. Her latest lactation was as a 14-year-old, she producing 478 lbs. fat from 14,970 lbs. milk. A daughter of the XX bull Man-O-War Dictator, Dorothy has been classified as "Good Plus" in Selective Registration.

A new addition to the select group of Holsteins that have qualified for the Silver Seal class by producing over 150,000 pounds of milk is Baroness Snow Creator, bred and owned by E. Oyler, Port Perry. Her ten lactation lifetime total is 150,786 lbs. milk containing 5,724 lbs. fat, average test 3.80 per cent butterfat. Baroness has made all her records on twice-a-day milking, five of them having been in the 305 day division with her latest made as a 12-year-old.

Baroness has one *Excellent and one Very Good daughter, these being the highest and second highest rating attainble for type respectively.

Campbellford Milker

Glenkindie Opal Champion, a member of the Holstein herd of E. L. Anderson, Campbellford, was grand champion at the Northumberland Black and White Day in 1948 and reserve grand champion at the same show in 1944 and 1949. Born in 1940, she had her first calf in 1942 and has just recently dropped her eleventh calf. "Opal" has been on continuous R.O.P. test throughout her lifetime and to date has a nine lactation total of 141266 lbs. milk containing 4662 lbs. fat, all made on twice-a-day milking. Her largest individual record was made as a nine-year-old when she produced in 365 days 21694 lbs. milk containing 708 lbs. fat.

June Farm Survey

Forms for the June survey of crops and livestock are being mailed by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to farmers and will be in their hands about June 1st.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture stresses the importance of this survey and urges all farmers to complete the form and return it in the postage free envelope supplied. Widespread response from all districts and farm types is required for a good measurement of the farm situation.

Statistics on agricultural production are essential in drawing up policies to improve and further the interests of farmers. Farm organizations use this information in their presentations to governments and commisisons on behalf of the farming population. Businesses and services that deal with farmers require up-to-date figures on production trends in planning their future operations and many farmers themselves use such information in their farm management decisions.

Individual replies are strictly confidential and are not related to taxation of any kind. Figures are grouped for areas and farm types to get county and provincial estimates which will be published.

Conferenc At O.A.C.

Annual conference of the Ontario agricultural representatives will be held at Guelph May 26-29. Frank C. Paterson and his assistant, Ken Best, are going for this agricultural review of the year, discussion of extension work and plans for the future. Important in the program is the survey of trends in farming.

Weanling Pigs $12

Weanling pigs are still quoted at $12 to $15 across the province. Lambton quotes that spread, Victoria says demand is strong at $12; Lanark and Muskoka also report that price.

Few Seats Left For Bus Trip Ohio-New York

Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative, reported Wednesday that 27 farmers have signed up for the trip to Ohio during the first week of June. Several others are listed as virtual certainties, and there is bus accommodation for 37.

"We have 10 or 12 prospects, and from that number we may get enough men to fill the bus comfortably," Mr. Paterson said.

Those who have definitely declared themselves as going are:

Walter Thorn, Robert Armstrong, Frank Moorehead of Lakehurst, Roy Sanderson, Rick Robinson.

George Beebe, Earl Petrie, Reg McMullen, Sam Comrie, Walter Bowles, Bruce Graham.

"This is the kind of educational trip our own Crop Improvement Association has been thinking about for years," Mr. Paterson said. "Most of the details are arranged, including a visit to Louis Bromfield's Malabar Farm. That is more than a show place, and apart from that we have lined up some worthwhile calls in Western Ontario, including the Lawrence Kerr farm.

Crop Improvement directors want to make this a memorable event, and we would like to have a full complement of 37. Farmers who have been thinking of going are assured of good company. June weather for the four days from Wednesday the 3rd, returning Saturday the 6th. Expense of the trip is $50."

Applications are still being received at the Department office, and it is hoped that the last seven or eight to decide on going will telephone or call at this weekend. However, the list is still open through next week.

Application of any city men interested in this outing will be considered, Mr. Paterson said. The cost is the same to everybody.

NORLOCH COLANTHA KAY, owned by C. E. Downing, Norloch Farm, Beachville, Ont., was acclaimed a year ago as the Canadian Champion for lifetime production of both milk and fat with all records made in the 305 day division. Now she has added still another to her list of 305 day tests to place her still further ahead of all competition. In nine lactations all in 305 days she has produced 163,689 lbs. milk, 6,065 lbs. fat, average test 3.71 per cent butter fat. Kay promises to add still further to her laurels for she is again started on another record, is milking 75 lbs. daily, and her apparent youthfulness belies her 14 years of age.

Kay was continued on test beyond the 305 day limit in one of her lactations so that her complete official lifetime record is 167,403 lbs. milk and 6,211 lbs. fat. Kay was not placed on test during her first two lactations which makes her perforamnce all the more remarkable.

211 Boys And Girls Enlist In 10 Peterborough Clubs

Ten 4-H Clubs in Peterborough county have a membership of 211 girls and boys, as reported this week by Ken Best, assistant to F. C. Paterson. Seven clubs last year counted 152 members at the beginning of that season.

A new Norwood district division has been organized with four clubs, and Lakefield High School 4-H Forestry Club has a roll call of 51 students, boys and girls. Their major project for this year was the planting recently of 15,000 red pine seedlings at Nassau. That undertaking is an earnest of ten years' extension for a total planting of 150,000 trees.

The Norwood groups are: a 4-H Calf Club of 25 members; grain club, 11; swine club of 18, and tractor club of 14. Mr. Best commented on the larger proportion of boys in the Norwood area clubs. This is the first year of the 4-H expansion into the eastern section of the county, and with the interest of a new group of Junior Farmers, and also of the Norwood Agricultural Society, prospects encourage the expectations of sound establishment for the future.

Support of parents is an essential influence, and Mr. Best said material evidence of home direction has already been manifested.

In the west Peterborough townships the 4-H Clubs are: two dairy calf clubs each of 22 members, boys and girls; one beef calf club, 22 members; grain club, 16; and swine, 10.

Some of the club members of 1952 have graduated, and will be missing from this season's affairs.

Mr. Best said that the final measure of Club success is the number of members who persevere to Achievement Day, a quality of 4-H Club spirit which depends largely on the young folks themselves.

Doctor Laughs At His Farming In Post Story

Rural communities ought to encourage some urban retreat to the country just for the fun of it as suggested in a Saturday Evening Post story entitled: "So you're going to retire and take up farming".

It was written by Dr. Joseph H. Peck of Auburn, Calif., a widely known obstetrician in the Pacific coast state. With considerable chortling at his experiences as a farmer, in which he soon realized that he was a "blunderhead", he advises elderly novices to forget farming if they are much dumber about it than he was.

Retiring to the land for the sunset years of life revealed to Dr. Peck how little he knew of the realities of farm skill, work, management and special knowledge.

A few quotations at random humorously warn city folks of some of the pitfalls and traps that lie ahead of them if they buy a farm and expect to do some work on it themselves.

Dr. Peck bought a cow, "but not knowing that a milk cow is supposed to have a slender girlish shape, got to worrying about the way her ribs stuck out, and stuffed her with protein supplements to get her fat. The resulting digestive upset cleared up after several calls by her medical adviser, and the moral seems to be that cows are like their masters—keep them a little hungry and they feel better. Later, when one of my cow's teats was hard to milk, I read up on the situation and tried out one of those fancy teat spreaders. That brought on mastitis, which took about a year to cure."

"Next I built a barn to put the cow in, making it two stories high, with the haymow upstairs. Deciding soon after that the barn would be nice for a workshop, I built a lean-to shed outside of it to put the cow in. So now I pitch my hay up into the mow and when the cow needs a meal, go upstairs and pitch some down."

"My farm's first calf was born down in the ravine, and sometimes I wished he'd never been born anywhere. At first sight he appeared to be so weak that I carried him all the way up the hill in my arms. When I set him down to unlock the gate, he ran like a race horse back down into the ravine.

"After a week of getting milk shower baths while trying to teach the calf to drink out of a bucket, I started for the telephone to have a chat with the butcher, but before I got out of the pen, the calf rushed over and drank all the milk without spilling a drop.

"Realizing what a sucker I had been, taking fifteen minutes to get the milk from the cow, whereas the calf drank it in one, I turned the cow into the calf's pen and let the offspring do his own milking. After the calf had emptied two of his mother's faucets, I showed the cow a pan of mash, and she kicked the calf into a corner and came out with a rush. This routine cut the milking chore in half.

"I acquired half a dozen turkey poults and raised them in a brooder. After a neighbor's dog killed one, I moved their house into the back door yard for safety. Apparently thinking I was their mother, they refused to go out into the field and eat grasshoppers unless I went along.

"When alone, they ate the buds off the carnations. Whenever a neighbor dropped by, they climbed all over the car, scratched the paint with their big feet, and left other evidence of their attention.

"We ate one of them for Thanksgiving, and the rest sat in a row on the porch rail, peering through the window at their sister being served. They made such mournful sounds that nobody enjoyed the dinner. So, I sold them and bought a new turkey, a total stranger, for Christmas. We also had a lamb we planned to eat, but when we named her Lily Bell that made her a member of the family, and then we couldn't eat her."

Kawartha Co-Operative Medical Services paid last year to members $9,960 in hospital costs.

Their financial statement for the year shows accumulated money invested and a patronage dividend fund of about $3,000.

The Services were sponsored by the Peterborough Federation of Agriculture during the presidency of W. W. Dawson who has been succeeded by Henry Sharpe. Their development as a co-operative is one of the accomplishments for which the Federation may claim chief credit.

It is one of the activities of the Peterborough county farmers that is usually overlooked when the usefulness of the Federation is mentioned. Originally, Co-Op Services was planned to provide insurance against hospital costs. Promotional efforts brought in members and eventually a Peterborougn city group joined Kawartha as a body.

To medical and hospital costs, the Kawartha is now preparing to extend their benefits to the surgical field. The project aimed at insurance at cost. Claims have been met and as mentiontd above payments totalled last year nearly $10,000.

The record of Co-Op Services is mainly in the social field. Apart from its invested capital, the success of insurance enterprise is also reflected in the amount of nearly $3,000 available in patronage dividends.

Annual meeting of Co-Op Medical Services will be at the Public Library Thursday May 28. It will be preceded by a dinner meeting of directors and leaders to be addressed by Paul Meehan, Ontario field secretary for medical co-operatives. Members are requested to mark the date of this meeting at the Public Library for their attendance.

Appointment of Harold Lewis as county fieldman has been a substantial help in expansion of the service.

Chieftain Pabst Ann, All-Canadian heifer calf 1952, raised on Ful-O-Pep by W. D. Shore, St. Thomas, Ontario

Grow Better Calves Faster!

Gentlemen:
Our senior heifer calf, which won her class and was Reserve Junior Champion at Western Fair, London, and Royal Winter Fair, and was Junior Champion at the Elgin County Black and White Show at Aylmer, was fitted for the show on Ful-O-Pep Fitting Ration and Calf Meal Pellets.
We particularly like the way this combination of feed brings our calves along. We start out with Calf Meal Pellets and gradually swing them over to Fitting Ration as they grow older.
(Signed) W. D. Shore,
R.R. No. 6,
St. Thomas, Ont.

Dairymen who put their calves on Ful-O-Pep Calf Feeds report that calves grow faster, with stronger legs, and strong, straight tops. They find their calves are larger and more rugged with plenty of dairy temperament and no excess fat or thickness.
Calves take to Ful-O-Pep Calf Feeds . . . develop keener appetites . . . greater resistance to disease.

Halifax Making Little Headway On House Problem

By JACK BEST

HALIFAX (CP)—There was little jubilation at recent ceremonies marking completion of the first 17 units of a 161-unit housing project here. Instead, the occasion brought sombre reflection on conditions that are still growing worse instead of better.

Since 1939 about 7,000 families have moved into this city, but only 2,000 new homes have been built while 300 have been demolished. It's estimated that it would require 5,400 more dwellings to relieve the shortage entirely.

Alderman Byron Hatfield, chairman of the city's slum clearance and public housing committee, says there is immediate need for 1,500 new homes. Based on a bureau of statistics finding of 3.5 persons to the average Halifax family, that means more than 5,000 of the 85,000 population are living in sub-standard dwellings.

Rents are at high levels. Some persons are paying $65 a month for two rooms and rates of $100 or more for apartments are common. House rents are extremely high.

EXPANSION DIFFICULT

Unlike many other cities, Halifax, on a peninsula, cannot do much in the way of expansion. It has been suggested that the city branch out into adjacent county areas, but suburban communities oppose such a move.

One possibility will doubtless be exploited as the new harbor bridge nears completion. An abundance of good, cheap land is available on the Dartmouth side, and it's expected that with the elimination of the harbor bottleneck there will be a big exodus from the city.

City manager August Debard predicts that Dartmouth, already a bustling town of 20,000, will eventually become the "bedroom" of Halifax.

Halifax had its housing troubles during the war, when the population of 60,000 nearly doubled overnight. The impact then, however, was cushioned by the hope that with the end of hostilities the city would revert to its normal size.

This has not materialized. Following a partial readjustment in the immediate post-war years the population began to rise again, and more people are coming in every day. More than 350 families, unable to obtain accommodation at reasonable cost, are being housed in city-administered emergency shelters.

Fire Chief F. C. MacGillivray has repeatedly warned that the shelters constitute a dangerous fire menace.

SLUM PROBLEM

Medical and health authorities warn that slum areas breed disease. Psychiatrists and law enforcement officers say slums contribute to emotional instability and juvenile delinquency.

In the forefront of groups trying to improve the situation is the Halifax and district Ministerial Association, which at a recent meeting set up a six-man committee to prepare an all-out campaign.

Each member of the association is being asked to forward a report containing recommendations for action, and these will be sifted by the committee to formulate a project.

Already 587 applications have been received for houses in the 161-unit Bayers road development, where the federal government is paying 75 per cent and the city 25 per cent of the $1,640,000 cost. The Halifax housing authority is selecting tenants on a point system based on investigation of the applicant and his present accommodation.

RENTS PLANNED

Rents for the three- and four-room houses, geared to family income and number of children, average $40 a month. Accommodation is available only to those families with incomes between $1,500 and $3,240.

A limited dividend company has also entered the field, and with a 90-per-cent loan from Ottawa, recently completed a $225,000 project of five- and six-room dwellings with an average monthly rental of $57. It expects to get the green light soon on a further 32-unit development.

$300 Settlement Ends Court Case

A settlement in which Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cutmore of RR 1, Omemee, were given $300 — enough to cover their out-of-pocket expenses incurred by an injury to Mrs. Cutmore—was reached Thursday in Supreme Court.

Mrs. Cutmore, a 23-year-old housewife, spent 12 days in hospital with leg, arm, neck and head injuries after being in collision with a car on the night of Jan. 29, 1951, at George and Dublin Sts. She and her husband had started to cross from the southeast to the southwest corner of the intersection when she was either struck by or ran into the side of a car driven by Adrian Devlin, of 474 Park St. N.

Mr. Cutmore leaped to the centre of the road to avoid being hit. After the car passed he saw his wife lying injured, partly on the curb and partly on the road.

The couple had asked for $2,250 damages altogether. Evidence was heard Thursday but a settlement was reached before the plaintiffs' case ended. The Cutmores were given $300 and the case was dismissed by Mr. Justice McLennan without costs.

Robert Carley was counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Cutmore and W. J. Arthur Fair, QC, was counsel for Devlin.

Hailstones Damage Niagara Ground Crops

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Ground crops such as tomatoes and early apricot trees in the Niagara district suffered severe damage from big hailstones and high winds in Thursday night's storm, agricultural officials said today. No estimate of loss was given.

They said fruit trees generally suffered little damage because the storm came midway between blossom and fruit periods. Had it come later, the fruit crop would have suffered heavily.

Development Of Utilities In City Outlined To Kiwanis

The development, history and the various phases of the Peterborough Utilities Commission duties, were outlined by W. Howard Powell, general manager of the commission Thursday to the members of the Kiwanis club.

The Peterborough Utilities Commission originated in the year 1902, when the corporation of the city purchased the Water Department from private ownership for the sum of $230,000.00.

Later the people by public vote elected to have the waterworks department operated on a separate self-supporting basis under the provisions of the Municipal Waterworks Act. Under this original organization the department was administered by a three-man commission, one of whom was the mayor, as a representative of the council.

The commission functioned in this fashion for one year, during which time, T. F. Matthews, W. H. Moore and Mayor T. H. G. Denne were the commissioners.

Mayor Denne was so appreciated on the commission, that, when his term of office expired, the corporation had a special bill passed in the Provincial House, eliminating the mayor as an ex-officer of the commission. Mr. Denne then carried on as an elected member.

That bill was the first and only one ever passed in the province, and made Peterborough unique, in that no member of council is represented on the commission to this day.

The functions of the Utilities Commission under the Public Utilities Act is to administer the operations of the Utilities under its control; to construct necessary works for the supply of the Commission; to collect revenue for such services as are rendered; to make disbursements to meet all current operating costs, and to turn over all operating surpluses to the corporation.

PERMANENT STAFF

A manager and staff is usually employed to carry out the policies it dictates. The commission can not buy or sell property nor issue debentures for its operation. These processes remained vested in the corporation. It is usual for a commission to operate on the revenue it collects. In some cases departments are subsidized by the corporation to reduce tax rates.

The electricity department, however, cannot use excess profits to reduce tax rates, unless it is specially set out by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission.

From the original Water Commission has grown the present Utilities Commission embodying the electric and gas departments. In considering the history and the progress of the commission, "I will outline it by departments," said Mr. Powell.

A water system of any size was first inaugurated in 1882, when a pump-house and a distribution system were constructed by private capital. The original pump-house was located at the site of the present Auburn Dam, and at low water level the original intake pipes, at the west end of the dam may still be seen.

In 1893 the pumping station was moved to a point 300 feet upstream of the present pump-house. This building still stands; and is now used as a storage and animal house for the city zoo. This was the pumping station taken over by the corporation in 1902, when it purchased the system.

The original population served by the commission was 11,000, and the pumpage was one million gallons a day.

In 1916, Peterborough installed chlorine water-treating equipment. While this field was led in Canada by the city of Ottawa, Peterborough was the second city to adopt this means of water sterilization, as a safeguard against typhoid.

FILTRATION

While chlorine sterilizes water, it does not remove the material in suspension; and Peterborough had for some time the problem of a very turbid water during the spring and fall run-off periods. In 1922 the present rapid sand water filtration plant was completed. Again Peterborough was a leader in this field. Other large cities had slow sand filters, but this city led the field in Canada with rapid sand filters, a type of filtration which is now used universally.

Peterborough was again a pacemaker in 1948 when it installed the first residual chlorine recording machine in this country. This unit maintains a constant record of the free chlorine concentration in the water, a measure of the water's purity.

In 1951 investigations were embarked upon, on the advantages of fluordinization of the water. But at that time the press and the Medical Health Officer did not consider it necessary, and nothing was finalized, said Mr. Powell.

ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT

Private enterprise operated the city electric system from its inception in Peterborough in the 1880's until 1914, at which time the corporation purchased the distribution system from the Peterborough Light and Power Company and vested operation with the commission. At this time the power was still purchased from the Light and Power Company. In 1915 the Ontario government bought the Light and Power Company along with a group of other municipal electrical and other assorted utilities, which at that time included the gas plant. This utility group was turned over to the Ontario Hydro organization to operate and run. Peterborough then received its power from the Hydro Electric Commission and has continued to do so.

In the electric utility field, Peterborough has indeed been a pioneer. Peterborough was the first city in Canada to install a street lighting system in 1884, which ran from a water-driven generator located in the dam at the foot of London St.

The present system series multiple street lighting system employed in Peterborough was one of the first of its kind installed. This system has been modernized in the past eight years by the installation of new luminaries.

Early in 1938 the carrier current waterheater controller was the first to be installed in a city in Canada. This control system sends a signal over the transmission lines, which operates a switch in the consumer's basement, turning the hot water off or on, depending on the signal. In this way, power may be sold to the consumer at approximately half the metered rate, because such power can be turned off during periods of peak demand, the basis on which the commission is charged for its power.

The growth of the electric load in Peterborough has been enormous. From a total load of 4,000 horespower in 1920, load grew on an average of 150 horsepower a year, up until 1935 when it reached 6,400 horsepower. Then from 1935 to 1944 the load grew to an average of 600 horsepower a year, or four times the previous rate. From 1944 the load has grown at the rate of 2,200 horsepower per year.

The commission faced a serious problem during 1945. A population jump had to be dealt with. This meant a new substation of the same type as then in use and meant another staff and consequent high operating costs. An addition extension to the Aylmer Street substation meant large line losses in transmitting power to remote sections of the city.

The commission chose to install completely automatic self-contained substations close to the loads to be supplied, and so installed one of the first unit type electric substations in the country, on Romaine St., in 1946. Since that time three more stations of that type have been installed. As a result substation capacity of the electric department has doubled in less than six years.

This year a contractor is busy installing a new electric metal-clad switchgear in the Aylmer St. station. The installation of this equipment will make the station one of the most up-to-date stations in the country, and will eliminate most chances of an accident such as that which occurred in the fall of 1950 when one man was seriously burned in an explosion.

The first gas distribution franchise was granted to Peterborough in 1869. This was to a privately-owned company. Operation was in the hands of private capital until 1916, when it was purchased by the Ontario government along with another group of utilities in the Trent Valley area, and its operation entrusted to the Hydro Electric Commission. In 1929 the Hydro Commission put the department up for sale, and the corporation purchased it and turned it over to the Utilities Commission to operate.

When gas first appeared in Peterborough it was used for lighting only, and later cooking became the mainstay of the gas load.

Electricity soon supplanted gas as a source of light, but had more difficulty in surpassing gas as a source of heat. The gas originally distributed was illuminating gas. This was made in the gas plant located at the foot of Simcoe St. The process consisted of passing steam over incandescent coke in a closed generator, then adding oil. The hydro carbons in the oil added color to the gas flame and additional heating value.

The quick upswing in the post-war prices of gas nearly destroyed the business. The local commission solved that problem in 1948, by converting the gas plant from carburetted water gas to a Propane-air-mixture and material costs remained the same.

This new gas plant installed in 1948, was the second of its type in Canada. The first being in Brockville.

In 1951 the commission decided on another step in increasing the early power of the gas department. They installed propane bottle filling facilities and the commission now does the bottle filling for the major portion of gas sold in this area. This bottle filling business was the second of its kind to be operated in Ontario by a public utilities commisson.

In closing, Mr. Powell described the Utilities Commission as a monopoly, which by necessity all citizens must deal with. Despite the fact that it is a monopoly, it supplies its services at a lower cost than can be supplied by any other source.

By virtue of monopoly it is handicapped in ascertaining public preference as to how its services are to be supplied. The commission must feel the pulse of the community through public contact, to determine reactions to their work.

At all times the commission must be considering the future, and preparing the system for what consumers will want, by obtaining new equipment well ahead of the time it will be required for, without causing financial strain on the community.

For the commission in the past has fulfilled its duties to its consumers most adequately, and the future shows no change in this procedure.

Jury Finds Man Innocent Of Perjury

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Cecil Smith, 52, was found innocent of perjury by a Supreme Court jury Thursday.

Smith, central figure of a police commission investigation into his charges that constable Gilbert Robitaille of the Windsor police had accepted bribes in liquor cases was acquitted of committing perjury in the police commission hearing.

An 11-man jury, short one member who became ill during the trial, deliberated less than two hours.

Smith was charged specifically with perjuring himself by stating that he paid Robitaille $100 on March 21, 1952, to keep himself clear of a liquor charge.

Robitaille testified, before the police commission and at Smith's trial, that he was in Florida at the time. He produced Florida parking tickets and postcards he had sent from Florida, and another couple who accompanied him on the trip also testified.

Robitaille, promoted to sergeant after the police commission investigation cleared him, was a principal Crown witness against Smith.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Harry White, MP for East Middlesex, Thursday night wired the acting prime minister asking that the tornado which hit parts of Western Ontario be declared a national disaster and that part of a fund of $1,500,000 left in the hands of a special committee of government be used to aid stricken areas and in particular the city of Sarnia.

Try Giving U.N. Soldiers Little Dose Of Shakespeare

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. defence department has completed a noble experiment: It has tried to find out if Shakespeare, played by a company without stars, will go over with front line troops.

The company, Players, Inc., did it the hard way. It gave the boys in Korea one of Shakespeare's least known plays, "Love's Labor's Lost."

The company has just flown in from Hawaii, and two members of the cast—Patricia Barnett and Henry Sutton, who also was company manager—were ready Thursday with this report:

Yes and no.

It's pretty well agreed that a soldier who has read only comic books isn't curling up with "Hamlet" now that he has seen "Love's Labor's Lost."

NOT BOOED

"Still," Sutton said, "we weren't hooted off the stage either."

The company had its worst time at Bulldozer Bowl, which is only two miles from the front as the crow, or bullet, flies.

"They thought we were a song and dance outfit," Miss Barnett said, "so they had a tiny stage set up."

"Our scenery wouldn't begin to fit," Sutton said. "Much of it we couldn't use at all."

"The men brought their rifles," Miss B. said. "It's disconcerting to be giving Shakespeare and hear some soldier clicking the bolt on his rifle."

"Right in the middle of it," Sutton said, "men began leaving by the truck load. We didn't find out until later that an alert had been sounded."

Reeve Wants All Property To Be Taxed

TORONTO (CP)—Reeve Oliver Crockford of Scarboro township urged Thursday that all property within a municipality be taxed, whether it is a church or a cemetery, a hospital or school or if owned by the provincial and federal governments.

He told the annual convention of the Ontario Mayors and Reeves Association that "we must demand elimination of tax exemption on all property requiring municipal services." He said services must be paid for and the only equitable way this can be done is by levying normal taxes on the same basis on all property.

He said the federal government has recognized the injustice of tax exemption on its property by paying grants under certain circumstances.

The association decided to hold its 1954 convention in Windsor. The invitation was tendered by controller Ernie Atkinson of Windsor.

Conacher Chosen Liberal Candidate

TORONTO (CP) — Lionel Conacher Thursday night was chosen Liberal candidate for Toronto Trinity in the next federal election at a stormy nomination meeting. Mr. Conacher, voted Canada's athlete of the half-century, is the present member of the riding in the Commons.

After 90 minutes of charges at a packed meeting, punctuated by thunder and lightning, Mr. Conacher was nominated over two other candidates.

He received 229 votes against 39 for Hugh Plaxton, who represented the riding from 1935 to 1939, and two for Fred Hamilton, former Toronto controller.

Both Mr. Plaxton and Mr. Hamilton charged that the meeting was packed with supporters for Mr. Conacher and that credentials for delegates had not been handled properly.

Iron Ore Survey

GENEVA (Reuters)—The United Nations economic commission for Europe says deposits of iron ore in Canada total 20,000,000,000 tons compared with about 45,000,000,000 in Russia. Results of a study released here said Minnesota's Mesabi iron range will be nearly exhausted within 2 years. It added, however, there are "practically unlimited quantities" of iron ore in the same region.

Ottawa Still Has Heavy Pork Surplus

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government is still carrying a heavy load of canned pork in its cupboards.

The latest estimate is 68,000,00 pounds, an official said Thursday. The government sold about 30,000,000 pounds since the first of the year—at a loss of about $6,000,000.

The government started the pork-canning venture as a price-support move. It cost the government about 60 cents a pound to buy and can the pork. In an effort to rid itself of the surplus, the government has been selling it at about 40 cents a pound.

Says Probation Would Aid Teen-Agers

TORONTO (CP)—Col. Ernest Green, the Salvation Army's national prison secretary, said Thursday he thinks probation would have a particular benefit for teen-agers who run afoul of the law.

Testifying before the provincial legislature's select committee on reform institutions, Col. Green said he firmly believes probation can rehabilitate a large percentage of first offenders without the necessity of the stigma of a jail sentence. It would give them guidance in their formative years which they had lacked in their homes.

He also said television helps keep the family together.

Col. Green told the committee he believed the broken home was the main cause of juvenile delinquency and that television would bring about a change.

On the basis of studies to date, the committee today decided to set up a sub-committee to study probation, parole and rehabilitation.

The common thermos flask was invented by Sir James Dewar, Scottish physicist who died in 1923.

Mine Shaft Burns Blame Short Circuit

TIMMINS (CP)—Fire, believed to have started when lightning short-circuited an electrical cable, Thursday night burned the No. 1 shaft at Delnite mine, seven miles southeast of here.

It occurred during a severe electrical storm.

Damage to the shaft, used for ventilation and as an escape route, is expected to run into thousands of dollars.

Stench gas, danger signal for miners, warned 80 men working underground and they came to the surface to help Timmins firemen fight the blaze.

Dep. Chief Paymaster Col. E. T. Pointon Dies

TORONTO (CP)—Col. Eunton Thomas Pointon, deputy chief paymaster of the Canadian Army overseas during the Second World War, died in hospital Thursday.

Born and educated in Owen Sound, he served in the First World War and later took a degree as a chartered accountant. He was on the reserve at the outbreak of the Second World War. In 1945, he was appointed deputy paymaster general in the department of national defence, Ottawa. He retired after seven years to become a partner in a stock brokers' firm.

Seamen Reach Wage Terms

MONTREAL (CP)—A mutually satisfactory agreement, avoiding a West coast strike by seamen, was reached Thursday.

A joint statement to this effect was issued by Canadian National Railways, Canadian Pacific Railway, Union Steamship Company and the Seafarers International Union (AFL).

It said common ground was reached on terms of settlement of the wage dispute and that the strike deadline, set for Saturday midnight, has been withdrawn and the agreement is subject to ratification by members of the union.

Terms of settlement, involving a wage increase were not announced.

The SIU sought a monthly increase of $50 on a basic rate of about $188. Crews of about 30 vessels, most of them passenger ships, were involved.

Canada Presents Brief For Freer World Trade

By FORBES RHUDE

VIENNA (CP)—Canada's belief in freer world trade for the greater prosperity of all peoples was brought today to a world-wide audience by D. P. Cruikshank of Ottawa.

Cruikshank, president of the Canadian council of the International Chamber of Commerce, made his appeal in a speech prepared for delegates to the international chamber's 14th congress. It was the Canadian council's principal pronouncement in the week-long meetings of the international body, which end Saturday.

Speaking for the Canadian council, Cruikshank asked for "an assault on economic nationalism." He indicated that he believes freer world trade will come about; but said, in effect, that the United States has a key responsibility in making it possible.

He approved the record of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade signed in Geneva in 1947, despite some breaches. He disapproved of government control "of the movement of goods from producer to consumer." Speaking particularly of primary production, including wheat, whose sale by Canada is handled by government authority, he commented:

"We feel that the free market is the only true index to reflect the supply and demand for primary products and that the prices established in such markets are the only reliable prices.

"Government buying and selling of wheat has cost the Canadian taxpayer many millions of dollars and the farmer has still received a great deal less money for his wheat than he would otherwise have done had he sold in the open market.

Suspend Testing For TB Cattle Inspect All Swine

TB testing of cattle has been suspended in the counties that are under hog cholera quarantine, Dr. G. R. Penhall, VS, informed the Examiner today.

"Our department has ordered us to inspect all swine in our area as a precaution against any spread of the disease," Dr. Penhall said. "It is a means of vigilance, and we should be able to call at ten to fifteen farms a day in this round of special work."

Dr. Penhall is district supervisor for the health of animals branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture. The new directive to discontinue, temporarily, testing for bovine tuberculosis was received this morning.

It entails farm to farm calls in the Penhall area of Peterborough, Victoria and Halibutron couties. Durham county comes under inspection from Bowmanville, and Northumberland from Belleville.

KNOW IMMEDIATELY

"We are to devote our time to examining hogs on the premises as a means of trying to ensure that, if there should be any outbreak of cholera, it will be immediately diagnosed," Dr. Penhall said. "If necessary, and also if they are available, we have authority to engage the local veterinaries for their assistance."

Dr. Penhall has two assistants here and a part time veterinary at Lindsay. This county is one of the 29, most of them in western Ontario, to which quarantine has been applied.

The boundary is between Peterborough and Hastings. "One of our jobs is to see that pigs from here are not allowed into Hastings or any other part of the east," Dr. Penhall said. "We have to do the best we can to see that this does not occur."

Ordinarily the volume of hogs comes from the east in into Peterborough for delivery at Canada Packers.

Psychiatrist Cleared On Seduction Charge

LONDON (Reuters)—A medical tribunal today cleared psychiatrist Sidney Linton, 33, of an accusation by a shapely blonde patient that he hypnotized and then seduced her on "numerous occasions."

Miss Myra Metcalfe, 27, presented the accusation Thursday before a disciplinary committee of Britain's General Medical Council. The committee decided the charges had not been proved and dismissed all charges of improper behavior. The psychiatrist denied he had ever hypnotized or seduced Miss Metcalfe.

Minden Man Fined $300 As Bootlegger

LINDSAY (ENS).—A Minden man, Harold Ruth, was convicted in Haliburton county court Thursday of keeping liquor for sale and fined $300.

Magistrate W. R. Philp imposed the fine after Ruth, defended by Col. R. I. Moore, Lindsay, pleaded not guilty to the charge laid by Constable Alex Edwards, Minden OPP.

Ruth's fine was $300 and costs or two months in jail. His house was also made a public place for one year. The charge was laid May 3, alleging that for at least three months before that time, Ruth had kept liquor at his home for sale.

Two other cases were tried by Magistrate Philp. James Laundrie of Haliburton, whose car was involved in an accident on the Kinmount-Minden road on April 25, when the vehicle was wrecked completely and Laundrie hospitalized, was fined $10 and costs for careless driving.

In the third case George Otto of 683 Greenwood Ave., Toronto, was found guilty of careless driving and fined $15 and $20 costs or 20 days following an accident on May 10.

Not Satisfied With Replies Says Hodgson

LINDSAY (ENS). — C. W. Hodgson, MP, for Victoria and Haliburton, has revealed the contents of a reply he received to questions he put before the House before the end of the recent session concerning the uranium deposits in Haliburton county.

In asking the questions, Mr. Hodgson, a Conservative, lashed at the government policy that had held up development of uranium mining in the county since 1933 and scored the secrecy which surrounded dealings with prospectors and miners in the region.

His questions asked the government whether it, or any department, had been asked permission for the exportation of uranium ore from Haliburton county; by whom; whether uranium ore from in and around the county had been delivered to the Department of Mines for assay, what the results of the tests were and whether they were reported to the parties making the deliveries.

MINISTER'S REPLY

This week he received a reply from the Hon. Geo. Prudham, Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys. It said in part: "I am advised that the results of the tests have been reported to the companies and individuals who sent in the samples. This department has given the same type of service to those sending in samples from the Haliburton area as is given to those sending them from other areas."

The radio-active occurences are large in pegmatites. "A report on pegmatites was included in the reply, and said in part: "Bulk samples from one property where pegmatites contained columbium and tantalum as well as unranium gave the following results: Uranium, a trace at 0.21 per cent—a concentrate test showed that a concentrate containing 7.16 per cent uranium 308 and 4.98 per cent columbium and tantalum oxides could be prepared but this was below the requirement of a ten per cent concentrate for sale of uranium concentrates. The amounts of columbium and tantalum were evidently too low because the option on the property was dropped."

Mr. Hodgson indicated on receipt of the letter that he was still not satisfied with the answer and claimed that the report generalized too much, and failed to give specific answers to his questions as noted.

Fire Rangers Fighting 11 Forest Blazes

Give Advice On Candidate

PARIS (AP) — A parade of French political leaders trooped to the Elysee Palace today to give President Vincent Auriol their advice on candidates for the thankless job of France's premier.

The palace talks were a well-practised routine for Auriol. This is France's 18th post-liberation political crisis and the 14th that the president has had to resolve in his 5½ years of office.

Some political leaders fear the current crisis may be of fairly long duration since France was without a government for 16 days before Mayer took over Jan. 8. It was generally expected, however, that a new government would be in office by June 17, when the French premier is scheduled to meet Prime Minister Churchill and President Eisenhower in Bermuda for Big Three talks.

Forbid Display Of Union Jack

CAPETOWN (Reuters)—Prime Minister Daniel Malan's republic-minded government plans to enforce a law on Coronation Day forbidding display of the Union Jack in most parts of Africa.

Defence Minister Francois Erasmus said today the government will stick with existing regulations which permit only the Union of South Africa flag to be flown on ceremonial occasions except in Natal province where the Union Jack may also be displayed.

The law also provides that "God Save the Queen" may be played only at parades attended by the governor-general.

Erasmus issued his statement following threats from the mayor and city council of Capetown to boycott the coronation Day military parade unless the Union Jack is displayed and "God Save the Queen" sung.

Find Four New Cases Of Hog Cholera

OTTAWA (CP)—Four new cases of hog cholera have been uncovered, all within the general quarantine area of Southwestern Ontario, Dr. Thomas Childs, veterinary director-general, reported today.

The diseased animals were traced back to the community sales barn where the originally infected hogs were purchased, Dr. Childs said.

"Some 6,000 hogs passed through that sales barn in Wellington county and we've got to trace every one of them," he said in an interview.

The new cases were uncovered in the counties of Perth, Lincoln and Wellington. Perth is the only new county involved, bringing the number of counties infected to eight and infected farms to 13.

"One thing still in our advantage is that there have been no farm-to-farm infections so far reported," Dr. Childs said. "There may be some. We've got to expect that, but so far we haven't had any."

Not all of the 6,000 hogs which passed through the Wellington county sales barn during a four-week period may be infected, said Dr. Childs. But the agriculture department could take no chances. Each must be traced and examined.

Kintore District Has Heavy Storm Damage

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Reports reaching here today from the Kintore district, 20 miles northwest, indicate heavy damage to houses, barns, crops and communications throughout the area as a result of the tornado which struck southwestern Ontario.

The tornado cut a half-mile wide swath through Oxford county. Buildings and trees were toppled. Farms outside the half-mile stretch were relatively untouched.

Mrs. Arthur Land, a resident of the Kintore district, was taken to London hospital with what was believed to be a fractured shoulder after being trapped in the wreckage of her home. Two houses and a barn on the land property were levelled.

The farmhouse and barns belonging to Mrs. Sophie McArthur were left in shambles. James Woods lost his barns and silo.

Senator Orders British Answer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Karl Mundt (Rep. S, D.) said today "Britain owes the free world a reply" to testimony that British-owned ships have transported Chinese Communist troops during the Korean war.

"I am not inclined to wait too long for them to volunteer it," Mundt added in an interview, "and the answer had better not be 'yes, so what?' "

Mundt is a member of the Senate investigations subcommittee headed by Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.). A staff investigator told the group Wednesday that British-owned ships of the Wheelock Marden Company of Hong Kong carried Chinese Communist troops on two occasions during the Korean war. The investigator, Robert Kennedy, said there have been other instances.

At Hong Kong, F. H. Horman-Fisher, the firm's manager, denied Thursday that Wheelock-Marden vessels carried troops for the Reds. He said three of the firm's vessels have been seized by the Communists and it no longer owned a fourth mentioned as engaged in the Communist trade.

Mundt said he will propose that the state department demand comment by Prime Minister Churchill or the British foreign office if there is no official statement within "the respectably near future" on the troop-carrying question.

FBI Waiting For Convict

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—The federal bureau of investigation says it will soon take into custody a man jailed in Canada and wanted in connection with burglaries that netted about $100,000 from swank Long Island homes.

John Roche of the Buffalo FBI office, said Thursday that Clyde Arnold Guhr, 37, is nearing the end of a prison term in Kingston, Ont., for housebreaking and passing bad cheques.

Roche said Guhr probably would be deported by Canada early in June and would be met at the border by U. S. marshals with a federal warrant charging interstate transportation of a stolen car.

Roche said the Long Island burglaries were committed in 1946 and 1947. At the time, the agent said, Guhr was posing as a bowling alley proprietor.

Roche said Guhr jumped $5,000 bail after arraignment on the auto theft charge and turned up a year later in Toronto, where police charged him with housebreaking and passing bad cheques.

Striking Tire Workers To Return To Jobs

HAMILTON (CP)—Striking tire workers at the Firestone plant decided at a meeting today to return to work Monday pending settlement of their grievances.

The strike in the tire department has shut down a large section of the plant over the last two days and arose over complaints about rates on machines and other working conditions.

The negotiating committee of Local 113, United Rubber Workers, will begin talks with the company on Monday after the men resume work.

GROVE CITY, Pa. (AP)—Residents of nearby Sandy Lake today let out a collective sigh of relief. Mrs. Joseph Sealer has had her second baby in eight days.

Ever since baby No. 1 arrived, townsmen have been waiting to hear that No. 2 was born. Twins were expected but only one child was born.

The family physician said the mother had a double pregnancy and a double birth but that the babies are not twins technically since the mother has a double uterus.

Labor Disputes Disrupt U.S. Production

DETROIT (CP) — Production schedules slumped today as labor disputes left 121,000 auto workers idle in the United States, 77,400 of them in the Detroit area.

Ford Motor Company was affected by a strike in a supply plant at Canton, O. A strike at the Budd Company's body-stamping plants in Detroit made 8,000 workers idle there and forced Chrysler to send home 39,000 workers.

Studebaker was faced with the prospect of laying off more than 23,000 workers in the U. S. and Canada because of a parts shortage arising from a strike at the Borg-Warner gear plant at Muncie, Ind., where 4,800 men were off the job.

Sutdebaker issued a closing order effective next Thursday for its plant in Hamilton, Ont. It also planned to halt truck production and cut auto production by half in South Bend, Ind., and Los Angeles.

The strike at Canton left 29,600 workers idle at Ford plants in the Detroit area. However, Ford of Canada said at Windsor it could operate at least until the first week in June despite the Canton strike.

In addition to the 77,400 workers idle in Detroit, 8,500 employees of the Willys Motor Company remained off the job at Toledo, O., 4,500 Nash Kelvinator Corporation workers were idle in Kenosha, Wis., and 2,500 were idle at General Motors in Danville, Ill. Kaiser-Frazer, with 800 already idle, said it would have to halt auto production June 1, laying off another 2,500 because of parts shortages.

Council Of Women Work Wide Variety Of Projects

Local Council of Women meeting Thursday, though not largely attended, was one of the most important meetings yet held. Several items of civic interest were on the agenda for discussion, having already been discussed at an executive meeting. Enough members were present, however, to decide on the action to be taken on each.

Following investigation of the Bear Creek park area in the newly annexed part of Smith Township, a letter was prepared by Mrs. C. C. Pilon and Mrs. W. T. Fanjoy which it was proposed to send to the city clerk, the chairman of parks and the chairman of housing and town planning for the city and the recreation commission. The letter points out that the ladies are anxious to have preserved as a park this area which is so familiar to school children, especially of Queen Alexandra school, and asks that the Council of Women be included in any future meetings regarding this matter. On motion of Mrs. H. Tremaine and Mrs. F. Merrett, the latter is to be sent as drafted to the four persons mentioned.

President Mrs. A. W. Nelson advised that a reply had been made to the letter from Mr. Maurice Ketcheson regarding the ward system, read at last meeting, stating that the Council will study the matter further before taking any stand.

The executive's recommendation not to increase the donation of $10 voted toward the Lady Aberdeen memorial, to be erected in the Peach Garden on the Manitoba border, was approved. This sum is the minimum amount asked for by the National Council which is planning this honor to the founder of the Council of Women.

As the 40th anniversary of the Council is to be celebrated this fall, the executive made the suggestion that a conference consisting of morning, afternoon and evening sessions be held, possibly on October 15, date of the regular October meeting. It is proposed to have several of the Provincial Council chairmen present and to have at the evening meeting a special speaker on housing for elderly people, which this Council has been studying the past year. A motion to plan for such a conference was put through by Mrs. Wm. Addyman and Mrs. Karl Simpson with the suggestion that planning be left to the sub-executive and the housing committee, with power to add to their numbers as necessary.

Mrs. Edward Chambers, chairman of education, reported on a survey which she had undertaken, with the aid of the president, to find out the number of mentally and physically retarted children in this city, with a view to investigating possibility of establishing a school for them. The names of 11 children who will not be accepted into any public school are already on hand and four of the homes were visited to see the condition of the children and to talk with the parents about what might be done.

Miss M. Green, the home teacher in Peterborough, was interviewed regarding this project and she was found to be very interested and expressed the feeling that something can be done.

The meeting gave the education chairman and committee full power to continue with this survey, on motion of Mrs. A. B. Cunningham and Mrs. A. Moldaver, and proposed that some members accept an invitation to visit the Toronto schools for retarted children given them by the Parents' Council of Toronto which has already sent a letter outlining the situation there.

The motion included a suggestion that the committee interview Mr. D. A. Loomis, city truant officer, and also Dr. T. E. Currier, president of the Mental Health Association.

The committee asked that anyone knowing of any child who might be helped by such a school report the name and address to them.

Attention of the executive had been drawn to the need of municipalities having power to legislate speed limits in school zones and Mrs. Pilon and Mrs. Merrett met with Constable Donald Mackay, safety traffic officer of the city regarding this. They were told that 137 motorists who had not heeded a request to slacken speed at the school crosings had been interviewed in the past year and that 22 of them had not been co-operative about it and had been interviewed by the police chief. However, the police had not power to act because the speed limit is set at 30 miles per hour in the city.

Mrs. Nelson brought this matter before the Provincial Council meeting at Orillia last week, and at the request of the meeting put through a resolution asking that power to set a speed limit be given the police department in each municipality. This resolution will be sent to Queen's Park by the provincial chairman of laws. The meeting approved Mrs. Nelson's action on this.

Council ladies were stirred by the report from city council meeting this week regarding a tender of $20,500 for the Queen Mary Hospital and the meeting moved to send a letter immediately protesting consideration of accepting this sum for the building. The ladies feel that the building should most certainly not be sold under the assessment values, which is $36,000 or $38,000, and feel that it, like private property in the city, should be sold at a higher figure than that. The letter of protest will ask for an audience with the city council to present the women's opinions.

Mrs. F. C. Marshall had inspected the hospital building and had interviewed a member of the Civic Hospital Board of Governors regarding its use and she reported her findings. She suggested that the Local Council should decide what the building could best be used for and make this recommendation to the city fathers at the time of the requested audience. She felt that the possibility of using it as a home for elderly people not needing hospital treatment should be investigated thoroughly.

A committee of Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Pilon, the public relations chairman, and Mrs. A. A. McIntyre, chairman of town planning was named to go into this matter in a motion put forth by Mrs. Addyman and Mrs. W. C. Steinkraus.

It was announced that Mrs. J. M. Beatty has been appointed chairman of child and family welfare and Mrs. Phyllis Kingdon the chairman of health.

Reports of the annual meeting of the Provincial Council held at Orillia were given by Mrs. Steinkraus, Mrs. Merrett and Mrs. Nelson.

Service Work Carried On By '38 Club

The '38 Club which is celebrating its 15th anniversary with a tea and summer fashion show at the YWCA this evening, is a business girls' club which was formed in 1938, and one of its rules is that membership is limited to 38.

Purpose of the club, when first formed, was to send needy children to summer camp and this was done for about ten years. Each summer, two to four children were fully clothed and equipped if necessary for a holiday at the YWCA Camp Inglestane.

The club financed swimming lessons for polio victims for a few years until the Rotary Club realized the benefits to the sick people and took this project over.

At the moment, the club is helping the "Y" to raise the allocation for the World Service Fund which has increased considerably this year.

Social activities have included entertaining boys from camp during the war and hostess work at the canteens, dances, formals, fashion shows, bridg and teas. Guest speakers and craft classes have taken care of the educational aspect of regular programs.

Meetings are held the first and third Wednesday of each month, at the Y, and during the 15 years some 160 girls have enjoyed the fellowship. The '38 Club girls have given leadership on many occasions in the Y and have assisted other groups willingly whenever needed.

At the organization meeting in November 1938, Miss Mary Wallace, now Mrs. Sidney Mitchell of Peterborough, was appointed president.

Succeeding presidents have been Miss Grace Sargent, Miss Jean Walters, now Mrs. Stanley Cann; Miss Flora Metcalfe, Miss Margaret Edmison, now Mrs. Brown; Miss Leona MacMillan, now Mrs. Clarke; Miss Lena Dewart, Miss Betty White, now Mrs. Gillespie; Miss Roberta Deyell, now Mrs. Spears; Miss Dorothy Vels, now Mrs. Locklin, Miss Marion Pogue, Miss Ailwen Jones, now Mrs. E. Downing, Miss Elaine Alder, now Mrs. Petrie; Miss Hazel Wilson and Miss Geraldine Dunford.

First French Lady Senator Tireless Political Worker

by CHRISTINE SIROIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—French Canada's first woman representative in the Senate, Mrs. Marie-Anna Beauchamp-Jodoin, is known as a dynamic social and political worker, a tireless defender of the rights of women.

For more than a quarter of a century, the causes of women and of the Liberal party have been championed by the matronly, stately woman whose youthful appearance belies her 71 years.

"I am not ashamed to tell my age, because I do not feel my years," she said in an interview after Prime Minister St. Laurent announced her appointment to the Senate prior to his departure for the Coronation.

Although she once had ambitions to become a lawyer, she never considered the possibility of a Senate appointment. Now that she has the appointment, she plans to carry to the floor of the Senate her fight for recognition of the rights of women.

THREE OTHER WOMEN

There are three other women members in the 102-seat chamber —Senator Muriel McQueen Ferguson (L—New Brunswick), Senator Cairine Wilson (L—Ontario) and Senator Iva Falls (PC—Ontario).

Mrs. Jodoin said she will take a general interest in all problems coming to her attention, but will limit her activities to the "feminine domain."

"There are enough men in politics to defend other causes," she said. "I have worked to assure family allowances for mothers and I will continue along those lines in the Senate."

Member of a family of 15, Mrs. Jodoin has one son and three daughters. She is particularly proud of her seven grandchildren.

Daughter and wife of a lawyer, Mrs. Jodoin confessed that she once hoped to enter the legal profession. However, she found she was born too soon. In her day, women were not allowed to attend university.

HAD SPARE TME

Her social and political activities date from 1926 when her children were all of school age and she found spare time on her hands.

Now she is Quebec president of the National Federation of Liberal Women of Canada and member of so many organizations she hesitates to name them in case she might overlook a few.

She is founder of the 27-year-old Wilfrid Laurier Club, an organization devoted to the political education of women. She was awarded an MBE for her work with the prices board during the Second World War.

DOROTHY DIX:

Baby-Sitters Should Not Have Guests Of Other Sex

DEAR MISS DIX: My wife's sister and her family live across the street from our home and for fifteen years they have been constantly borrowing from us. Every day it's a cup of sugar, some flour, coffee, butter, and so forth. The sister seldom pays back, and my wife gets angry with me if I complain. They have enough money, but seem to use us to cut down on their grocery bills.

W. G.

A POSSIBLE CURE

ANSWER: Would it bother you as much if the borrower were your own sister rather than your wife's? I doubt it. At any rate, since the situation has progressed over so long a period of time, and your wife objects to any mention of it, I think you'd better resign yourself to the situation. If your wife wanted to stop the raids on her larder, she could do so quite simply by going to her sister the next day and borrowing the food back. A few trips of this nature would end all difficulty, but if your wife doesn't want to do it, I don't think it's worth risking the harmony of your home to insist upon her taking steps.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Six months ago I met a boy who is in the Air Force. A month later we became engaged; then he went away for a while. He'll be back this summer, but we can't marry until he is out of service, which will be for three years. When I met him I was engaged to another boy—now overseas—and have two rings. Should I wait for the boy in the Air Force? I'm 18, he's 19.

SYLVIA M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Are you becoming a collector of engagement rings? You like these boys only as friends, and are most reluctant to give up dates while they are away. Why bother, then, in becoming formally engaged to any boy? Wait until at least one is home for good, then perhaps you can make up your mind.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: A boy of fifteen acts as my baby-sitter, and I'd like to know if he should be allowed to bring his girl friend along to keep him company while he's here. Would it change matters if the parents of the boy and girl approved of it? This problem is purely theoretical at present, but has been the subject of discussion in our group, and I'd like your opinion.

MILDRED A.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The baby-sitter's employer is the boss of any situation like this, and his opinion should set the rule. Some people permit baby sitters to have company of the opposite sex, others do not. My personal opinion is that it should not be permitted, especially if the sitter is very young—as in this case. Company of the same sex might be permitted, within reason, and if the young people behaved properly; that is, didn't play the radio or television too loudly, didn't over-raid the refrigerator, etc. Incidentally, I can recommend a very fine pamphlet for the use of baby-sitters and their employers. A self-addressed, stamped envelope will bring you its name.

DEAR MISS DIX: My boy friend and I have been having many arguments because he goes with other girls. He gave me a friendship ring, and consequently I don't think he should date other girls.

FRAN

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Better return the ring until the young man makes up his mind whether he likes you enough to forego other dates. I judge that you are both too young for steady dating, and suggest that you go with other boys.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Some people can be too trusting. A young girl works in my place of employment, and every night after work she meets her sister's husband and they go out. Although I've told the girl's people about this, they won't believe me. How can people be so blind?

L. O.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Since the girl is only a fellow worker of yours, I think you are rather overstepping bounds in setting yourself up as her keeper. Your own conclusions are only suspicions, and it is definitely up to the girl's sister, and her parents, to safeguard her morals; there's nothing you can do about it.

Readers' Friday Column Conducted By Mary Moore

QUESTION: ...I would appreciate your help...being convener for our Home and School coming dinner I need help in knowing how much to buy, serving 25 people our menu will be: Baked Ham, cold potato salad (containing tomatoes, salad dressing and celery too), jellied salad, celery, radishes, pickles, olives, rolls and butter, tea, ice cream and cookies. How large a ham is needed for 25 people and how much potato and jellied salad and ingredients...Mrs. D. R. M.

ANSWER:

HAM: If you serve a 3-oz. slice to each plate an 8 or 9-lb. boneless and skinless ham is sufficient. To be quite safe and to have a few second helpings buy a 10-lb. boneless and skinless rolled smoked ham.

POTATO SALAD: One gallon—4 Imperial quarts—serve 25. This allows a little more than a 6-oz serving per plate. To make this a little more generous prepare 18 cups well-packed cooked, cubed potatoes and 10 or 12 cups of the other ingredients you intend to use, including the dressing. You should include some chives or a few green onion tops in your potato salad, to suit the popular taste.

JELIED SALAD: Three Imperial quarts will allow a little more than a 4-oz. serving per plate.

RELISHES are usually counted out this way: allow 2 of each per serving. So if you have 50 olives, 50 pickles, 50 pieces of celery there will be plenty.

ROLLS: Three dozen will allow one each plus 1 dozen extra for those who would like 2. Butter: 1 lb. will cut into 40 or 50 "pats".

TEA: One gallon freshly brewed tea (4 Imperial Quarts) provides about 27 6-oz. cups. Make 1½ gallons if you intend to offer second cups. One ounce good tea makes 3 quarts.

ICE CREAM: One gallon will serve 25 generously.

COOKIES: Provide 2 each if medium-sized.

QUESTION: Yours is a most enjoyable column and I heartily endorse all past praises you have received...I wanted to try this out for the reader wanting Bread Pretzels but have been laid up and simply cannot, so here it is, with fingers crossed. Maybe you will do the testing:

BREAD PRETZELS 5 cups all-purpose flour, ½ lb. butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons anniseed or caraway seed, 1 yeast. Prepare yeast per directions on package. Cut butter into flour. Add yeast and aniseed, then mix with enough water to make a stiff dough. Let rise for 2 hours. Roll then cut into sticks or desired shapes about ½-inch thick. (These are not as thin as pretzels.) Bake on an ungreased sheet in a 400 oven until brown. After they have been baked put them all on one pan and put them back in oven which is turned off and leave for several hours or until it cools off. I think this must be the secret of their "keepability"... the nearest translation I can give for them from Syrian to English would be Damascus cookies or Sticks...consider this a fan letter.

ANSWER: Thank you. I hope you are feeling much better and all shooting pains have gone from your back by the time this is in pring. I also hope the reader who was asking for the Bread Pretzels sees this.

✧ ✧ ✧

QUESTION: We have tried your Chocolate Ice-cream made with skim mink powder and my family thinks it is by far the best ice-cream they have tasted. It is so wonderfully creamy and has such a nice chocolate flavor. What I would like now is recipe for strawberry or raspberry flavored skim milk ice-crream, and vanilla skim milk ice-cream, or perhaps you would be able to send me a basic recipe using the skim milk powder and then I could make the other flaxors such as the above and banana too....Could you give the calories contained in ½ cup of this ice-cream in relation to the regular ice-cream made by dairies.—Ruth D.

ANSWER: I hope you saw the column for May 13 which contained recipe for Vanilla Ice-cream with skim milk powder. It calls for 1 cup heavy cream. Substitute 1 cup crushed slightly sweetened fresh strawberries or raspberries or crushed unsweetened very ripe bananas for the cream to make the other varrieties you desire. If you do not want the cream in the vanilla ice-cream substitute it with an additional ¼ cup skim milk powder and ⅞ cup water.

One-quarter of a pint brick of commercial ice-cream contains approximately 200 calories. Same quantity of skim milk powder ice-cream contains about 175. You see the sugar content is high and commercial ice-cream— unless a very good grade—seldom conains cream.

Inland Facilities Hindering Live Lobster Shipments

By JOAN BARBERIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The handling and transportation of live lobsters has improved to such an extent in recent years that successful shipments now are made regularly across the continent.

However, the federal fisheries department reports that development of inland holding facilities has not kept pace, and difficulties associated with holding live lobsters hundreds of miles from the sea have hindered marketing.

Lobsters now are usually stored in air in iced containers. Under these conditions lobsters will survive for a few days but are usually sluggish in appearance and not attractive for display purposes. If the holding period is extended the lobsters tend to weaken and many die.

To be on the safe side live lobsters should be purchased, or if already boiled, be sure to get them from a reliable source. The meat 'turns" very quickly once the lobster is dead.

In a circular recommended by the Atlantic biological station of the fisheries research board of Canada, a simple, inexpensive wooden holding unit is described in which commercial quantities of lobsters have been kept alive and active for several weeks in aerated, artificial sea water.

Bostonians have for years been some of Nova Scotia's best customers when it comes to lobsters. The following recipe for lobster a la newburg comes from a Boston cook book with a few assists from a French chef in Toronto.

Ingredients: One 2-lb. lobster boiled. One quarter cup melted butter. One tablespoon sherry and one tablespoon brandy. One third cup of 35 per cent whipping cream. Two egg yolks slightly beaten. Salt, cayenne, grated nutmeg

Slice lobster meat in half-inch thick pieces; saute in hot pan with butter for three minutes. Add liquors, cook one minute, add cream, season to taste and add egg yolks.

Stir until thickened and serve with toast or puff paste points. Serves four.

The French chef says he rarely stirs anything, but shakes the pan instead. However, it probably takes the expert hand to shake a pan of lobster a la newburg without turning it into lobster a l'apron.

See No Danger Of Epidemic

TORONTO (CP)—Health Minister Phillips of Ontario said today there is no danger of an epidemic in the Sarnia district as result of Thursday night's tornado.

He said:

"No serious damage was done to either the waterworks or the sewage system. There is nothing to jeopardize the health of the people of the Sarnia district as a result of the tornado."

Dr. A. E. Berry, sanitary engineering director for the department, was in Sarnia when the tornado struck. He made his report to the health minister this morning.

company the negotiating committee had demanded the minority report or nothing. They had refused to compromise.

"We have always been ready to meet the company," said Mr. Hughes. "Negotiations began in August, 1952, and they continued for five months before the parties went to conciliation. At no time did Mr. Wharry or Mr. Faryon find time to negotiate as they have every other year.

"I think agreement could have been reached months ago if Mr. Faryon and Mr. Wharry had come into negotiations. Instead we dealt with Mr. Ash and Mr. Ingram."

Mr. Hughes also accused Mr. Ingram of trying to split the 130 strikers in Local 418, Saskatoon, from the 435 strikers in Local 293, Peterborough. He said Mr. Ingram was in Saskatoon last week, talked with the strikers there for some time, and "tried to break the strike by making a separate deal."

ASSURES STRIKERS

Mr. Hughes, who came to Peterborough primarily to look into the financial position of Local 293, reiterated that the strikers will be looked after.

"Nobody is going to go hungry and his family won't go hungry. Nobody is going to lose his home; we'll see that the rent's paid. Blue Cross and PSI are looked after. You don't have to worry."

Unions all across Canada are chipping in to help finance the joint Peterborough - Saskatoon strike, he said.

He drew loud cheers when he said that the workers wouldn't go back till they got a 40-hour, five-day week, with a basic wage of $1.39½ an hour, similar to the Maple Leaf and Robin Hood Mills in Port Colborne. He added that there are eight other contract issues that also have to be decided.

Declares Differences Only Surface Ripples

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies of Australia said here today that differences of opinion between the United States and the countries of the British Commonwealth were merely "little breezes on the surface."

Menzies, first Commonwealth prime minister to arrive here for the Coronation, said there is "not one point" of "fundamental disagreement." He warned of the dangers of "periodic whipping up of alleged antipathies between Britain and the United States," and said he was "still surprised at what can be made out of a few remarks."

Scarcity In Midst

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP)—New Zealand claims to have the world's finest trout fishing, but visitors complain they can't get a trout meal anywhere. Sale of trout is strictly prohibited to preserve the sport and keep commercial interests from wiping out the trout.

Rare Bird, Unknown To Science, Lives In Remote New Zealand Fiordland; Discovered On Recent Expedition

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

INVERCARGILL, N.Z. (CP)—A bird unknown to science came out of the forest in New Zealand's Fiordland and announced its existence to a visiting scientist.

The bird, a species of wren with very feebie wings which relies mainly on its legs, had never been seen before. It was discovered by Thane Riney, an American biologist attached to the wild life division of the New Zealand department of internal affairs.

He was leading an expedition to study the little-known fauna of Fiordland, the wild, rugged and uninhabited region in the extreme south-west of New Zealand.

FRIENDLY TYPE

"Actually the bird discovered me," he said. "I was standing on a rock when the bird, a friendly little thing, walked out of the scrub. It came right up and looked at me."

The bird's wingspread is extremely short and members of the expedition found that it could hardly fly at all. It has very powerful legs and when trying to fly makes a spring of about three feet into the air. But it does not stay in the air long and often cannot manage flights of 40 or 50 feet.

Fiordland has yielded some surprising finds in recent years. Not long ago an exploring party discovered thriving colonies of the notornis, a flightless bird about the size of a turkey, which had been thought to be extinct for half a century.

The same party that found the new bird also found living specimens of the Alpine rifleman, a small bird which had not been seen for nearly 50 years. It was last spotted in 1905 by Lord Ranfurly, who sent a specimen to the British Museum.

Ornithologists suspected this bird might be living in remote uninhabited areas, but for all practical purposes it has been considered extinct.

These finds of unknown or "extinct" species in Fiordland lead scientists to think that living specimens of the moa may yet be discovered in this almost unexplored area. If so it would be one of the most startling discoveries in ornithology. Many species of moas roamed New Zealand in prehistoric times, ranging from huge birds somewhat resembling an ostrich, but larger and with far heavier legs, down to smaller species only three or four feet high.

The bones of these moas are frequently found in caves and swamps but they are generally believed to have died out shortly after the coming of the Maoris to New Zealand more than six centuries ago.

There are, however, fables among the Maoris of mao hunting in remote areas up to comparatively recent times and some authorities place considerable faith in these reports. They think that in some wild and rugged corner of Fiordland not penetrated by man because of the sheer mountains and thick forest, last survivors of the species may still be living.

Normal School Closes, To Open July 1 As College

Peterborough Normal School heard its last valedictorian Friday afternoon before becoming Peterborough Teachers' College. Commencing July 1, it loses the 45-year-old title, assuming its new one and a new curriculum of both one and two-year courses.

At closing exercises, Sister Moira gave the valedictory while prizes were awarded to two of the year's outstanding students.

The Prince of Wales Prize, donated in 1861 by HRH the Prince of Wales, was awarded to Erma Burris, a graduate of Madoc High School.

The McLean Prize, donated in 1856 by H. McLean, was awarded to Robert W. Darling, of Kingston.

MRS. TURNER RETIRES

In addition, Jerry Edwards, of Brockville, on behalf of the student body, presented a gift to Mrs. H. C. Turner, Dean of Women and instructress in home economics, who recently announced her retirement. Mrs. Turner joined the staff of the school in 1937. She will retire to Toronto.

About 25 per cent of the student body were released Friday while the remainder will stay to write examinations.

Not a great increase in students is expected at the school next year in spite of the additional two-year course. There were 143 this year.

Students with Grade 12 education will be able to take the two-year course while Grade 13 graduates will, as usual, take one year courses to their certificates.

Knew Conditions Right For Tornado

TORONTO (CP)—Weather forecasters said Friday night they knew Thursday morning weather conditions were such that a tornado might occur in southern Ontario but they decided against issuing a general warning because it might create panic and disrupt normal activities unnecessarily.

They said it is impossible to predict where and when a tornado will strike.

15,000 Flee Homes In South As Louisiana River Floods

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP)—A sleepless weatherman warned today the crest-swollen Calcasieu river would keep pouring flood waters another four or five days through this city and eastern outskirts where 15,000 persons fled their homes. The flood-crippled area, with hundreds of homes in backwater up to window level, counted damage at $10,000,000.

Week-long floods throughout Louisiana have caused a loss estimated at more than $100,000,000 and at least eight drownings. No casualties were reported here, but residents were advised to get typhoid shots.

While the creeping backwaters swirled through one-third of this south-west Louisiana city, the waters spilling into low-lying neighborhoods appeared to be levelling off, but not falling.

A decision was expected on whether to relieve conditions by dynamiting holes in the east-west highway. The road, built on an embankment in swampland, dams the south-bound flood waters.

Orange, Tex., an industrial city of 10,000 some 35 miles southwest of here on Highway 90, was threatened by the rising waters of the Sabine river which divides the two states.

Weatherman Paul Cook said, "Lake Charles will just have to sit here four or five more days with this flood at or near its peak."

He said an immense amount of southward flowing water was still piled up in miles of swamplands north of the city.

Pinay Or Bidault Seen As Premier

PARIS (Reuters)—Two former premiers, Antoine Pinay and Georges Bidault, were reported to be the top possibilities today as President Vincent Auriol continued his search for a man willing and able to form a government.

Observers say the first task awaiting the new premier will be to reconcile foreign policy differences between right-wing Guallists and the Popular Republicans in order to gain wider support than Mayer had.

"Letter Bomb" Explodes In Belfast PO

BELFAST (AP) — A "letter bomb" exploded with a loud bang in Belfast's main post office today. There were no injuries but police immediately began a search of the mails that netted six similar packages.

Police also were investigating an explosion that destroyed a mail box Friday outside the post office at Kilkeel in County Down. The charge apparently was placed by Irish republican sympathizers protesting plans for celebrating the Coronation.

The six northern counties of Ireland are part of the United Kingdom despite Southern Ireland's claims that they should be incorporated into the Irish republic.

FIND OTHER BOMBS

The letter bombs found today were addressed to prominent Belfast residents and city officials. All had been mailed in boxes in the Belfast district.

The bomb which exploded consisted of an ordinary envelope containing a piece of magnesium and a rubber container filled with acid. When the acid ate through the rubber it set the magnesium alight.

Belfast officials expressed fear that the bombs might signal a terror campaign similar to that waged many years ago by the Irish Republican Army as a part of the Irish campaign for independence from Britain. At that time, a flood of similar explosive packages plagued post office officials in Britain.

Siamese Twins Buried

INVERNESS, N.S. (CP)—The Wyrwas Siamese twins, who lived for 33 hours, were buried Friday in a home-made casket. Hundreds attended the funeral for the twin boys born Tuesday to a 19-year-old mother, the wife of garage mechanic Max Wyrwas.

Egypt's Press Scores U.K. Civilians

Britons Continue To Pack Up For Mass Evacuation

CAIRO —(Reuters)— The Egyptian press today joined with the government in assailing Britain's advice to her civilians to get out of Egypt as part of a "war of nerves."

Meanwhile Britons preparing for an early return home went ahead with their packing, despite an official Egyptian assurance that all foreigners would be fully protected by Premier Mohammed Naguib's government.

The British government gave the advice to leave this week after several Egyptian leaders threatened a "bitter battle" to come, and shooting incidents in the Suez canal zone flared up again.

PLAYING WITH FIRE

The newspaper Akhbar El Yom said today: "Churchill is playing with fire. The instructions . . . are intended to create fear. . . to cause foreign capital in Egypt to be withdrawn."

The newspaper Al Misri said Cairo sources viewed the British move as "part of an organized campaign to spread unrest in Egypt."

The first groups of British civilians are scheduled to leave by air during the week-end. "Operation Packup "continued today, and schools prepared for their early closing so that children can leave with parents.

In Port Said, British troops were kept in their barracks after a British soldier was stabbed to death and another wounded in the town's main street. Egyptian police arrested several suspects.

Help NATO Meet Shortage Of Ammunition

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will start this fiscal year to help meet a NATO ammunition shortage described here Friday by Gen. Matthew Ridgway as "very serious."

The retiring supreme allied commander in Europe flew in from New York to "pay my respects" to the Canadian government, to talk with the cabinet and defence officials and to renew the pleasure of years of Canadian fishing.

In a press conference in Rockcliffe Airport's waiting room, the man who soon will lead the U.S. Army hammered again at the theme that NATO has gathered "very great momentum" now and it would be folly to slow it down. Russia's overtures, he said, remain mere words without deeds to back up their peaceful tenor.

SERIOUS DEFICIENCIES

He was asked about a recent report by a U.S. congressional subcommittee saying that the Western alliance has little ammunition or fuel to back up its forces in Europe and that there isn't nearly enough of either to make up minimum stocks for 90 days fighting.

The general said there are "very serious deficiencies" both in fuel and ammunition. He didn't elaborate.

Canadian officials reported later that Canada's $324,000,000 mutual aid program for helping NATO allies calls for a start on substantial shipments of ammunition this fiscal year and continuing into the following year and possibly after that.

Bank Robbers Get $20,000 In Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP)—Bank robbers today held up the Jasper Ave. treasury branch of the Alberta government and were reported to have escaped with some $20,000 in cash.

First reports said three men went inside the branch while a fourth man waited outside in an escape car.

Thanksgiving Oct. 12

OTTAWA (CP) — Thanksgiving Day has been set this year as Monday, Oct. 12, it was announced today in an extra issue of the Canada Gazette. For some years Thanksgiving has been observed on the second Monday in October.

Gift For Queen

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) —The Brazilian delegation to the Coronation next month will present Queen Elizabeth a necklace of 647 Brazilian diamonds and aquamarines, reported valued at $50,000. The gift, to be given in the name of Brazil, has been made possible by individual contributions.

Ottawa Reports Two New Cases Of Hog Cholera

OTTAWA (CP)—Another two cases of hog cholera in Ontario were reported today, bringing to 15 the total number of outbreaks since the disease was first uncovered about eight days ago.

The new cases were located on farms at Ariss in Wellington county and at Seaforth in Huron county. Both counties have been hit before, the agriculture department said.

There still is no farm-to-farm spread of the disease. All outbreaks have been traced to the sales barn where the hogs first reported sick were purchased.

However, the federal health of animals division expressed a fear that there may be a danger of the disease spreading if individuals start trading in hogs.

CLOSE SALES BARNS

A lot of the community sales barns have been closed to hog trading in the drive to stamp out the disease.

With these sales barns closed, many farmers may be tempted to dispose of their surplus hogs to other farmers or buyers in the area.

"This activity, which might arise out of the temporary closing of sales barns in the affected area, could result in the serious spread of infection," the department said.

"Although the recent ministerial order banned movement of hogs out of southwestern Ontario, more rigid restrictions have not been imposed because the department is anticipating the fullest co-operation of everyone concerned."

The department's statement gave no estimate of the number of hogs involved in the two new outbreaks, but estimates Friday were that almost 600 hogs have either died or have been destroyed because of the disease.

See Churchill Calling Parley

LONDON (AP)—British sources expect Prime Minister Churchill to propose an early Big Four parley with Russia when he meets with President Eisenhower and France's premier in Bermuda next month.

London newspapers are taking it for granted that this will be one of the principal topics of discussion at the gathering of the three Western leaders.

Churchill already has called for a high-level East-West conference to settle outstanding world issues and has indicated he hopes the Bermuda talks will pave the way for a meeting with Soviet Premier Malenkov.

Eisenhower has expressed willingness to meet Russia half way in an attempt to settle differences but he would first like to see some evidence of Soviet good intentions.

Red Bullets Miss French Commander

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—The new French commander-in-chief in Indo-China, Gen. Henri Navarre, got a hot reception from Vietminh gunners on an observation flight in the Black river salient Friday.

Anti-aircraft fire of the Communist-led rebels ripped into Navarre's two-engined Dakota transport as it flew low over enemy positions in the region of Nasan, a French garrison town in the mountains 117 miles west of Hanoi. Machine-gun bullets hit the plane repeatedly and Navarre was lucky to escape unharmed. Damage from the bullets was not great.

The pilot apparently had been flying low to give the general a good look at the enemy troop concentrations in the district, which the Vietminh invaded in strength last fall.

Navarre, 54, former inspector-general of the French Army, is a newcomer to Asia. He has just taken over as commander-in-chief here from Gen. Raul Salan, who directed French Union military operations for the last 18 months of the war.

Say Harrison Has Plan To End War

Top UN Negotiator To Issue 'Last Chance' Offer

The sources said the chief Allied negotiator will issue a "last chance" ultimatum to the Reds when the talks resume Monday after an eight-day break.

Harrison is expected to leave Tokyo soon with a revised UN plan to settle the bitter controversy over exchanging prisoners of war.

In Washington, some members of Congress who talked with Walter Bedell Smith, acting secretary of state, about the peace parleys said they expected no major change in U. S. policies.

TRUCE SAID NEAR

Senator John Sparkman (Dem. Ala.), who attended the Washington session, said negotiators were "very near" a truce—if the Reds really want one.

Sparkman, a member of the Senate foreign relations Far Eastern sub-committee, said he felt that if the projected Allied offer is rejected, the UN will break off negotiations immediately.

Harrison has been in Tokyo a week, holding almost daily conferences with Gen. Mark W. Clark and U. S. Ambassador Robert Murphy, political adviser to the Far East commander.

"We do not intend to let these talks merely drag on," a high source at Clark's headquarters said.

The Communist Peiping radio has jumped on the possibility of a rift between the U. S. and Britain, stemming from London criticism over the way the UN is conducting the talks.

The Chinese propaganda radio also is beaming programs to Asian countries accusing the U. S. of sabotaging hopes for an armistice.

Harrison has not sat across the conference table from North Korean Gen. Nam Il since the two sides agreed to a recess last Saturday.

Desperadoes Flee Michigan Prison

MARQUETTE, Mich. (AP)—One of seven desperadoes who fled Michigan's maximum-security prison here was back behind bars today, less than 24 hours after he broke out.

Lloyd Burgdurf, 61-year-old lifetermer, was captured by a civilian who thrust his hands in his pockets as if he had a gun. He didn't.

Messenger stopped his car His dog jumped out barking. Messenger thrust his hands in his pockets as if reaching for a gun. Burgdurf came forward, hands raised.

Authorities didn't anticipate the other six would cow as quickly or easily. Killers and robbers were included among those fleeing, and Warden Emergy Jacques warned "all are dangerous and armed."

Tornado-Torn City Struggles Back To Normal

SARNIA (CP)—Tornado-torn Sarnia struggled back to normal today, helped by establishment of a central organization for relief agencies and of an emergency trust fund. In 30 whirling seconds Thursday, a tornado that roared in from Michigan caused upwards of $5,000,000 damage and left about 500 persons homeless.

There were no deaths in Sarnia itself but elsewhere in southwestern Ontario the storm killed Mrs. Margaret Clarke, 72, when it sucked her from her bed at Watford, 45 miles northeast of here, and Simon Thompson, 50, and his six-year-old daughter, Dorothy, at Springbank, 25 miles northeast of London. Also killed at Springbank was Sara MacIntosh, about 80. Many persons were injured.

Port Huron, Mich., across the river from this chemical city of 42,000, was hard hit. One person was killed.

Within 24 hours of the disaster, the federal and provincial government moved to render all possible assistance. The army sent 400 men and emergency electrical and communications equipment. The Ontario government offered 1,000 heavy trucks to help in the cleanup operation.

ORGANIZE AID

Representatives of all Sarnia relief agencies put together a city-wide organization to provide emergency housing, bedding, food and other necessities for the victims of the twister.

Contributions to the emergency fund will be received by the Sarnia welfare administrator's office. The money will be used to aid citizens who lost furniture and household effects.

The Riot Act, read Thursday night, remained in effect Friday night. Soldiers and airmen stood guard in the stricken downtown district, which bore the brunt of the twister's fury.

WATCH FOR LOOTERS

Police indicated there was no unusual lawbreaking, but the guards kept watch for looters.

The scene of destruction is only two miles from Sarnia's famous chemical valley. Plants in the heavily-industrialized area were unscathed.

More than 1,000 persons work on the afternoon shift in chemical valley among highly volatile gases, tanks of gasoline and burning gas. Residents said that, if the tornado had ripped into the industrial section, casualties probably would have been heavy.

Insurance adjusters said it may take weeks to determine the extent of the damage. One of them, E. A. Newman of Toronto, compared the destruction in Sarnia with the damage caused by the Winnipeg flood of 1950.

WORSE THAN WINNIPEG

"In some ways I think this will be worse than Winnipeg," he said. "There, the water came up slowly and the damage was largely due to the soaking. Here, whole tops of buildings have been blown away."

The entire business district of 12 blocks was damaged.

Climbers Make Bid For Peak Of Mt. Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters)—Four picked climbers of a British expedition will make a double-pronged attempt on the unconquered peak of Mount Everest this week-end, according to reports reaching here by runner today from the expedition's base

The attack is on if the weather holds and if the first phase of the final assault—setting up the camps on the upper slopes of the mountain—have gone according to plan.

The weather forecast for today and Sunday predicts clear skies generally in the Everest area. It is expected here the attack will go ahead as scheduled.

The first prong of the attack, expected to be made today, will be a party of two climbers, leaving from camp seven at 25,500 feet. The pair will attempt to get to the 29,002-foot summit and back in one day.

If they fail, the second pair of climbers will try Sunday. They will use a bivouac camp on the ridge above camp seven as a halfway halting place for the night to shorten the distance of the final attack on the summit.

London Denies McCarthy Charge

LONDON (Reuters) — "Not a shred of evidence" has been found to support allegations that British ships transported Chinese Communist troops last year, a government spokesman said Friday

The government inaugurated an official inquiry last Wednesday, after U.S. Senator Joseph McCarthy claimed two British ships controlled by the Wheelock-Marden Company in Hong Kong had carried Communist troops along the China coast.

A foreign office spokesman said detailed investigation of all records here and in Hong Kong failed to support McCarthy's charges. He said Britain would not formally answer the charges.

The spokesman said a denial issued Thursday by the company "adequately answers the allegations."

Mailbox Blasted

KILKEEL, Northern Ireland (AP)—A wall mailbox outside Kilkeel's post office bearing the insignia of King George VI was blown to pieces Friday. No one was hurt. Another unexploded charge was found in a second mailbox. Police said they believe the charges were placed by Irish republican sympathizers who oppose plans for celebrations here to mark the Coronation of the Queen.

For Examiner Readers

Reporters of Three Great News Agencies To Tell Colorful Story of Coronation

LONDON (CP)—Reporters of three great national news agencies will tell the Coronation story for the readers of the Peterborough Examiner.

Early on June 2 four Canadian Press staff men will be deployed along the procession route and in Westminster Abbey, alert to catch the unique flavor of Imperial pageantry and ancient ceremony.

Their work will dovetail with that of Reuters, British agency which operates on a world-wide basis, and of The Associated Press, the United States co-operative which also reports for the world. Reuters and AP have each concentrated in London the biggest corps of reporters ever mobilized to cover a single story in the United Kingdom.

CP's on-the-spot coverage will be directed by Alan Harvey, London bureau chief, who has been assigned a place in Westerminster Abbey for the ceremony. His Coronation staff consists of Arch. MacKenzie of London bureau, David McIntosh of Ottawa bureau who travelled to England with the Canadian naval contingent, and Forbes Rhude, CP's business editor, who will hurry to London after the International Chamber of Commerce meeting at Vienna to lend a hand with Coronation coverage preparations.

Harvey, whose sensitive story on the funeral of King George VI was hailed by Canadian newspapers as outstanding, is a native of Toronto. MacKenzie, young veteran of several CP bureaux, is a Reginan. Rhude—best known for his backgrounded feature stories on aspects of national development — is a Prince Edward Islander. McIntosh, former CP news editor at Halifax and Vancouver and now attached to parliamentary staff at Ottawa, was born in Sherbrooke, Que.

Ranald Maclurkin, Reuters chief reporter in the United Kingdom, will head that agency's reporting staff inside Westminster Abbey. Reuters' running account from the abbey and the procession route will be co-ordinated by Stuart Underhill, their North American editor, formerly of Vancouver and one-time CP bureau chief in London and New York.

Among the corps of 40 Associated Press reporters and editors will be two Pulitzer Price winners, Relman Morin and Hal Boyle.

Spot reporting of the event is expected to start with descriptive of the gathering crowds well before the Queen leaves Buckingham Palace at 10:26 a. m, BST (5:26 EDT). The procession is due to reach Westminster Abbey at 11 a. m. (6 a.m. EDT). The Coronation ceremony takes 2½ hours.

Biggest On Continent

Icebreaker Gets First Rough-Water Test In Atlantic Trip To Coronation Review

MONTREAL (CP)—The sleek, new transport department icebreaker d'Iberville will soon have its first rough-water test—an Atlantic crossing. She will sail for Britain May 29 to take part in the Coronation naval review.

Newspaper men and photographers Friday inspected the 5,677-ton ship from stem to stern and were told she is the biggest, most powerful icebreaker on this continent and in the British Commonwealth. The ship will be open to the public Sunday and Monday.

One of the features of the ship, built last year at Lauzon, Que., are two bell-type, two-seater helicopters that serve as part of her equipment.

The flight deck is aft, where both helicopters are tied down when not in operation.

The d'Iberville with all modern facilities—a fully equipped hospital and spacious living quarters, among other features—did better than 16 knots during trials and has a range of 12,000 miles without refuelling.

She can carry a crew of 72 and as many as 50 passengers.

Her master, Capt. Charles A. Caron, l'Islet, Que., beamed proudly when asked what he thought of his new charge. The d'Iberville was commissioned last week and docked here Wednesday.

An Atlantic crossing in an icebreaker will mark a new experience for the 50-year-old skipper, who joined the transport department in 1932.

He said he feels his vessel can hold her own in rough waters and that the voyage will give him experience in operating and studying the d'Iberville's behavior.

The vessel is expected to reach London June 8 and then proceed to Spithead, where she will represent Canada's civil marine at naval exercises June 15.

Among passengers scheduled to sail with her for Britain are Transport Minister Chevrier, Deputy Transport Minister Lessard and Mrs. Lessard, who christened the ship, and two Eskimos—Thomas Aneroluk of Coppermine, N.W.T., and Simonee of Frobisher Bay, Baffin Island.

The Eskimos, chosen to represent their people at the Coronation, will attend official ceremonies marking the crowning of the Queen, but will also be with the d'Iberville during the Coronation naval review.

Following the Spithead exercises, the icebreaker will sail from La Havre, France, then to Liverpool and Glasgow. She is expected to return here July 11, when she will load supplies for remote posts in the Canadian Arctic.

'Fooling Around' All Over, B.C. Douks Told

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's stripping, home-burning radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobors were told Friday that the "fooling around" is over.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced an eight-point policy to deal with the fanatic Sons, whose antics have set the Kootenays agog at intervals since they came from Russia some 50 years ago.

To a large extent, the Social Credit premier's policy follows the recommendations of the consultative committee on Doukhobors, which made a report a year ago after an 18-month study. The committee advanced 40 recommendations designed to break down gently the hostility of the Doukhobor sect to Canadian life.

The committee's recommendation that the fanatical Sons be resettled in another country also found echoes in the premier's announcement. The sect numbers about 2,000 of the some 10,000 Doukhobors who inhabit the Kootenay district some 250 miles east of here.

STAGED PARADE

The Doukhobor question popped up in the provincial election campaign after a recent outbreak of home-burnings and bombings. One parade was staged at Nelson, but the Doukhobors did not disrobe, their traditional method of showing displeasure.

Mr. Bennett's new policy includes recognition of the Doukhobor form of marriage, which is merely a declaration before the elders of the community. The Doukhobors have no clergymen and children born of these marriages are illegitimate under B.C. law.

The policy also includes extension of the franchise to Doukhobors, who now have no vote in provincial or federal elections. It provides for resale of land to orthodox and independent Doukhobors. The original Doukhobor community owned its own lands but went bankrupt in 1938. The lands were taken over by the provincial government.

Other points included: Cancellation of drivers' licences of law-breaking Doukhobors; establishment of a continuing commission in July on Doukhobor affairs, to work with the existing consultative committee; compulsory attendance at school for all Doukhobor children; compulsory registration of births, marriages and all vital statistics.

UAW Press Ford, Chrysler

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers (CIO) turned the heat on the remainder of the auto industry's big three today to gain the same wage concessions it got from General Motors Corp. Friday. Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO and the UAW, already had said Chrysler and Ford would be asked to alter their five-year wage contracts if General Motors did. GM historically has been the contract pattern-setter. After GM agreed to alter its contract—which it legally could have refused to do until mid-1955—Reuther remarked: "I hope other companies will catch on to the idea real quick."

The concessions granted by GM raised the average wage of GM's 350,000 employees across the country to $2.05 hourly.

Around 700,000 other UAW members are employed by other auto makers and major suppliers.

Shortly after the GM-UAW agreement was announced, James B. Carey, president of the Electrical Workers (CIO) announced GM had given 40,000 members of his union similar concessions.

Under the contract, General Motors agreed:

THREE-FOLD AGREEMENT

1. To make permanent 19 of the 24 cents hourly that its hourly rated employees have gained through increases because of the cost-of-living escalator clause in their contract.
2. To raise 40,000 skilled employees a flat 10 cents hourly June 1.
3. To accept a new cost-of-living formula by which wages are hitched to the government's new index of the cost of living.

It was the government's decision to abandon the old cost-of-living index that brought about reopening of the contracts. They specifically were tied to the old index of the bureau of labor statistics until 1955.

The BLS announced months prior that it would switch to the new index, dropping the old, this year. President Eisenhower ordered the old continued until June.

The new contract will make both the new and old indexes inoperative until the cost-of-living is announced in September for the quarter ending July 15.

London Crowd Frees Prisoner

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A handcuffed prisoner escaped from police early today when a street fight in downtown London swelled to near riot proportions. The man was still at large this afternoon.

Police estimates of the hostile crowd that congregated ranged from 800 to 2,000.

Richmond street was jammed with spectators, some climbing on to parked cars for better views. Traffic was at a halt between Dundas and King streets.

In city court today Magistrate E. Donald Smith of St. Thomas sentenced two men to 30 days in jail without option of fines for their part in the brawl.

They are Fred Bugler, 35, and Albert Langille, 19. Both pleaded guilty to obstructing police.

Police said the crowd got the handcuffed man out of a cruiser car and helped him to escape.

The trouble started at 12:15 a.m. when Constable Eric Sadler broke up a fight between two men. He handcuffed one and was trying to locate the other when someone jumpedon his back.

He pulled this man off, he said, and then Langille jumped on his back.

Meanwhile the crowd released the other man from the cruiser and he disappeared.

Atom Plant Signs Contract With Union

OTTAWA (CP)—A two-year union contract cutting working time and raising pay was announced today for the government-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., the body which runs Canada's atomic effort. It doesn't apply to the scientists themselves.

The agreement, covering all hourly-rate employees except security guards, was signed with a special council established by the American Federation of Labor to represent the locals of eight international unions at the Chalk River plant.

The agreement cuts the hours for day workers to 42½ from 45 and for shift workers to 45 from 48.

Siamese Twin, 41, Has Operation

BOSTON (AP)—A 41-year-old Siamese twin, Margaret Gibb, underwent major abdominal surgery for removal of a fiberous tumor today in a case new in the annals of medicine.

Margaret and her sister, Mary, who also was anaesthetized, were reported in excellent condition after the two-hour operation by Dr. Frank Lahey, head of the Lahey Clinic.

He said the operation marked the first time that major internal surgery had been performed on a Siamese twin more than 40 years of age. The sisters, from Holyoke, Mass., are joined at the base of the spine, and have, in effect, a common circulatory system.

Dr. Lahey quoted Mary as saying that her "only concern was for Margaret."

CLEAN-UP PROCEEDS

Clean-up work is proceeding satisfactorily in all damaged areas of the city, emergency director K. C. Needham reported today.

Christina and Front streets, hardest hit in the storm, have been cleared of debris by emergency crews. Power-driven chain saws were employed to cut fallen trees. Firms in this area and as far away as Windsor have supplied men and equipment to aid emergency crews.

Mr. Needham said water service is functioning normally and power lines and services are being restored throughout the storm area. Food supplies are adequate and both hospitals are operating normally.

Fred Power, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company said most telephone circuits have been restored except where lines are down. Service will be restored in these areas within a few days, he said.

Tough To Kill But Baobab Tree Timber Useless

WASHINGTON — One of the toughest living things is the fat baobab tree of South Afarica, a tree that may keep on growing even after it is chopped down.

The baobab puts out deep roots but has short, stubby branches. These branches are bare of leaves most of the year and look like roots when the tree grows inland in dry parts of the continent, thus giving rise to the native legend that an angry devil planted the baobabs upside down.

TIMBER VIRTUALLY USELESS

Timber from baobabs is so pulpy and soft it is all but useless. But from the bark can be made strong, coarse cord and fabrics. African tribesmen strip the bark as high as they can reach, frequently girdling the tree.

Any ordinary tree would die of total girdling. Not the baobab. It just grows new bark, over as much as 100 feet of girth.

It also easily survives fire and hollowing. Natives carve chambers in the great trunks, using them for storing water, for dwellings and even for temporary tombs pending later ceremonial burial.

The noted missionary and explorer, Dr. David Livingstone, told of a baobab that grew an inch even though it had been chopped down and was lying on the ground. He said the normal rate of tree growth was small. One 100 feet in circumference, he reported, probably would be 14 centuries old.

FRUIT IS BOMB-SHAPED

Baobab fruit, called ki-boo-yu, comes in a hard, felt-jacketed pod shaped something like an airplane bomb. When it falls to the ground it bursts, thus scattering the seeds. Tribesmen make gruel of seeds and the acid-tasting pulp.

They also eat the leaves cooked up like spinach, and feed them on occasion to livestock. Witch doctors carry bits of baobab wood and fruit in their bizarre pharmacopoeia, claiming they cure all sorts of ailments.

A baobab tree absorbed a cannonball at Mombasa in the 18th century. Firing at a fort, Portuguese attackers hit a baobab. The eight-inch ball penerated seven inches into the wood, there to lie for many years without causing the tree any apparent inconvenience.

The scientific name for the baobab is Adansonia digitata. Livinstone referred to it by its Bechuani name of mowana. Europeans often call it the "cream of tartar" tree; the acid in the fruit pulp is tartaric acid.

Fort Erie police traced it to a Buffalo home and it was turned over to Buffalo authorities Friday. Police said no charges will be laid since the theft involved a minor.

U.S. Firm To Purchase Tons Of Aluminum Here

NEW YORK (AP)—The Aluminum Company of America today confirmed reports that it plans to buy about 1,250,000,000 pounds of Canadian aluminum over the next six years.

Week's 1st Clash Sees MiG Downed

SEOUL (AP)—United States jets destroyed one Communist MiG and damaged another today as Allied and Red pilots tangled over North Korea for the first time since Monday.

South Korean infantry killed or wounded more than 300 Chinese Reds in small-scale but savage hand-to-hand fighting along the rain-soaked battlefront.

Scores of Allied fighters and bombers streaked over North Korea as skies cleared after two days of wind and rain.

The U. S. 5th air force toted up 28 MiG kills, two probables and nine damaged by Sabre jets for the week ending Friday night, the highest weekly toll since 31 were shot down in the second week of September, 1952.

The score was impressive because bad weather knocked out two days of air operations and the MiGs refused to come out to fight on two other days.

Only one Sabre was lost in air combat during the week, fifth air force said.

Two other Sabres were reported lost to "other causes," presumably mechanical trouble. Six Allied warplanes were reported lost to Communist ground fire.

Mary Pickford, 60, Remains Golden-Haired Sweetheart

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Mary Pickford, now 60 years old, is one living legend without nostalgia.

Still golden-haired, but with a chic, short hair-do, the Toronto-born sweetheart of the early silent screen is a youthful, slim figure in high fashion clothes, modern as tomorrow's newspaper and as friendly as the lady next door.

Interviewed in her flower-filled New York hotel suite, she was as full of the future as a June college graduate, looking back warmly and without regret on the fabulous 54 years of her theatrical career.

Mary Pickford made her last movie 20 years ago. She's thinking about television. She's a founder of a major film company but is satisfied now to reap her reward as a major stockholder. She reigned supreme over Hollywood for years. Now as an abdicated monarch she seems perfectly content in bringing up her two adopted children and indulging her enthusiasm for volunteer work and hobbies.

BOND-SELLING TOUR

In talking, her vivacious face took on that earnest, serious-little-girl look that another generation of movie fans adored.

"You know, I'm an American citizen by choice. I was born in Canada. As a child I thought all Americans were tall and dark. The first Yankee I ever met was Elsie Janis so I believed they were all as tall and dark as she."

She talked of going on the stage at six, barnstorming and playing the stock circuit with her widowed mother and younger brother and sister.

"I never had a real childhood," she said. "What I had, I lived out on the stage, playing little girl roles. It wasn't all bad. There was lots of laughter and we were together and we always had enough to eat."

ON BROADWAY AT 10

She told of the day she stormed her way in to see the great David Belasco and got her first Broadway role. She was 10 years old.

"I believe I was guided; I'm sure I was," she concluded. "There was one chance in a million I would have been successful."

The difficult years of constant travel, little money and no family roots left their scars of insecurity. Throughout her life, she said, she has never been able to feel that wealth and fame is anything but transient.

She's pleased—and quite proud—of her reputation as a shrewd and hard-headed business woman.

"I have a strange relationship to money," she said. "It never seems real unless it is in cash and in my hand.

"Believe me, I'd never pay $700 or $1,000 for a dress. I'd never pay money like that for clothes."

HOLLYWOOD DAYS

She is matter of fact about the high old days in Hollywood when she was married to Douglas Fairbanks Sr., when Pickfair was called "Buckingham Palace" and film premieres didn't start until Doug and Mary had arrived in state.

"Douglas," she explained, "loved to accumulate human beings the way some people collect stamps and coins. Why, he kept one man on his payroll for 30 years because he once loaned Douglas an overcoat."

Each night, no matter what time they finished work at the studio, they came back to a dinner table set for 15—no matter whether anyone had been invited. Usually, the table was full because gregarious Douglas filled the place with friends and friends' friends.

"How did I like it?" she asked. "How would any woman like that sort of life? It was certainly rough on my artistic life. I was trying to be an actress and a producer and I had to run three establishments. We'd entertain 14 at luncheon in the studio bungalow each day. Then there was Pickfair. It isn't as big as people think, only four bedrooms, but there's the guesthouse, too—and there was the beachhouse at Santa Monica with room for six or eight guests."

However, added Miss Pickford, "the travelling and meeting people was wonderful for me."

Liberals' Record Chief Issue In N.S. Elections

HALIFAX (CP) — Both major parties agree that the 20-year record of the Liberal government will be the chief issue when Nova Scotians vote in the province's general election May 26.

The record was attacked and defended as party leaders headed into the last lap of the campaign. Liberals and Progressive Conservatives will fire their parting shots tonight but the CCF campaign will not wind up until Sunday.

In his final platform speech Friday night at New Glasgow, Premier Macdonald said the election issue boiled down to the government's record on one hand and Progressive Conservative criticism of it on the other.

MINOR CRITICISMS

Opposition attacks, he charged, had "narrowed down to minor and petty criticisms." They did not attempt to criticize the "great highway paving program, rural high school program, rural electrification, free schoolbooks, the Canso causeway, the Halifax-Dartmouth bridge, the trans-Canada highway or the ferry from Yarmouth to New England."

Robert L. Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, levelled charges at what he called the government's failure to stimulate industry in a speech at Truro.

Mr. Stanfield said the volume of Nova Scotia Agricultural products is at its lowest ebb since the federal government started to keep records.

He promised that a Progressive Conservative government would "insist that the federal government carry out its promises to the Maritimes to decentralize industry, make cheap power available for Maritime industry, carry out the original intention of the Duncan commission on freight rates, negotiate new treaties to develop new markets for food, fish, lumber and coal, and make the maximum use of our ports."

IODE Presents School With Flag, Pole

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—An impressive Empire Day ceremony took place on the Public School lawn on Friday afternoon when the Bemersyde Chapter, IODE, presented the school with a flag and flag pole.

At 2 p.m., the Campbellford Citizens' Band, led by Bandmaster Donald D. Bennett, took its place on the terrace in front of the Primary School building. The public school pupils assembled with the teachers on the lawn. Also present was a large representation from the IODE.

Mrs. Jack Clark led the singing. The Rev. John McKibbin explained to the assembled boys and girls why their school was being given a gift of a flag. He said that the IODE might well mean, "I Owe a Great Deal to the Empire."

The flag was then presented to the chairman of the Public School Board, Mr. S. Hopping, by the Regent, Mrs. F. G. DeCarrol. Mr. Hopping in turn presented it to Mr. Haig, Principal of the Public School. It was then raised to the accompaniment of Mr. Walter Lowe's bugle and saluted by the members of the Bemersyde Chapter.

A recitation, "Our Flag," by Miss Valerie DeCarrol, explained the origin and meaning of the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew and St. Patrick. This was followed by two selections, "Rule Britannia" and "The Maple Leaf" by the Citizens' Band.

A pleasant feature from the point of view of the Public School pupils was that Mr. Haig, at the request of the chairman of the board, Mr. Hopping, declared the rest of the afternoon a holiday for the children.

No Peace Possible In Korea Without Unity: Refugee

A truce in Korea will not bring peace if it fails to reunite Korea as a single nation A divided Korea will never know peace or prosperity, said Miss Yung Chung Kim speaking Friday night at the annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the United Nations Association in the Public Library.

As long as the small devastated nation is split in two at the 38th parallel or some other unnatural division, there will always be a threat of another war started by an ambitious Communist regime in the northern section.

Korea is a country that is interdependent with an industrial development in the north where there are sources of electric power and agriculture in the south to provide food for the nation.

PERSONAL STORY

Miss Kim, a refugee from the Communists since 1946, told the UN audience something of her personal history. She is a retiring young school teacher who was able to teach only three weeks in an established Korean school before being forced to flee from the Communists for the second time in her short life.

She, with her two brothers and sisters, was born in North Korea, in a United Church of Canada mission hospital. The United Church missionaries who came to Korea in the 1890s formed the only link between Canada and Korea until the present Korean war. They had built hospitals and schools as well as churches.

When the Second World War ended Miss Kim was in the last grade of high school run, as everything else had been in Korea for 40 years, by the Japanese.

Korea had been occupied before, but it had never been split as the Soviet and the United States then proceeded to do.

During the 40 years of Japanese occupation the Korean people had had to keep their nationhood, language and customs alive secretly. Japan had tried to replace the Korean language and customs with Japanese, but the Koreans had resisted passively to the extent that in all those years of occupation there had been scarcely any intermarriage.

ECONOMY CRIPPLED

When the nation was split at the 38th parallel after its day of liberation in August, 1945, its economy was crippled because there was little or no trade between the north and south which previously had complemented each other with its industry and agriculture.

From the very start there were small outbreaks of fighting along the artificial border. The Kim family found itself in the northern half under the new Communist occupation and puppet red government.

By 1946 the Kim family had had enough and like many others in the north fled to the south at the risk of their lives just as East Germans are now doing.

SETTLED IN SEOUL

They had to walk 60 miles to make the crossing, but some, she related, walked as much as 300 miles. Like most of the other refugees, the Kim family settled in Seoul where the father, a teacher, managed to find a position in a high school to support his family

In spite of the small salary her father earned, he sent his daughter to university and in four years Miss Kim graduated with a BA. She found a position teaching in a junior high school, but within three weeks war broke out and the prepared North Korean army pushed the surprised and ill-equipped southern army south.

The Reds occupied the capital of Seoul for three months. It was then that Koreans who had never experienced Red rule learned the bitter truth of the stories that the reguees in their midst had been telling them for four years.

Fortunately, in the first demonstration that they really believed in collective security, the United Nations intervened and troops from 16 countries are now fighting the Reds in Korea. But, she reminded her audience, by far the greatest number of men fighting the Red Chinese and Koreans are members of the ROK Republic of Korea, army.

The United Nations army advanced to the Yalu river in the north and then for some reason began to withdraw south again. When the Korean people learned of this, they, and the Kim family among them, packed a few belongings they could carry and fled south in October of 1950. It was nearly Christmas when the Kim family started 400 miles south in an overloaded train to Pusan.

LEADERS CAPTIVES

For the second time in its modern history, the leaders of Korean national life were suppressed and taken captives. Miss Kim said that she hoped sometime to be able to tell her audience of a bright picture of reconstruction in Korea, but now there was only devastation, starvation and suffering in the country.

Graduates of high school and universities like her brother were pressed into the ROK army seriously hindering the development of Korean leaders, for the future.

Europe and Asia had experienced a terrible war from 1939 to 1945, but since then even more devastating weapons had been devised. As a result only one third of Seoul, the capital remains and a great toll has been taken among the men, women, and children.

WANT PEACE

If there was ever a people who wanted peace, said Miss Kim, it was the Korean people. But they didn't want a peace that was only temporary and left the nation crippled by another unnatural division that left it faced with the threat of another war breaking out and unable to build toward its own reconstruction.

Sometimes, said Miss Kim, she wondered if members of United Nations really wanted to help Korea or whether they were concerned merely with their prestige. There was a tendency among large nations to maintain the status quo and "smaller powers are the victims."

TRYING TO REBUILD

Even in the midst of its devastation, Koreans were trying to build toward the future. About the only thing they can do is educate as many of their children as possible. While many children wander about the nation uncared for and foraging for themselves, others were being taught in open air schools wherever they could be set up. Miss Kim herself taught in one of these refugee schools with no equipment on an island off Korea.

Korea's hope for the future, she said, was among these eager bright-eyed students. The UN was helping now, but it was like giving money to a man forced to beg. Without a job, he could only spend the money he was given, and then beg again.

Miss Kim was introduced by retiring club president William Graff and thanked by Mrs. A. Collins.

The Korean student, who is working on her MA degree at the University of Toronto, is spending the weekend in Peterborough as a guest of Miss M. Stevenson and will speak at the morning service of George St. United Church and at Mark St. United Church in the evening.

In the evening at George St. Church there will be a reception in the Board room for Miss Kim and Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Armstrong. Dr. Armstrong preached as a supply minister at Trinity United Church during the winter.

Festival Winners Guests Artists At First Concert

The first of two final concerts bringing to a close the seventh annual Peterborough Kiwanis Music Festival was held Friday night in St. Peter's school auditorium.

Approximately 23 entrants in the 1953 festival who won awards or scholarships or placed first in their respective classes were the guest artists of the evening.

"This year's festival is one of the largest we have had and we believe it to be the most successful one in our festival history," Wilson Gemmell, president of the Kiwanis club said in his welcoming address to the concert audience.

The president expressed the appreciation of the festival committee and club to the Separate School Board for allowing the festival to be held in St. Peter's school auditorium and thanked all who had contributed towards the festival's success.

CONGRATULATES CLUB

"I would like to thank the Peterborough Kiwanis Club for the wonderful job they are doing in staging this festival," he said. "This great contribution they are making to the cultural life of Peterborough is very much appreciated."

During the evening several of the performers thanked the donors of scholarships and the Kiwanis club for their help in promoting musical careers.

The second final concert will be held in St. Peter's school auditorium May 29. The program will include the PCVS Choral Club, PCVS Triple and Double Trios, the Junior Farmers' Choir, Robert David Willis, boy soprano of Toronto, and his sister Donna Willis, pianist; Raymore Turnbull, clarinetist; Patricia McIlraith, Cobourg pianist; Port Hope Public Schools' choir; Sharon Dale, Oshawa pianist, and Mrs F. Bowmanville Wins From Lindsay, 9-3

LINDSAY (ENS)—Bowmanville Brookdale Roses hung a five-inning 9-3 loss on the Lindsay Merchants here last night, the home club's third loss in as many games in the Lakeshore League this year. Stuiach and Legree, on the mound for the winners, held the Merchants to four hits, three in the first inning when they scored their three runs, while the visitors collected nine off Merchants' Doug Loucks, who went the distance to take his second loss.

Errors helped the Roses a good deal, as they played flawless ball despite the slippery condition of the field and the chilly weather, while the Merchants hung up five miscues.

Maxie Yourth led the winners at the plate with two doubles and a single and drove in three of their runs. Menzies, Lowery, Edger and Loucks got a hit each for the losers. Umpire Bill Allan ran into difficulty twice early in the game and threw out Hooper of the visitors and Lowery of the Merchants for beefing on calls.

Trumpets, Guns Signal Crowning

By RANALD MACLURKIN

LONDON (Reuters)—Trumpets in Westminster Abbey and guns fired from the Tower of London will signal the crowning on June 2 of Queen Elizabeth.

When the trumpets sound and the guns fire, those in the abbey and the millions outside listening to the ceremony by radio and seeing it on television will know that the crown of St. Edward has been placed on the Queen's head.

Early on June 2, people will begin to line the route from Buckingham Palace to the abbey to see the Queen ride by in a state coach. At 8:40 a.m. the first cars, carrying some members of the Royal Family, will leave the palace for the abbey.

At 10:20 Queen Elizabeth's own procession will start.

JOINS PROCESSION

From there she will go to a robing room. In the vestibule, at 11:15, she will join the procession which has been forming. Six maids of honor arrange themselves, three on each side, to carry the long train of the Queen's robe.

Through the body of the church walks the Queen, into and through the choir, where she is acclaimed by 40 Queen's scholars of Westminster school chanting "Vivat Regina Elizabeth. Vivat! Vivat! Vivat!"

Standing beside the coronation chair she waits while the archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, faces the rows of peers and asks:

"Sirs, I here present unto you Queen Elizabeth, your undoubted Queen: wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

The Queen, meanwhile, turns to show herself to those on the four sides of the theatre.

This part of the ceremony, known as the recognition, is the opportunity for people or groups not agreeing with the choice of a monarch to show their dissent.

The Queen goes to the chair of estate, and the archbishop of Canterbury, standing before her, asks:

"Madam, is Your Majesty willing to take the oath?"

"I am willing," answers the Queen.

She then promises to maintain the Protestant religion in Britain.

She kisses the Bible and signs the oath which is written on vellum.

PRESENT BIBLE

The Bible is then presented to the Queen by Rt. Rev. George Jeffery, moderator of the general assembly of the Church of Scotland. It is the first time the Scottish Church, which is Presbyterian and differs in its ritual from the Church of England, has had its place in this ceremony.

The voices of the great choir soar in a psalm: "Behold, O God, our Defender: and look upon the Face of thine Anointed." Then comes the hymn, "Veni, Creator Spiritus." This is the prelude to the anointing, which consecrates Elizabeth as Queen.

MASS CHOIR SINGS

As the mass voices rise in a great "Hallelujah" Elizabeth rises from her knees. The lord chamberlain and the mistress of the robes gently draw from her shoulders the heavy robe she has worn till now.

The young Queen walks slowly to the 650-year-old coronation chair. Four Knights of the Garter hold over her a canopy of cloth of gold. They screen her from onlookers while the Archbishop of Canterbury anoints her in the form of a cross with holy oil.

His voice intones as he anoints both the Queen's palms:

"Be thy hands anointed with holy oil."

Then: "Be thy breast anointed with holy oil."

Now is the moment when the gleaming ornaments of royalty and religion, the golden swords and the flashing jewels of the regalia which have been borne into the abbey with the Queen, reach their full significance.

PRESENTS STATE SWORD

The 59-year-old Marquess of Salisbury comes forward with the sword of state. The archbishop of Canterbury presents it to her, saying:

"With this sword do justice, stop the growth of iniquity, protect the holy Church of God."

The Queen rises and walks alone to the altar. There she places the sword as a symbol that she offers it in the service of God.

The glistening orb is brought to the Queen. The archbishop places it in the Queen's right hand, saying:

"Receive this orb set under the cross, and remember that the whole world is subject to the power and empire of Christ our Redeemer."

PREPARES CROWN

Then the archbishop takes up St. Edward's crown from the altar, then lays it down again, saying:

"O God the Crown of the Faithful: Bless we beseech Thee this crown, and so santify thy servant Elizabeth upon whose head this day Thou dost place it for a sign of royal majesty, that she may be filled by thine abundant grace with all princely virtues."

The archbishop takes the crown. There is a moment of almost breathless silence as he places it on Elizabeth's head.

Then the stillness is shattered suddenly, by the cry echoing to the high roof of the ancient shrine: "God Save the Queen."

The trumpets blow a triumphant fanfare. Hundreds of white-gloved hands suddenly rise as the princes and princesses, peers and peeresses put on their coronets and caps.

FACES CONGREGATION

Up to this point the Queen has for the most part had her back to the congregation. Now she rises from the Coronation chair and walks to a raised throne in the centre of the theatre. The churchmen and the peers around her lift her into the throne as the archbishop exhorts her:

"Stand firm, and hold fast from henceforth the seat and state of royal and imperial dignity, which is this day delivered unto you. . ."

The newly-crowned Queen receives the homage of the princes and peers. The archbishop of Canterbury and the other bishops first kneel round the throne swearing to be "faithful and true." Then the Duke of Edinburgh kneels before the woman who is his wife but also his Queen. Placing his hands between those of Elizabeth he pledges to "become your liege man of life and limb." Rising from his knees he touches the crown, then, bending, kisses the Queen's left cheek.

DUKES PLEDGE

The Duke of Gloucester, the Queen's uncle, and the young Duke of Kent, her cousin, come to the throne, to pledge themselves similarly. Then the senior peers of each degree.

The Queen descends from her throne to the steps of the altar where, laying aside her crown, the sceptre and the rod, she kneels for communion.

The communion service marks the end of the Coronation rites. The Queen receives back her crown, leaves her throne and passes through the theatre out of sight to a part of the abbey called the recess.

The ceremony is over. It began at 11:15. The time now is 1:45.

His work consisted of handling production and drilling problems in the mid-continent area for this company in the United States. Since 1945 Mr. Palmer operated his own business as a drilling contractor and, through farmout leases from different major oil companies, acquired a substantial interest in 8 producing wells in Wood County, Texas. In May, 1951, he moved 2 drilling rigs to Canada. These rigs have been operating for Sohio, Standard Oil of Ohio, Socony Vacuum and other of their associates. He drilled Socony Vacuum's first successful oil well in Saskatchewan at Fosterton No. 1, which is largely responsible for the intensive drilling programme which is now going on in Saskatchewan. A third major drilling rig has been acquired and is currently drilling an 8,000 foot test for Sun Oil Company approximately 150 miles south-west of Regina.

Texas Interests

Properties

The acreage in Texas held by the Company's wholly-owned subsidiary, Palmer Oil & Gas Company, Inc., consists of working interests in four separate leases all located in Wood County, Texas, approximately 100 miles due east of Dallas. On these four leases there are 8 producing oil wells and two locations to be drilled. The Company's interest (through its Texas subsidiary) in proven and possible undrilled reserves has been established at 629,389 barrels of crude oil.

Canadian Interests

The Company's interest in the Maidstone heavy crude field in Saskatchewan is regarded as a very important asset. Palmer Oil Development Co. Limited owns a 97½% net interest in approximately 1,280 acres. Two important oil companies have developed five wells in the Maidstone field which are all indicated commercial producers. These two companies are currently engaged in a 40-well development programme.

Earnings

It is anticipated that the earnings of the Company will cover the amounts necessary to service its Debentures by a satisfactory margin. Interest on the Debentures amounts to a maximum of $55,000 per annum. The profits from the Company's Canadian drilling operations should produce a profit available for Debenture interest of over $250,000 per annum before development costs, depletion, depreciation and taxes on income.

Millbrook Reformatory Quashed?

With considerable aplomb the Ontario Department of Reform Institutions, presided over by the Hon. John Foote, announced last year that a large new reformatory would be built near Millbrook. This institution of "maximum security" was to house the tough ten per cent. of prisoners from other reformatories. The decision to build the Millbrook reformatory was taken after disturbances in other reformatories. It was felt that if the toughies were segregated and given a sterner regimen than other Provincial institutions offer, the criminals most susceptible to reform would have a better chance, and the other institutions would be freer to provide that chance. Now there is a report that the land for the Millbrook reformatory has not been bought, that no plans have been made, and that the whole project is being postponed, if not abandoned.

* * *

The reasons advanced for this abrupt change are shocking, considering the Department's apparently earnest desire to reform and rehabilitate prisoners. It would cost too much money. Or rather, it would be an extra charge against the Provincial treasury. If the Millbrook institution existed, some persons in Queen's Park or Mr. Foote's department fear that magistrates would sentence offenders to Millbrook rather than to the Federal penitentiary. The latter is paid for by the Dominion Government; Ontario reform institutions by the Provincial.

* * *

This seems a pretty callous reason, or a shabby attitude towards reform. If the proposed Millbrook institution had, a year ago, a useful and necessary place in the Province's efforts to deal humanely with law-breakers and delinquents, has that place suddenly disappeared? Is the policy of the Department of Reform Institutions and the Provincial Government in dealing with one of Ontario's greatest social problems—the treatment of law-breakers—decided by division of the costs? Specious financing, spurious sociology.

* * *

It has not been argued that another reformatory is unnecessary, or that one of the existing places could be made over into a "maximum security" institution. The number of Ontario persons in jails, reformatories and prisons indicates that more, not fewer, high walls and barred windows are necessary. The number has become appallingly great—Ontario is sending more persons to jail than all of England and Wales does. The Ontario Government should provide more space for offenders and take steps to reduce their mounting numbers. Thus it would seem that the Millbrook institution should be built, and at the same time, the parole system should be radically revised, as a means of rehabilitation and prevention of repeated offences.

Jobs For Men Growing Old

Since the end of the Great War there has been an "accent on youth". Conversely this has seriously affected the attitude towards and of older people, especially older workers in industry and business, or those seeking jobs. There has been an increasing tendency to put older people on the shelf, either withdrawing them from employment (pensioning them) or rejecting their applications for jobs. This prejudice against older people is both fallacious and harmful.

From a national point of view it is uneconomic to fire or pension workers merely because they have reached a chronological age of, say, 65. It is unnecessarily wasteful to refuse to hire a man because he is over 40. Canada's population is aging. To attempt to keep all its people aged 65 or 70 or more out of gainful employment imposes a heavy burden on employed younger people. In 1881 the number of Canadians over 40 made up only twenty per cent. of the population. By 1951 this had increased to thirty-two per cent. This poses a serious problem in the face of early retirement policies and the tendency of employers to reject male applicants for jobs aged 40 or more (and women over 35).

It is also a serious social problem. Older people are healthier and likely to live longer than in earlier generations. Yet new custom and prejudice demand that they quit their jobs while they are often still at the peak of living and efficient work. As for men aged 40 to 50 seeking new jobs and being turned down because of their age—what can be more disheartening?

A memorandum entitled "The Problem of The Older Worker" prepared for the National Advisory Council on Manpower (and printed by the Department of Labour) sets down not only the Canadian economic and social problems, but counters some of the prejudices with proven facts.

The greatest myth is that man is old because of his years. He is not. The number of years a person has lived is no sure basis for estimating his capabilities. Far more accurate is a consideration of his physical and mental condition.

It has been scientifically established that there are no differences in efficiency in the performance of moderate work between the ages of 17 and 71 years. By "moderate work" is meant the kind of work most people do. Few jobs require a man to be an athlete. It is significant that the sports records for all the sprints are held by youngsters, but the marathon records are held by men of 38 and 45. A leading American geriatrician states that "endurance of a certain type, for the long, slow grind, the continuous type of labour operation, increases. As speed declines, skill is increased with practice, and as strength declines, judgement increases. The mental changes are not all decline either. There is some depreciation in the ability to learn, but it is extraordinarily less than the average person assumes." You can teach an old dog new tricks, if the old dog wants to learn and if the teacher is smarter than the animal.

American labour figures show that absenteeism is less between the ages of 40 and 75 than between 20 and 40. The reliability of older workers is greater. The lowest accident rate occurs between 50 and 75, the highest between 20 and 30. Does age slow down productivity? Only very slightly. Even on jobs requiring energy and speed, the decline from age 50 to 75 is slight, and it varies with the occupation.

A. R. Mosher, of the Canadian Congress of Labour, puts the right and capacity of older workers to gainful employment this way:

"It is noteworthy that, while industry and government lay down a fixed retiring age of 65, persons who are self-employed, running a grocery, a bookstore, or a cigar-stand may continue to earn a good livelihood, and manage their affairs efficiently even in their eighties. The same observation applies to farmers, who are usually quite capable of operating their farms, from an administrative standpoint, at least, until they reach an advanced age.

"It seems to me that a definite change of policy with regard to older persons is essential. I firmly believe that, so long as an older worker has any contribution to make towards the production capacity of the nation, he should be permitted to make it. Not only is this important from the standpoint of increased production, which is essential to the improvement of living standards, but it is also important from the standpoint of the older person himself."

The public attitude should be changed, and retirement plans made more flexible.

Mr. Guinness's "A"

For several weeks we have been receiving information from the Stratford Shakespearean Festival—the Canadian one—and we have reluctantly confided most of it to the waste-paper basket, as we have not room to print it. But yesterday we were struck by the following note: "Alec Guinness' concern upon arrival in Canada to star in the Shakespearean Festival taking place in Stratford this summer is with the broad English "a" which he plans to modify to fit in with the harder vowel sounds that will be used by the general Canadian-American cast."

We hope that Mr. Guinness will not lose too much sleep over this. Like most Canadian movie-goers we are familiar with his work, and his voice, and we know that he hasn't a really broad English "a" at all—certainly not so broad that we are in any danger of misunderstanding anything that he says. Nor are we sure that we understand that remark about the "harder vowel sounds" which will be used by the rest of the cast. We know many of the actors who will appear at Stratford personally, and so do many of our readers, for they have appeared in Peterborough in the Summer Theatre; they speak very pleasantly, as actors should, and we are sure that they and Mr. Guinness will have no difficulty in meeting on some common "a".

We are not sure whether we should offer our advice to Mr. Guinness or to whoever it is that prepares the publicity blurbs for the Festival, but we should like to say this: Canada is quite familiar with English voices and with English actors. We have, after all, seen all of the great ones of the past 150 years in this country; we thoroughly enjoyed Edmund Kean, and made him an Indian chief when he played in Canada; Irving and Gielgud were somewhat too austere to be made chiefs, but we conferred that distinction on Forbes-Robertson and Martin-Harvey. We did so, not because they tried to speak like Canadians, but because they were great actors who gave us of their best. Let Mr. Guinness do the same, and he too may return to England with a war-bonnet in his luggage, and a splendid Indian name with which to astonish his friends.

The Journal of Samuel Marchbanks

SUNDAY: For the first picnic of the season today and found when walking a narrow plank between two points that the vertigo from which I have suffered for years is still with me. I call it vertigo, but other people call it dizziness, which suggests an unseemly frivolity. But it is really a simple case of unusually bad head for heights of any sort. Doctors have explored me searchingly for the cause of this ailment, but without success. People who dabble in psychiatry have suggested that it is attributable to several murky possibilities in my infancy. But nothing does me any good. On any sort of high or dangerous place I am seized with the desire to drop to my knees and crawl back to safety as fast as possible. My own diagnosis of this trouble is sheer cowardice; I am afraid of heights. Some people are steeplejacks; some are plateaujacks, and I accept my position among the latter philosophically.

✧ ✧ ✧

MONDAY: My remarks in a recent instalment of this Journal about the delay of a TCA plane because of bad weather brings me a long letter today from the Weather Bureau of that institution. "TCA maintains a large staff of Indians, old shepherds, people with rheumatism and prophetic corns, and weather forecasters of every sort," it says. "We work on two fixed principles, which have been expressed scientifically thus:

Rain before seven
Don't fly till after eleven.

Red morning,
TCA's warning;
Red night,
TCA's delight.

by following these formulae to the letter we maintain a record of safety which is second to none." I am glad to have this information. Weather forecasting is a matter of lifelong interest to me, but as I am of Welsh descent I am no good at it myself. Welshmen, moved by deep racial memory, always predict that it will rain, and carry umbrellas even in the Sahara. They are one of the few forms of submarine life still widely extant in the modern world.

✧ ✧ ✧

TUESDAY: After many years of amateur photography I have decided that henceforth I shall keep my art to myself; it is fatal to show people pictures that one has taken of them, for the aim of the photographer and the aim of the sitter cannot be reconciled. The photographer yearns for a striking picture. "Look at the skin texture in that one!" I burble, showing a prized print. "You've made me look like an elephant with enlarged pores," says the subject, sourly. "There's action," I shriek, dancing with delight. "I'm all bottom," says the subject, who has been snapped while scrambling over a fence. Men are worse than women. Women simply want to look beautiful in pictures; men want to look strong and noble, and when you catch them in a characteristic pose (mouth open, bald spot well lighted, and one hand scratching meditatively) they are cross, and become bellicose if you say that they held that pose for more than two hours without a variation. I am not a candid camera fiend; I do not try to make people look worse than they are. But I am not a wizard, and I cannot make a man in a dirty shirt look like one of the Ten Best Dressed. Henceforth I shall take pictures for no eye but my own.

✧ ✧ ✧

WEDNESDAY: Was introduced to a lady this evening who said, "Well, and do you still do any writing on the side?" I simpered and said, "Oh, a little, you know," for I was so thunderstruck that I could not collect my wits in time to make a proper rejoinder. But I made a speech to her in my head, afterward, which ran thus: "Woman, for almost all of adult life I have lived by the pen, with some assistance from the typewriter and the printing press. I do not write 'on the side' as you insultingly suggest. I write morning, noon and night. When I am not actually engaged in the physical act of writing I am thinking about writing — my own and other people's. Writing is my business and my pleasure, my cross and my salvation, my joy and my sorrow." But it would have been foolish to say this aloud. There are many millions of people who think that writing, and painting, and music are things which their practitioners pick up in an idle hour; they have no conception of the demands which these apparently trivial pastimes make upon those who are committed to them. Such people live in a world which is as strange to me as the Mountains of the Moon.

✧ ✧ ✧

THURSDAY: Received a new twenty-five cent piece in change, bearing the legend "Elizabeth II Dei Gratia Regina." I think it should be "Elizabetha." It is not pretty to mix up Latin and English in an inscription of this kind, and in the coins of George V and George VI it was not done; they were both "Georgius." I am not great hand at the Latin tongue, but there seems to be something fishy about this — as fishy as the Comic Valentine stamp of the Queen which we have recently been issued, in which she appears like a head stamped on a cough lozenge. Let those familiar with the tongue of Vergil and Tully explain this matter, if they can.

✧ ✧ ✧

FRIDAY: Read a piece in a magazine by a man who urged everybody to retire earlier, and live longer. But we can't all retire at 45 or 50; we must get money to keep body and soul together. Many people, of course, compromise in this matter: they continue to work physically as long as they can, but they retire mentally at a very early age (sometimes as young as 14), and live on their small intellectual capital for the rest of their lives. Sometimes their last forty years or so is spent in extreme mental poverty, but they don't seem to mind; they have lots of mental leisure, and when the breeze blows in their left ear it soon whistles out their right, as fresh as ever, making a pleasant, hollow sound the while which issues from their mouths in the form of conversation. I am surprised that this sort of early retirement does not attract more attention from the Department of Health and Welfare. Surely some sort of pension could be devised for people who have ceased to think? A few ready-made opinions, of a size to fit any head, might surely be distributed? The problem is to find a way of introducing them into the skull without tiresome effort.

✧ ✧ ✧

SATURDAY: Saw a circus a few weeks ago at which a man did an extraordinary thing. He balanced on one leg on a slack-wire about six feet above ground, and an assistant threw cups and saucers at him; he caught these deftly with his free foot, and kicked them on top of his head in a neat pile—a saucer, a cup, until there were half a dozen balanced on his head. He then kicked a teapot to the top of the heap, and as a final act of bravado, kicked a teaspoon into the teapot! Thunderous applause! Yet I have pondered since upon this strange way of earning a living. What an austere life that man must lead! How he must be haunted by the dreadful demands of his profession! Undoubtedly he goes to bed early every night, to be fresh for his trick. Certainly he cannot drink or smoke, and I doubt if he drinks tea or coffee. He dares not overeat, for fear that an untimely pang, or a simple hiccup, may cause him to drop all that crockery upon which his life depends. He is a slave to half a dozen teacups, a teapot and a spoon. It seems a great price to pay for a large income and the applause of the mob, but there are people who will do anything.

THE TINDERBOX

Walter Mitty At The Wheel

(OTTAWA CITIZEN)

A DISTURBING number of automobile accidents has coincided with the Junior Board of Trade's safety campaign. In his column in The Citizen the other day, Sydney Harris may have over-estimated the role of mental attitudes in causing crashes on the roads. He suggested that most of the time the blame could be placed on drivers who, plagued by troubles at work or at home, succumb to a temporarily irresponsible mood—feel a sense of release, and a sense of power, with the result that they take chances. Beyond doubt, however the factor of driver attitude is of major importance to safety.

In the James Thurber story, and the amusing film that starred Danny Kaye, Walter Mitty was out of this world while performing such routine tasks as chauffeuring his wife on a shopping expedition. He was busy playing the hero in some dramatic episode of his own imagining. Just so does many an automobile owner begin to lose touch with reality when he gets behind the wheel.

Especially if his life is ordinarily not very exciting, the driver may become convinced that people will think him quite important if he clips along briskly. He may fancy himself as the executive type, with important deals on hand, or a diplomat on urgent business involving the fate of nations. He may regard other drivers with impatience, and the lower order of pedestrians with contempt.

Even more dangerous than the full-grown Walter Mitty is his day-dreaming adolescent counterpart. The teen-ager has a still vaguer grasp of the potentially destructive power in an automobile's weight and speed. He likes to show off; his judgement is probably half-baked; his decisions may be affected for the worse by high spirits, or by the over-confidence of a precocious sense of maturity.

No system of testing and checking drivers can eliminate the danger from those who do not discipline their minds. But if safety education makes the danger clear, more people will be alert to keep their attitudes business-like and their imaginations under control while driving on the streets and highways.

Training Coronation Commentators

(BBC Bulletin)

Eighteen experienced broadcasters from various parts of Great Britain will take part in the BBC's great Coronation Day programme, as will many others from the Commonwealth and a large number from the BBC's European and other External Services.

To ensure that the commentators of the BBC's External Services will do their job efficiently more than eighty members of the staff, including five women, have been engaged in training courses for some time. The elementary course consisted of looking from the windows of Bush House, headquarters of the European Service, on to the Strand below and giving short commentaries on the London scene. These were recorded and played back to the pupils who then passed to the intermediate stage, where they learnt to give commentaries on films of great ceremonial events.

Once they had mastered this difficult technique they passed on to the third stage which included practical work at an outside broadcasting point in front of Buckingham Palace. Here two pupils a day will receive instruction until the Coronation, making sure that new commentators will know all they need to know before the great day arrives. Some of the commentators, of twenty-three nationalities, had never done this type of broadcast before, but one in particular, a Slovak, has proved to be a great find with a flair for running commentary.

The visiting Commonwealth broadcasters taking part in the BBC programme need no instruction in the art of commentary but they will join the BBC commentators at a meeting before Coronation Day and be given the theme to which each will speak to avoid duplication. Every other foreign commentator will be presented by the BBC with a folder, giving all possible information about the ceremony, the buildings on the route and any other relevant data.

Most important is a list of Dos and Don'ts, containing an injunction never to refer to the horses that draw the Coronation coach as the Windsor Greys; the animals are no longer stabled Windsor and are simply called the Greys; the King's Troop of the Royal Horse Artillery is correct, for it is the express wish of Her Majesty the Queen that they should continue to hold this title in memory of her father: the traditional black headdress of the Brigade of Guards are bearskins and not busbies; and so on.

No commentator on June 2 will have an easy job, but the BBC is doing all it can to smooth the way for them all.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that He is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any breath, and all things . . . For in Him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said. For we are also His offspring. (Acts 17:24, 25, 28.)

✧ ✧ ✧

How excellent is Thy loving kindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of Thy house; and Thou shalt make them drink of the river of Thy pleasures. For with Thee is the fountain of life: in Thy light shall we see light. (Ps. 37: 7-9.)

✧ ✧ ✧

In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee. (Isa. 26: 1-3.)

✧ ✧ ✧

For we know that if our earthy house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens . . . For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. (II Cor. 5: 14.)

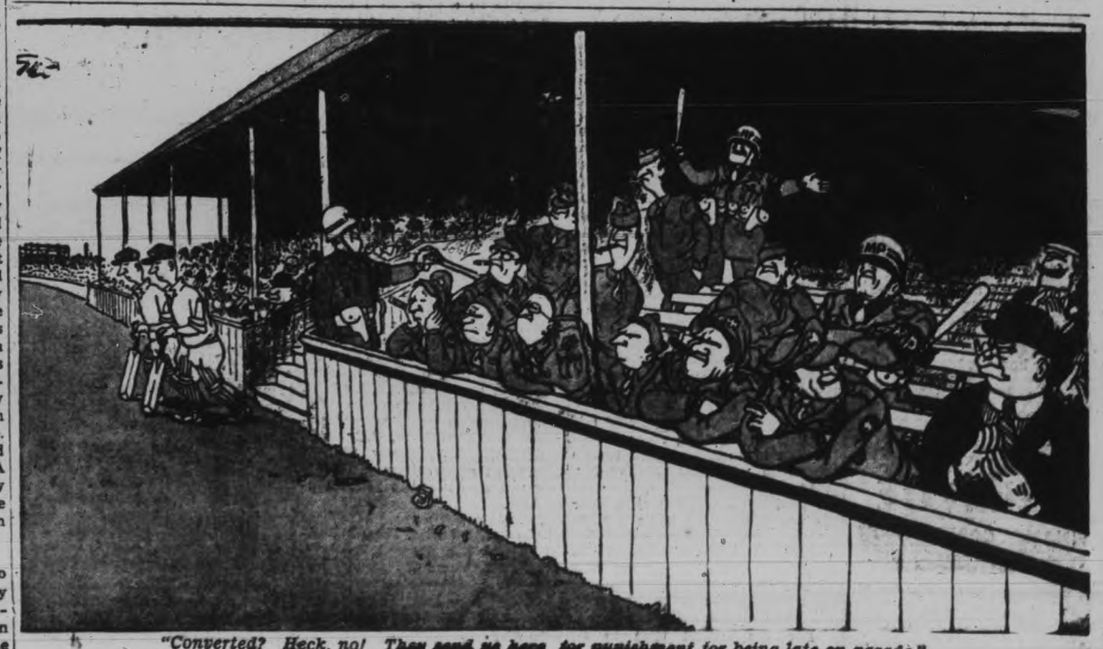
A young man and his girl were riding out in the country on horseback. As they stopped, for a rest, the two horses rubbed noses affectionately.

"Ah, me," said the young man, "that is what I'd like to do."

"Well, go ahead," said the girl, "it's your horse."



Young Businessman

(Windsor Star)

A young businessman recently arrived in England, by air, to visit relatives. He was 11-year-old Billy Charbonneau of Weston, born overseas of a wartime marriage. He had paid his own way, with his own money, and he still had some left over for incidental expenses.

Young Billy is a newsboy, and a smart one. He decided he would make the trip on his own, and he didn't have to ask anybody to lend him money.

This illustrates the advantage gained by young boys and girls who have paper routes. It isn't just that they earn money, though this is valuable training and often a very real help to families of modest means. The experience gained in handling money and in meeting people promotes self-reliance. His parents had no qualms about letting Billy head off on his own on the overseas trip.

110 Yrs. Of Constant Service Of Warsaw Stage Coaches; Elias Thompson's Long Run

BY RICHARD F. CHOATE

Canada in the relatively short span of its history has been served, too, by many coach lines, the vehicles here being fashioned to meet the extreme conditions imposed by our climate. But whether wheels or runners were employed, the horse - drawn conveyances which travelled over the crude pioneer roads were not lacking an aura of romance and color.

In the earlier days some of these life-lines of communication followed the Old World patterns. But stages of the type which operated on the routes along "The Front" between Toronto and Montreal, such as those of the historic "Weller Line" were not always serviceable, as lateral travel penetrated more and more deeply into the Hinterland.

BLETCHER COACH

For many years in pre-railway times the coach lines of Barnabas Bletcher (progentior of Mr. William B. Bletcher of Peterborough) provided mail and other carrier services between Port Hope and Peterborough. From that time on, stage lines multiplied until in the mid-Victorian era they criss- crossed Peterborough and continguous counties.

Though the vehicles used on some of these lines were relatively small and of crude construction, they were, nevertheless, essentially "stages", of diversified usefulness. The unbroken service of 110 years provided by the Warsaw Stage, which has linked Dummer, Douro and Peterborough, has been referred to earlier in these articles.

The anniversary reminds us that the record for length of service on this mail route was established by Elias Thompson, who retired recently on completing 23½ years as driver, and is now living in Warsaw. His successor is L. Blackwell of Peterborough.

THOMPSON STAGE

Elias Thompson's service, of course, was in the motorized age. His mail stage, a covered truck, carried also, as usual, passengers and freight. Beginning on April 1, 1928, he drove the truck continuously, with the exception of one week at Christmas, that year. In his 23½ years of daily journeys he missed only five days. In his first 12 years he had no days off except Sundays. Since then the statutory holidays have been in effect.

"I have driven the stage all the time myself", Mr. Thompson recalls, "excepting for a break of a week and a half because of illness."

SIDE-SADDLE FOLEY

In the earliest days of rough trails the mail was often carried on horseback. Almira Grover Foley, a dashing and skilful side-saddle equestrienne, who was donor of the continuing Trust for Peterborough widows and orphans, once acted thus as courier on the Norwood-Westwood route.

From the "Barney" Bletcher coach route stemmed many other lines. Thomas Eastland, who came to Cobourg from Yorkshire with his family in 1831, married a daughter of Mr. Bletcher when he was 28 years old and established the first livery-stable in Peterborough. He then began to take mail-carrying contracts.

First, he ran between Peterborough and Bobcaygeon, then added the Peterborough-Lakefield and Peterborough - Chemong services. Longer and rougher was his later route to Apsley and Cheddar, 60 miles northeast of Peterborough. In 1867, he opened a store at Apsley. He also had a store at Lakefield. In 1880 his son built the Eastland House hotel in Apsley.

Canada's Confederation Day, July 1, 1867, found Peterborough people in a flurry of excitement over the reported gold strike in Hastings County. Stage coaches were requisitioned for the heavy travel of the day. Many passengers were carried to Marmora. At least one of the coaches was built in Albany, N.Y. J. A. Johnson, stage proprietor and hotel manager of Norwood, extended his services, advertising: "Peterborough to the Gold Mines". Leaving Peterborough at 2:30 p.m., the stage "arrived at Norwood the same evening."

BEFORE IRON HORSE

Peterborough people of today will do well to reflect a little on the vastness of their indebtedness to the stalwart, resourceful drivers of the mail stages on the network of lines which covered the county in the days when the Iron Horse was not. In some sections the mail stages still operate as links between distributing centres of the rural free delivery system.

"Too little and too late!" may be the verdict of the Future Historian when he comes to sift out the pitifully meagre data assembled by Peterborough people regarding the brave old days, such as those when Stage Coaching was in Flower. And what will the same historian have to say when he looks back upon the Peterborough people of our present year of grace, A.D. 1952, who have the wealth and the facilities to establish a Historical Society and a museum to house the fast-vanishing records and relics of the county which are treasures beyond price? What, indeed, can he say but "Hm-m, 1953, another year of shame when the peripatetic Food Tubes and Clothes Horses and Stuffed Shirts of Peterboruogh could do not better than reverse the words of St. Paul and proclaim themselves "Citizens of a Mean City"—too mean, too myo-

100,000 Yards Of Coronation Bunting

By JIM ENGLISH

Largest of the city's flagmakers is the J. J. Turner Co., now in its 80th year. It is producing flags for its fourth coronation. Edward VII, George V, George VI, have all been crowned since the company was founded in 1874 by J. J. Turner, Senior.

Other firms in the city producing flags, pennants and selling bunting for coronation displays are the J. A. Marchen Co. and the Canadian Flag Co.

None of them, as yet, can give an accurate estimate of how much material they will use by the time all coronation orders are filled. But there seems to be no doubt that it will run well over 100,000 yards.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

Not all of this is for Peterborough. Turner's are selling large numbers of flags to the government, along with an estimated 20,000 yards of plain bunting. Amount of bunting they believe will be used up in flags for government orders will run to more than 70,000 yards.

All of that is pure wool bunting, considered so far the best of flags. Bunting manufacturers are, however, experimenting with a nylon-wool mixture to make flags last longer. Naval signal pennants are made of this.

Wool bunting comes from England—the best, that is. The wool-nylon mixture is being made in Canada. Bunting is a fairly porous cloth with extra threads woven longtitudinally every six or seven inches to strengthen the material.

Turner's flag department at present is shot through with large flashes of red, while smaller patches of blue and white, along with Canadian crests, give color to an otherwise drab room.

ENSIGNS, NOT JACKS

Flag making for the coronation displays is in the home stretch. Most of the flags on order at Turner's are Dominion ensigns—the red ensign with the Canadian crest on the red field.

Turner's Dominion ensigns are sewn flags; only the crest on them is printed, and that because it would be far too complicated to sew.

Starting out with rectangles of red bunting, the various crosses of the Union Jack are sewn into the upper corner at the head (pole- or staff-end) of the flag. Then the crest is sewn on.

At this point, either a rope is sewn to the head of the flag or a sleeve is attached there. This depends on whether the flag is to be flown from a staff or a pole. For a staff, flags are made with a sleeve; for a pole, they are made with sisal rope attached to the head.

Sewing on flags is done for the most part with electric machines using double needles (for greater strength). Hand-sewing is infrequent, and at Truner's, done only to sew the sisal rope into the head of the flag. Here a sail-maker's needle and palm are used with heavy linen thread.

On inspecting tables, loose threads are removed and other faults checked before the flag is packaged.

FOUR DUTCH GIRLS

In Turner's flagmaking department there are 17 girls working, four of them Dutch girls who have come to Canada with the flood of post-war new Canadians. They are: Corry Angevaare, Betty van Hooydonk, Catherine Joore, and Rose Kock. Forelady of the flag department is Miss Helen Pringle.

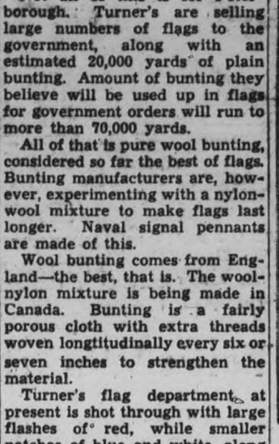
Beyond their flagmaking business, which is a fairly large one, Truner's make tents, awnings, canvas baskets for textile mills, golf bags, zip-bags, ice-cream cans, and a variety of other leather and textile goods.

The flags they make are confined mostly to Canadian flags—the Union Jack, the Dominion Ensign, provincial flags, and naval signal pennants for the Royal Canadian Navy.

FOUNDED IN 1874

The J. J. Turner Co. was founded in 1874 by J. J. Turner, Sr. It passed after his death in 1916 to his son, J. J. Turner, Jr., then to the four grandsons—John J., A. W., Reg. H. and W. F. Turner. A. W. Turner was president from 1942, when his father died, until 1949, when the firm passed from the family's hands.

President and general manager of J. J. Turner Co. now is Percy S. Dallin, who, with a group of city businessmen, bought the company in 1949.



The company has kept tents, awnings and flags as staples of production since its inception, and has added other items since.

Biggest flag made in Peterborough, and probably one of the largest made in Canada, was produced by Turner's shortly after the firm started. It was a 50-foot Union Jack. But for what celebration it was, nobody seems to remember.

Largest made currently is a 24-foot flag. But for the average householder who wants to decorate his home with a flag for the coronation, a nine-foot ensign or jack would be more than large enough. They cost in the neighborhood of $15, plus 10 per cent government sales tax.

HANDFUL OF CRESTS that will be sewn to the Canadian ensign are displayed by Teresa Heath.

WHIRRING SEWING MACHINES, such as those operated by Rose Kock, foreground, and Mrs. Earl Huston, will process 75,000 yards of wool bunting to meet the demand of Coronation Day decorations in all parts of the country. This is the fourth coronation for which the Turner company have supplied display material.

Your Garden:

Some Hints On Vegetables For Gardens, Big or Small

BY HENRY PREE (NEA)

The program of vegetable garden chores has been somewhat upset because this spring is off schedule—therefore— plant when the soil and weather seem right. Nothing is to be gained from working when the soil is wet, or sowing or setting out plants while the ground is still cold. Warm weather is essential to thrifty growth.

The old gardener, being very fond of lima beans, says to wait until the leaves on the trees are well out before sowing seed. Pole limas mature in from 11 to 13 weeks and they bear until frost.

Bush limas bear about 10 days sooner and may be harvested for about a month. Pole beans require strong poles, eight or nine feet tall. Be sure to set the poles at least a foot deep before planting. Plant beans one to two inches deep with eye down, a few beans to a pole.

Plant pole beans at north end of gardenso that they will not shade the other plants from sunlight. If two poles in one row are brought together with two poles in the next row at the top and all four poles are tied together in this position, it will not be necessary to sink the poles deep into the ground. They will hold each other up.

Those who lack time, space or patience, usually buy cabbage, broccoli, pepper, tomato and celery plants. Where onion sets are scarce, plants of these may be purchased cheaper, too.

The space between tomato plants may be occupied by lettuce, radishes, spinach, early beets or carrots, which will be out of the ground before the larger plants need the space .

This practice applies also to peppers, broccoli, egg plant and pole beans, between which small, quick crops may be grown. This is called "intercropping" or "companion cropping."

In a garden of limited space, sweet corn is a luxury crop. On a space 3x3 feet, you could grow about six or seven ears. Think what a crop of other vegetables that spot could produce! Corn is apt to shade other vegetables. It is also popular with borers and Japanese beetles. Yet home-grown corn on the dinner table is a great treat!

Vegetables produced from vines which ramble over the ground take up a great deal of room. These vine crops include cucumbers, melons, pumpkins, squash and sweet potatoes. These crops are very sensitive to cold and should not be planted until the weather is really warm. Bush squashes and cucumbers require less space.

When setting out cabbage, broccoli or cauliflower plants, protect them against root maggot by putting a collar of tar paper around the stem flush with the ground. This prevents the parent insect, which resembles a small house fly, from laying eggs near the plant.

Gardening Questions

Q—Is it necessary to start Portulaca plants from seeds indoors now or can one wait until the garden soil warms up?

A—Portulaca is easily grown from seed sown outdoors as soon as the ground becomes warm. The seed, which is very fine, must be covered very lightly or sown on top of the soil and firmed in. Be sure to sow in a warm, sunny location.

Q—Can you tell me how to get rid of the moss which has plagued our lawn for the past three years? While there are large trees in the yard there is considerable sunlight.

A—Moss is invariably an indication of an impoverished soil. So fertilize your lawn now with a mixture strong in phosphorous—like 6-10-4, using four pounds per 100 square feet. Mix with 10 times its bulk of sand, spread evenly, and rake in thoroughly. Repeat in midsummer and again in September.

Q—Is it possible to grow Hick's Yew from seed? If so, how?

A— Wash the seeds free from the pulp, sow in a flat or pot of sand that is kept suficiently moist to keep the seed from drying out. Place in a cold, dark place until spring and plant in a mixture of sand and peat moss in the open but covered with laths for shade. Germination usually takes a year. Do not allow the mixture to dry out and never have it soggy.

Don't forget to pluck faded and withered spring bulb blossoms from their stems as insurance that they'll bloom again next year. This helps plant by sending strength back to bulb.

A·F·I·E·L·D with NICK NICKELS

Of pickerel fishing so far this season, the less said of luck the better; there wasn't any to speak of. Nor shall we make any I-told-you-so predictions. Conditions are not just what we hoped they would be and so we must let Nature run her course and level off.

Harry, Charlie and Danny Jopling, Frank Rothchild and Gilly Gilliland took 24 of the nicest speckles you ever saw up in Haliburton last weekend; grandson Danny, boated nine of them. Their luck all came from appropriately-named Last Gasp Lake.

Well, Shiver My Timbers! . . . .

Cottagers who visited their wilderness hideouts over the holiday weekend found (a) everything in apple-pie order, (b) that winter boarders had done some damage to woodwork, bedding and things, (c) that their shoreline acres had taken on a new, and bare; look.

Barber Milt Fowler, C group, who is situated between Mac McCauley and Bill Hunter of Dundas on the west side of Chandos Lake, found at least 100 shoreline poplars had fallen to the incisors of beaver over the winter.

His property runs to the creek entrance of Black Duck-Anderson pot-hole lakes and the logging operation went into the making of a huge dam at that point. He is now shadeless and speechless and wonders what can be done about such matters. Deputy game warden Art Bott who saw the damage is wondering, too, and McCauley, of Scottish descent, is slapping extra insurance on his log cabin camp.

Was pleased to receive a publisher's copy of a book by Paul Provencher of Baie Comeau, P.Q., entitled 'I Live in the Woods.' A forestry engineer of long standing, I was not surprised at ebullient Paul writing something along those lines and making a smashing job of it. He trained Canadian Army personnel during World War II on bush survival and has packed the pages with wilderness information that only few men know of.

To judge the best bit in the book I would choose his overland trip from Sandgirt Lake to the Grand Falls in Labrador. Real high adventuring, this. Most interesting to me personally because I saw Paul and party off from our bush-flying base at Walker Lake for Sandgirt in that summer of '43. When a clumsy baggage-handler dropped Paul's best camera into the lake the Laurentian hills rolled to strong language for half an hour. And I don't blame him. Peterborough Nature Clubbers, get your hiking outfits together for your big outing in the Sturgeon Point area on May 30, leaving the City Hall at 1 p.m. sharp. Dr. Fletcher Sharp and birdman Jim Baillie are to be expedition leaders. It will be a red-letter day. In case of rain, marshal again same place, same time, a week later on June 6.

Cedar Lakes Park opened today officially and a goodly crowd were gathered there to look over all the work that has been done by the faithful, to plan it as a focal point for future outings and to pledge their help for development.

Some Late Spring Jottings

Mrs. (Capt.) Harold Young of "The Point" phoned to report a gleaming sheen on the river current at her front door; some thought it might have been a drift of poplar pollen but she doesn't. Any suggestions? . . . Mrs. George Kiff of 623 Montrose climbed the newsroom stairs to show me a freak trillium blossom that she picked north of Apsley; it had 11 petals and six sepals, all of them green . . . Heber Rogers killed a grass snake at his Kawartha Park cabin; this, too, was all green and not to be confused with the ordinary striped garter snake. (Thanks to PCVS scientist V. R. Henry for this research) . . . Surfboard riding is so common place that it rarely gets a second look, except when a young siren climbs aboard. Within minutes of take-off, I counted 16 young males with crew cuts and rolled-up dungarees ogling from a floating dock last Sunday; that the dock almost sank under their combined weight didn't make them budge an inch. In spring, as the poet fellow says, young men's thoughts turn . . .

NHL Deal May Reunite Bentley Brothers

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatoon Quakers will allow Doug Bentley to decide himself whether he will go to New York Rangers of the National Hockey League as assistant coach.

Both Doug and the club which owns his contract said Thursday night that nothing has been decided yet on the question.

Norman Couch, manager of Quakers of the Western Hockey League, said nothing likely will be decided in the near future.

At Delisle, Sask., Doug said:

"I have nothing to say about it now and won't likely know for some time what my decision will be."

Frank Boucher, general manager of the Rangers, spent a day and a half in Saskatoon discussing hockey matters with the Quaker manager, and said he would like to re-unite the Bentley brothers, Doug and Max, with New York.

Boucher said that if Rangers could make a deal for Max, who is the property of Toronto Maple Leafs, and the Quakers would loan New York their playing-coach, Doug, for one season, it would be a big lift to the Rangers and a great drawing card all around the National League circuit.

The New York general manager also announced that theRang ers' full training camp—pros and amateurs—would be held at the Saskatoon Arena starting about Sept. 1.

PLATE CONTENDER—Food For Thot, British Columbia contender for the Queen's Plate, has arrived in Toronto for the 94th running of the spring classic June 2. The three-year-old son of Cum Laude was bred and is owned by Dr. L. H. Appleby, prominent Vancouver surgeon. Before coming east, the colt had a workout of seven furlongs in the sparkling time of 1.27. He is shown with his groom, Ernie Marginson.

Toronto Whips Rochester 9-2, Royals Win 5-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The top teams in the International League showed why they are tops Friday night, the first-place Buffalo Bisons downing Syracuse 10-7, the second-place Toronto Leafs turning back Rochester 9-2 and Montreal Royals trouncing Springfield 5-1 to move into third place ahead of Rochester.

The Bisons had come from behind to down the seventh-place Chiefs who had grabbed a 6-1 lead in the first two innings.

BIG INNING

The Herd stampeded three hurlers for six runs in the fourth on five of their 14 hits, two walks and an error. They notched three more runs in the eighth on Al Lakeman's homer, a pass, an error and Buddy Hicks' single.

At Toronto five Leaf players stole bases. Mike Goliat scored the first Toronto run in the fourth when he and Cliff Mapes executed a double steal.

Rochester took a brief 21 lead in the fifth but Toronto notched four runs in the fifth, one each in the sixth and seventh and two in the eighth. Gerry Fahr went the route for the Leafs.

At Montreal, Tom Lasorda was star of the evening as he drove in two runs and struck out 10 men. Rocky Nelson's homer in the first inning, with one on, proved enough for the win but Lasorda made certain with a double in the second with two aboard.

Preakness Crisis In Career Of Native Dancer

BALTIMORE (AP)—It's only a matter of hours now until it is settled in the $100,000 added Preakness whether Native Dancer could go on to join the exclusive club of great race horses or the crowd of merely good thoroughbreds.

If one of the six other three-year-old colts hangs a second defeat on Alfred G. Vanderbilt's grey charger this afternoon it will just about stop all the talk of immortality.

But an impressive triumph, on the other hand, will make his only defeat in the Kentucky Derby three weeks ago excusable as bad racing luck.

DARK STAR'S CHANCE

By the same token, Dark Star could zoom into the forefront at least in the three-year-old championship race by duplicating his Derby triumph. The Harry Guggenheim colt then would have two legs on the cherished triple crown with the Belmont Stakes June 16 remaining.

All of them except Tahitian King and Jamie K already were beaten by Dark Star in the Derby although Royal Bay Gem came back Monday to turn the tables in the Preakness Prep.

Men's City Softball League opening twin bill was washed out of Ashburnham Bowl the other night, but the prize draws will be made at the double-header next Tuesday eve. UEW plays Seabrooke's at seven that night, with the TPT Petes meeting Revoy's in the nightcap. Thursday tilts are: Revoys vs. UE and Seabrooke vs. Petes. The two postponed jousts will have to be worked in later by Prexy Bob Batley and his executive. Some new players were noted in the first lineups, including Tony Kotowski at second for Howie Dalton's UE squad, and some former players have returned after an absence. Many of the regulars are on deck again, and it shapes up as a lively circuit for the next few months.

Word comes through that the Peterborough Pats open their OLA junior 'A" campaign in Brampton next Thursday, and their first home game is the following Saturday against St. Catharines in Miller Bowl. Schedule should be out shortly. Pats have a number of newcomers in the lineup, chaps like Gary Smith and Ivan Thomas of Oswego, Dave Russell of Long Branch, George Kapasky from Mimico, as well as Gary Feltham, Al McGary and Ray Ward who hail from Huntsville. Local lads are Carl Brioux, Jerry O'Reilly, Bob Allen, Frank Farley, Bob Curtis, Al Foote, Bob McDougall, Ken Woodgate, Bob Howe, Jack Chapman and Pat Brennan. Yes, Doug Miller's team has sights set on the Minto Cup.

Mounties Get Their Men

A senior OLA clipping from St. Catharines: "The Mimico manager phoned in the lineup Wednesday and it certainly bears little resemblance to the club which was soundly thrashed by Peterborough Trailermen in the opening game. Included in the list of definite starters are Bill Baragar (whom A's hoped to get), Fred Sandford, Stan Kapasky, Ross Kelly, Ken Lytle (scoring sensation of 1952), Pop Chard, Bill Horwood, veteran Bern Pritchard and Fraser Rock. Coach Chuck Davidson also has real hopes that Ken Dixon will sport a Mimico jersey for the first time this season." Glad to hear the Mounties are building up and ironing out financial differences with the better plays. But what about Denny Peterson?

Petes are off to Brampton tonight and have Fergus here Monday for a busy gutted-stick weekend. Coach Nibs Chambers of the Thistles is busy building, also. He has Don Campbell, Don McWhirter, Harry Kazarian and Mathieson of Owen Sound, and has signed Bill Ailum. Marlowe Woods and Bob Buchanan are expected out, as well, while Fergus players include Jim Halls (that big guy who fought Don Ashbee here in a torrid scrap a year ago), Ron Landoni, Frank Chambers, Stan Abbott, J. J. Hill—he and Wipper had their differences—Don and Bob Gear, Bob Dobbie, Doug Smith, Jim Robertson, Russ Black and Goalie Ralph Speck, no stranger to Peterborough fandom. We don't look for the Thistles to be a soft a touch at all.

Rugged Yorks Rap Petes

Toronto Yorks beat Petes 14-11 here last e'en for the locals' first home loss in schedule play in something like three years. You can't spot a packed OLA senior club like the men of McPhail a hefty first-half lead and expect to catch 'em later. Petes finished stronger but were too far in arrears when they staged their desperation drive. A typical Yorks-Petes' scrap, rugged and keen all the way, with some smart plays shown by both teams. Jerry Fitzgerald was a sunburn absentee for the Thorpe team, while George Masters left the Yorks' lineup in the third with a fractured nose. We hear Toronto has signed big Merv McKenzie, who had previously promised to play here if he played at all. A fair-sized crowd last night considering the weather.

Orfuns' grid president, Dr. Don Aitken, advises us that so far he has not received word from Tony Kotowski whether the latter is willing or not to coach the club again at the salary set. He was to have notified Dr. Aitken by last Wednesday night. If the executive have no word from him by their next meeting—this coming Wednesday—they will be prepared to look elsewhere for a coach. Orfuns' prexy also informs us that the club has nothing whatsoever to do with a party (operating from a local hotel room) who is getting ads for a rugby football program sheet for a "Central Ontario Rugby Union". Something we've never heard of, as a matter of fact. Police are checking into it.

Oshawa Wins In Guelph Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brantford Red Sox have taken over first place in the Senior Intercounty Baseball League from London Majors. They did it Friday night with a 4-3 victory over the Majors.

The Brantford-London first-place battle was one of three games played. Four were scheduled, but cold weather forced postponement of the Waterloo-Kitchener game. Oshawa Merchants broke a string of four consecutive losses with a 5-4 win over Guelph Maple Leafs and St. Thomas Elgins defeated Galt Terriers 6-3.

The Niagara District Senior Baseball League made its 1953 debut Friday night with Shoemakers Televisors getting away to a successful start with a 6-2 win over Chippawa Kerrios.

Brantford came from behind a 3-0 deficit in the first inning for their victory. A walk by Bobby Rose and doubles by Gord MacKon, Lemy Watson and Hal Kard had given Majors a three-run lead in the first inning.

St. Peter's Athletes Hold Meet Records

Three of St. Peter's High School athletes made an excellent showing Friday at the third annual track and field meet of the Ontario Catholic Athletic Conference. Bill Forestell raced to a junior 880 record, and Jim Ayotte tied for the junior high jump mark. Dink Masterson led in the intermediate jump. St. Peter's finished third witn 43½ points, St. Mike's winning handily with 175½ after taking 24 of the 32 events. Kitchener St. Jerome's was second with 56.

Two Canadian interscholastic records were broken at the meet. Jerry Foreman of St. Michael's flashed over the 220 yard senior course in 22.5 seconds. The previous mark was 22.6 held by Jack Hobbs of Windsor Assumption and Joe Duffy of Hamilton Cathedral High. Gerry Retty, hurled the discus 128 feet, 4½ inches, to put two feet, five nichos on top of the Canadian senior record set by Orillia's Wally Brown back in 1936.

Toronto West Yorks Win Over The Petes, 14-11 In Hard Senior OLA Fray

Pulling something of an upset in the young OLA senior "A" season here last night, Toronto West Yorks downed the Petes' Trailermen by a 14-11 count before more than 1,200 fans. Cold, damp weather kept the crowd down, but those on deck saw a rugged, keen contest from start to finish, with Yorks having a slight edge on play. They looked better in the first half, leading 3-1 in the initial inning and having a 6-2 bulge in the second stanza. Petes fought back to outscore them 4-2 in the third and 4-3 in the fourth but couldn't catch up. Late in the first half, the McPhail men were leading the Thorpe team by an 8-1 score.

SEVEN APIECE

Referees Joe Murphy and Piper Bain handed out seven penalties apiece, including several five-minute majors for injury or attempt to injure. George Masters of Yorks suffered a fractured nose in the third period when checked hard near the home goal. Both teams laid on the gad from the first faceoff in a typical Yorks-Petes lacrosse struggle. The visitors didn't have Merv McKenzie, who has just signed with them, in their lineup for this game.

Some fine lacrosse was served up, with many picture plays by the smart opponents. The Petes didn't get untracked properly in the first two quarters, and a sizzling spurt by the Yorks early in the second period when they scored four goals within four minutes really spelled the difference. They also had ace goaltending from George Johnston who repeatedly robbed the homesters of almost-sure tallies. Moon Wootton was at his best in the last half. The Petes were minus Jerry Fitzgerald, recovering from a bad dose of sunburn.

LED THE WAY

Jim McNulty and George Masters starred on the attack for West Yorks with four goals each. Joe McNulty and Tony D'Amico clicked for two apiece, singles going to Leo Teatro and Kenny Croft. Teatro aided on a pair, also, as single assists were chalked up by Les Digby, Joe McNulty, Bruce Webster, Elmer Lee, Jim McNulty and D'Amico.

Bob Thorpe led the Petes' scorers with three markers, while Roger Smith and Ike Hildebrand lit the lamp twice each. Lou Nickle, Don Ashbee, Curly Mason and Russ Slater scored one apiece. In the assists' department for the McGinness crew, Nip O'Hearn, Ashbee, Nickle and Mason led with two each, single assists going to Hildebrand, Ross Powless, Harry Whipper, Dootch Vitarelli and Bev Groves. Teams:

Yorks: Goal, Johnston; defence, Webster and Croft; centre, Teatro; wings, Jim McNulty and Masters; rover, D'Amico; alternates, Lee, Joe McNulty, Kapasky, Digby, McPhail and Hammond.

Petes: Goal, Wootton; defence, Nickle and Groves; centre, Mason; wings, Slater and Powless; rover, Smith; alternates, O'Hearn, Wipper, Ashbee, Vitarelli, Thorpe, Hildebrand and Burns.

Robinson Mum On Three Shifts

NEW YORK (AP)—"Wherever the club wants me to play is okay with me—I'll do anything but pitch and catch, and I have done some catching."

That was Jackie Robinson's philosophical reaction Friday to manager Charlie Dressen's manipulations which have put the great Brooklyn athlete at three positions in two days.

Primarily a second baseman since he broke into pro ball seven years ago, Robinson started out at first base Thursday night, against New York Giants. Later in the game he shifted to left field. Friday he started at third base.

"What's good for the Dodgers is good for Jackie Robinson," the pigeon-toed former UCLA halfback added. "Why should I complain? I'm playing. Anybody can catch a fly ball."

Vince Sheridan Heads Horsemen's Society

TORONTO (CP)—Vince Sheridan was unanimously re-elected Friday night for a fifth term as president of the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association.

The board of directors was elected by acclamation for a second term. Its members are Charlie Hemstead, Dave Garrity, Harry Addison, Art Halliwell, Howard Mezen, James Cowan, Frank Merrill, Jr., and Ralph MacFarlane.

The annual meeting passed a resolution asking the Ontario racing commission not to make any search of tack rooms, trunks or automobiles unless the trainer in charge at a track is present when such a search is made.

Porterfield Hurls Senators To 12-4 Win Over Yankees

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

After five lean years Bob Porterfield of Washington Senators is suddenly discovering why they call it the "merry" month of May. For four seasons he was plagued by all kinds of injuries, from a broken finger to burns from an exploding match book. This season started just like the others—bad. Suddenly, the week that May began, he won a game. He's pitched four times since then and he's won four more games.

Friday's 12-4 victory was a particularly sweet one for Porterfield since it came against the Yankees who had given up on him in 1948 to such an extent that in 1951 they traded two other pitchers with him and tossed in $50,000 cash to get Bob Kuzava.

Until they ran into Porterfield the Yanks had won four in a row. The loss cost them a full game of their American League lead, which now stands at 2½ games, since Boston Red Sox won a doubleheader from Philadelphia and took over second place.

SOX WIN TWICE

The Red Sox won the first game 3-2 with a pair of runs in the eighth and picked up the second game by the same score although they had to go 12 innings to get it.

Art Houtteman allowed only two hits as Detroit Tigers handed Chicago White Sox their fourth straight loss 7-0. St. Louis at Cleveland was rained out.

In the National League rain cut the schedule in half. New York won its sixth in a row and its second straight over Brooklyn 5-1. St. Louis Cardinals moved within half a game of the league-leading Phillies by trimming Cincinnati 4-2. Philadelphia was rained out at Pittsburgh. So was second-place Milwaukee at Chicago.

The Senator-Yankee game produced the season's first triple play. With runners on first and second in the ninth Irv Noren of the Yanks drove a liner straight at Porterfield. He caught it, fired to first for the second out and the relay to second caught Andy Carey for the third out.

Mel Parnell scored his sixth consecutive triumph in the first game of the Boston doubleheader. He hasn't been beaten. In the nightcap the Sox tied it up in the ninth and won in the 12th when Sammy White doubled home the deciding run with one out.

HOUTTEMAN WINS

Houtteman's victory over the White Sox was his second complete game and second success after three early losses. Only Tom Wright and Nellie Fox got to him for hits. Walt Dropo led the eight-hit Detroit attack with a three-run home run in the second inning off Saul Rogovin, who lost his fifth game.

The Giants continued to roll at Brooklyn's expense with Jim Hearn pitching a complete game for the first time since Sept. 17 last year. Hearn drove in two of the New York runs with a double in the fourth and never was in serious trouble. Jackie Robinson, who performed at first base and in left field Thursday night, played third for the Dodgers Friday.

The Cardinals continued their sensational hitting, getting 11 safeties against the Redlegs for a total of 44 in their last three games. Friday night's blows included a home run and a single by Stan Musial which drove in two runs and four other extra base hits.

NAMED DIRECTOR

E. R. Budge of Port Hope was named a director of the Associated High School Boards of Ontario Friday at the group's annual convention in Oshawa. President is M. J. Kinnee of Maple.

MAYOR ON EXECUTIVE

Mayor Hugh Waddell and Mayor Charles Lamb, of Lindsay, on Friday were elected to the executive of the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves. Reeve Oliver Crockford, of Scarboro, is the 1953 president.

CONDITIONS FAIR

Conditions of Mrs. Edward Cochran of Bridgenorth and Thomas O'Donohoe of Port Hope, injured Thursday night in a two car crash near city limits, were described today as "fair." Mrs. Cochran suffered two broken legs and a scalp wound while Mr. O'Donohoe received facial and leg lacerations.

SAWDUST PILE BURNS

Spontaneous combustion is believed to have started a fire smouldering in a pile of sawdust at the rear of the Sanitary Ice Co. on Friday night. Firemen played two-and-a-half-inch hoseline on the sawdust which runs to the river's edge. There was no damage.

GOOD LINDSAY CROWD

An attendance of 5,000 has been reported at the first two days of the Lindsay Trade Fair, equalling the total attendance in 1952. The fair is being held in the Lindsay Armouries and continues today. Before it closes tonight, an attendance 50 to 60 per cent higher than last year is anticipated.

FISH AND GAME MEET

Peterborough Fish and Game Association will meet at the Public Library on Monday evening when 80 new members are to be welcomed. Prizes are to be awarded to one lucky new member and his sponsor. President Hugh Ploughman will call for club volunteers to assist in a mass tree-planting program. A few trees will be planted on Coronation Day to commemorate the occasion.

Blackout

An eager Provincial Police officer can be a pretty cool individual in some emergencies, but even the best have something besides ice water in their veins. Witness a young officer who this week took his girl friend home. He gave her a tender good-night kiss and just as he was leaving the apartment building she asked him if he would carry the garbage can down to the street. Some blocks away the young con*stable was seen walking along George St. in front of the city hall with the garbage can in his hand.*

Plans Completed For Celebration Of Coronation

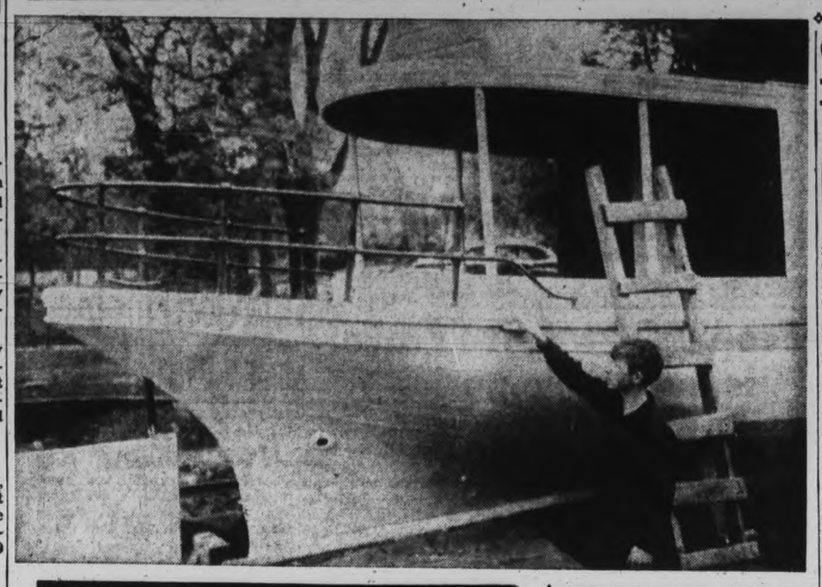
Final plans for the city's three-day observance of the Coronation were released today by Ald. Syd Black, chairman of Peterborough's Coronation Committee.

"It is the opinion of the Coronation committee that these celebrations will equal those of any other city of this size in the province," Ald. Black said.

The program will get under way a week from Sunday with a community service in Civic Arena at 8 p.m., sponsored by the Ministerial Association with massed church choirs taking part.

STREET DANCE

The following Monday evening, a mammoth Coronation street dance, under the direction of the Lions Club, will be held at Charlotte and Aylmer Streets from 9 p.m. on.



On the afternoon of Tuesday, June 2, Coronation Day, a COSSA lakeshore district track and field meet will be held at Exhibition Park. Originally scheduled for May 18, the meet was cancelled due to a dangerous track.

Some of the 600 RCAF planes taking part in the fly-past at Ottawa and other centres will visit Peterborough during the day, but a definite time has not been set.

The evening celebration will get under way with a parade, leaving the Armoury parade square at 7:30 p.m., to Miller Bowl, where a civic ceremony will be held at 8:30 p.m., with leaders of the major religious denominations taking part. A mass oath of allegiance will be led by Judge John deN. Kennedy.

SCRAPING, PAINTING AND LAUNCHING—Peterborough cruiser owners have been busy during the past month and a half at Rye's boathouse on Lock St. south preparing their crafts for the sunmmer season. Some boats such as Bob Hall's (top photo) which is going down the ways for launching have been changed, especially the superstructure, while most other boats, apart from minor repairs, have been scraped and painted according to custom. The 61-year-old craft, owned by Percy Roper (centre), is the yard's oldest and has just received a coat of paint. George Houghton points up to the place where he'd like to spend his summer holidays. Waiting patiently to launch his boat is Harold Sellon (lower); he's getting the feel of the wheel even though his boat's jacked up in the boathouse.

River Cruisers Shined Up For New Season On Water

Back-breaking work and many late hours spent by boat owners during the last couple of months in their rush to finish outfitting their boats for the coming summer months finally ended this week with the first boat of the season sliding down the ways at H. B. Rye's storage boathouse.

Rye's boathouse, one of Peterborough's oldest landmarks and boat building industries was built in 1904 by Harold Rye. It progressed through the years to being a prolific producer of paddles. In 1943 the paddle shop was destroyed by fire.

PADDLE MACHINE

Mr. Rye built and designed his own paddle producing machines, and it is the only one of its kind patented today. He was building boats in Peterborough when cars were still horseless buggies.

One of the oldest fixtures around the building is the 10-ton railway, which is operated by a hand winch, to ferry the boats in and out of the water.

According to Herb. Rye, who is now running the business in his spare time, the old boathouse used to be a hive of activity during the summer months in the old days. All the boats and steamers in the district used to dock at Rye's to hear the latest waterfront news and to have repairs made.

The biggest boat in the district in the earlier days, recalls Mr. Rye, was the Tootsie, a 38-foot steamer, which ferried logs and passengers through the Trent Canal system down to the lakehead.

Russ Cole and his partner Melville Stabler have been making repairs on their cabin cruiser Hangover, a sleek 35-foot boat with a cruising speed of 20. They hope to have their boat in the water in time for a Coronation cruise and were busily engrossed in caulking the hull with putty.

SAILING SINCE 1921

A veteran river sailor getting his boat ready to put into the water was Harold Sellon, who has been on the Trent waterways since 1921. A Bluenoser by birth, Mr. Sellon has spent all his life by the water and has often cruised from Trenton on Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay. This summer he is planning a trip to Gananoque and the Thousand Islands.

Leslie Moore, who has been on the water since he could walk, was just adding the finishing touches to his boat Auldreekie, and hopes to have it in the water by Sunday, if all goes well. Mr. Moore can remember the days when there were so many boats in the boathouse, one couldn't move around in the place. This summer he is planning a cruise with his wife and son Keith to Bradley's Bay, where he hopes to get a couple of weeks' fishing in.

The oldest boat at the yards was the Strathford, owned by Percy Roper, built in 1890 for the Milwaukee Fair. It is a 34-foot cabin cruiser that used to be powered by a steam engine, and is well known along the Trent waterways.

Before any of the boats can be put into the water for the season, they have to be thoroughly washed, to remove the grease and grime, and then sandpapered down. After all minor repairs and adjustments, comes the final step—the dressing up of the boat, with its fresh coat of paint.

During the summer months Mr. Rye still does minor repairs to some of the larger American pleasure boats that travel the Trent waterways, but nothing on the scale that his father before him did, in the early 1900s.

Summer Theatre To Star English Actors

Despite the pull of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival, which has taken several former members of his Peterborough company, Michael Sadlier says that this year's Peterborough Summer Theatre company is the strongest ever.

Mr. Sadlier returned from Bermuda this week, where he has been operating the successful Bermudiana Theatre. In the city Friday he told of additions to the company as arranged for the new season which opens June 22.

"Instead of engaging less experienced Canadian actors", Mr. Sadlier said, referring to the loss to Stratford of Bill Needles and Peter Mews, and replacements for them, "I have gone further afield and contracted a number of English players".

EXPERIENCED ACTORS

Among the new faces to appear on stage this summer are David Powell, who last fall played the leading role with Robert Morley in London's comedy success "The Little Hut". Prior to this he played Mitch in Laurence Olivier's English production of "A Streetcar Named Desire", and was in five other West End productions. In New York he appeared in two Shakespearean plays last year.

Another strong addition to the Peterborough company is George Turner. He first visited Canada as Sir John Martin Harvey's juvenile leading man. At the Westminster Theatre (London) he played opposite Anna Neagle, and during the war was Inspector Rough to James Mason's Mr. Manningham in the revival of "Angel Street". He has appeared in English and Australian films, and this fall has been tagged by NBC television to appear as Sherlock Holmes in a new TV series originating in New York.

Two other actors new to Peterborough will be Harry Geldard, who has been in over 200 productions in England, and Leonard White who was brought out from London to direct and star in the New York production of Christopher Fry's "A Sleep of Prisoners".

ACTRESSES

Among the actresses are Barbara Cummings, who comes to Peterborough directly from Ot-

MICHAEL SADLIER, managing director of the Peterborough Summer Theatre. "Our strongest company ever," he says, of the coming nine-week season.

Tourist Season Coming Up May Be Best Yet

The 1953 tourist season for the Kawarthas shows promise of being the best in the district's history according to statistics and reports at the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

Already several tourist operators in the district have reported that they are booked for the summer and others are receiving requests for bookings every day.

Letters of inquiry about accommodation in the Kawarthas received at the Chamber office total 350 to date. Potential tourists are asking for everything from the most up-to-date accommodation on the American plan to shacks in the woods and campfire meals.

Fishing as always is drawing tourist interest and American tourists started coming into the area with the opening of the trout season May 1. The pickerel opening date, May 15, brought even more fishermen from across the border and the biggest influx is expected July 1 with the opening of the bass and muskie season.

20 STATES INQUIRE

"It is shaping up to look like the biggest season in the history of the Kawarthas," Bob Hamilton, assistant manager of the Peterborough chamber said today. "We have had inquiries from about 20 states across the line—as far away as Texas. There also seems to be an increased interest in this district among Canadians as well. We have received quite a number of inquiries from Quebec and even some from Saskatchewan as well as from other parts of Ontario."

Mr. Hamilton also said that the tourist operators themselves were looking forward to a good season. Many are building to provide more and better accommodation.

Robert Bell Named Oxford Representative

The appointment of Robert E. Bell, of Woodstock, as agricultural representative in Oxford county was announced by the Ontario Department of Agriculture Friday.

A graduate of Ontario Agricultural College, Mr. Bell was assistant to Frank C. Paterson in Peterborough county for several years, from June 1949 to about the same time last year when he was succeeded in Peterborough by Kenneth E. Best.

In that transfer, Mr. Bell went to Oxford as assistant to George E. Bell who had been agricultural representative in that county from 1947, and until his death some months ago. The circumstances placed the responsibility of the work of agricultural representative in Oxford, with its office at Woodstock, on R. E. Bell during the year since he has been engaged in that county. His Peterborough friends will wish to congratulate him upon his promotion and to wish him success in his responsibility. Mrs. Bell is the former Mayme Cathcart, of Springville.

4 Accident Victims Awarded Total Of $15,539 For Injuries Suffered

Odessa Youth Held Responsible For Crash At Gananoque All Injured Peterborough People

Five Peterborough plaintiffs in a civil action tried in Supreme Court on Friday were awarded a total of $15,539 and costs of the action by Mr. Justice McLennan. Four of them were seriously injured when their car crashed almost headon into another car, just inside the boundary of Gananoque, 10:30 p.m., on March 14, 1952. Most seriously hurt was Mrs. Hilda Moffatt of 319 Simcoe St., who is still walking with the aid of a crutch, more than 14 months after the accident. She received a badly broken leg that has not mended properly and has suffered headaches and loss of memory from a head injury.

Mrs. Moffatt was awarded $6,866 damages. Her husband, Donald A. Moffatt, a hotel manager, was awarded $3,453 for his out-of-pocket expenses.

Mrs. Ethel Hopcroft of 129 Dufferin St was awarded $2,807. Her injuries included two broken ribs, a severe cut on the crown of her head that required 33 stitches to close, and cuts and bruises on her legs and knees. She has a permanent scar on her forehead and says that the injury left a numbness there.

DRIVER HURT

Driver of the car in which the Peterborough people were injured was 25-year-old James Hopcroft, husband of Ethel Hopcroft. He was awarded $1,581 for his injuries that included three broken ribs, a punctured lung, and a weakness in his right arm.

The fifth plaintiff was 20-year-old Robert Moffatt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Moffatt, who was awarded $832. He received a sprained ankle, bruises, and an injury to his right eye.

The four plaintiffs who were in the accident all required hospital treatment and all lost wages.

Mr. Justice McLennan absolved Hopcroft from blame in the collision but commented that there was little direct evidence on what happened. All Hopcroft can remember is the road being clear and then a "flash" from ahead and slightly to his right. The defendant, 20-year-old James McMahon of Odessa, did not go into the witness box.

In April 1952 McMahon was convicted on a charge of careless driving and was fined $75 and costs. His driver's license was suspended for six months.

INJURIES RECOUNTED

The civil action lasted nearly a day and a half. Most of the time was spent in hearing evidence on the injuries to the four plaintiffs who were in the car. Two other Peterborough residents — Nathan Stabler and Pearl Carter—were also riding in the car driven by Hopcroft but their injuries were minor and they weren't parties to the action.

Hopcroft, a CGE employee, told the court that he was driving east along King St. W. in Gananoque at not more than 30 miles an hour. King St. is part of Highway 2 and the party were driving through to Brockville.

"All of a sudden to the right of me there was a flash," he said, "and I don't know what happened. There was no traffic, no headlights—nothing. I started to turn the car to the north side of the highway; I didn't have time to apply the brakes. Then there was the impact."

Chief Constable Edward Lancaster of Gananoque testified that at that point on the highway there is a six-foot shoulder on the south side of the road. Fifty feet to the east there is a driveway to a motel which is frequently used by motorists wanting to park off the highway.

Chief Constable Lancaster said that when he got to the scene, 10 or 15 minutes after the accident, he saw the two wrecked vehicles in the south lane of traffic. He said that McMahon smelled strongly of alcohol and there was a beer glass—still damp and smelling of alcohol—in his car.

"If McMahon hadn't been injured I think I would have arrested him for impaired driving," said Chief Constable Lancaster.

Mr. Justice McLennan found that McMahon was the cause of the accident by driving west off the south shoulder of the highway, or coming out of the laneway, and colliding with the Hopcroft-driven car.

Trevor Clark was counsel for the plaintiffs and J. C. N. Currelly was counsel for McMahon.

Firemen To Hold Regional School

As many as 35 regular and volunteer firemen are expected in Peterborough on Monday for the opening of the five-day regional fire school, sponsored by the Ontario Fire Marshal's office.

For the first time the school is being held in Peterborough. Last year it was in Lindsay.

There will be lectures and practical work on firefighting subjects, such as ladder work, knots, care of hose, forcible entry into buildings, use of inhalators and gas masks, salvage and rescue work.

At the Lindsay school last year Peterborough's present fire chief Ralph Leonard, then on the staff of the Fire Marshal's Department, was one of the instructors. This year he will just be host to the visitors. Instructors will come from Toronto.

The school provides a basic training course of 40 hours in the latest firefighting techniques. It will begin at the Armouries 9 a.m. Monday.

Firemen are expected from departments in Lindsay, Cobourg, Port Hope, and other communities in the region.

Royal Canadian Sea Cadets annual inspection will be held at New Market Square opposite George St. wharf, at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 26th, 1953.

Church parade Sunday, May 24, 1953, "Battle of the Atlantic Sunday," to Trinity United church and Saint Peter's.

ELIZABETH the Queen

By Marion Crawford
Former Governess to Her Majesty

XVI

Every Sunday morning at the Royal Lodge, Windsor, there was an unvarying routine. At 10 minutes to 11 the Royal Family and I would gather in the hall, together with those guests who happened to be staying with them, and walk the 40 yards or more to the little chapel in the Park.

The Royal Family had a private pew curtained in such a manner that the congregation could see only their profiles while they were standing. One Sunday morning there was a visiting preacher.

The resident Vicar was then the Rev. Francis Stone, a most cultured man. He was a fine-looking man who gave great distinction to the little chapel.

The visting preacher was a short, stount man with a shining bald head. He had been delivering his sermon for some minutes when I saw a bee approach him in a wary circle.

It flew round him several times, getting nearer with each circuit. I watched it, fascinated, to see where it would settle. Awful pictures of it stinging him rose to my mind, and I saw from the look I stole at the King, sitting on my left in front of me, that similar thoughts were passing through his mind.

The low drone formed a sort of background to the sermon which I had now quite forgotten in the excitement of watching the bee's narrowing spiral which finally came to its apex in a neat landing right in the center of the bald patch of the preacher's head.

I gave a sort of strangled cough and quickly buried by face in my handkerchief. But before I did so I caught sight of Princess Elizabeth, then about 10 years of age. Her face was set firm and calm.

I knew she had been watching with the same fascination as I; but she had already achieved an iron control of her emotions, and all I could see was that the flowers on her hat were quivering with her suppressed laughter.

This control is a noticeable faculty in the Royal Family. In private life they laugh readily. When George, my husband, first came to the Palace and the Princesses were with me, he was struck by the amount of laughing we did—not at him, of course, or at any body else, but among ourselves.

Through the years little jokes had grown among us. Princess Margaret had only to say, "D'you remember the day when . . ." to set us off.

Princess Elizabeth used to laugh very often. I loved to hear her musical, tinkling voice break into an uncontrollable giggle when she was small.

Unlike other children with a strong sense of humor, she had to learn to curb it at times, to stifle it almost from an early age. What can be excused in an ordinary child and attributed to youth might cause a great deal of surprise coming from a Princess.

But sometimes situations occurred, like that of the bee which were so ludicrous that she had to make an obvious effort to suppress the impulse to laugh. I know how difficult this is to do as I, too, had to learn to control such impulses.

One of the first things which impressed me about the Royal Family when I joined them was their really genuine love of laughter. In those days King George was very boyish and would sometimes laugh in an uninhibited and refreshing way for several minutes at a good joke.

They were always a jolly family and while they were playing together it was wonderful to see the gusto with which the King entered into the children's games.

That was in their private life. But on more dignified occasions they have a remarkable control over their sense of humor.

On one occasion the Royal Family were entertaining a lady who I could see, was somewhat embarrassed. She was a large woman, wearing a most peculiar hat which I knew had already caught the Princess's eyes.

She lowered herself into a rather flimsy chair, which to the accompaniment of splintering wood, promptly buckled and collapsed under her.

There are few things funnier to behold— from the onlooker's point of view. But not a flicker of a smile appeared on any of our faces. Not only because of our strict training, but because we were all overwhelmed with sympathy that such an accident should have happened.

To Their Majesties, the King and Queen, and to the Princess, nothing was funny to them when it caused pain and embarrassment.

That was just one occasion on which their control had to be exercised to avoid hurting people's feelings. But we would not have been human if we had not seen the funny side of the incident and laughed wholeheartedly about it when were alone and the lady had gone.

Before I had been long with the Royal Family, I had learned to control my impulse to giggle at the wrong moment. I had learned to play tricks with my mind, to fix it on a certain point, to shut out the remark which I knew was going to be extremely funny, to avoid looking at the man whose mustaches wobbled about as if they were going to drop off and to drug my mind by repeating long passages of poetry.

But before I learned such tricks, I was not always so discreet as I might have been.

TRAVEL: with Jean Stenton

People Of Mexico Prove Fascinating Memories

By JEAN E. STENTON

I remember Mexico—not only for its beautiful scenery and climate, but for the wonderful and unusual people whom it was a privilege to know.

There was Sr. Fernando Reyes whose greatest interest and love is for the improving of Taxco and making life easier for his people. His wife says he worries more about the town than he does about his business.

But a year ago he was very ill for a long time. While he was in hospital, Mrs. Reyes could hardly make her way through the crowd of Mexicans thronging the corridor outside his room, waiting word of his condition.

As time passed, a delegation of neighbors called upon Mrs. Reyes. They said: "We just want you to know that in every one of the homes in Taxco there is a candle burning for your husband's recovery. He has done so much for us.

"If you feel that he would receive better care in Mexico City, the men of this town have volunteered to carry him in a litter on their shoulders the 30 kilometres to the nearest small airfield."

It must be wonderful to have earned an affection like that.

RISES TO OCCASION

I remember — Sr. Enrique Burmeister, vice-president of Aguirre's travel concern in Mexico City, industrialist, Rotarian and a man who has many business interests. He was a fine friend and always ready with advice and help when I needed it.

One morning when I had occasion to phone he informed me casually he had just had breakfast with the President of Mexico. I thought he was kidding. But I found he meant it. A friend of the President was a good friend to have.

It was to Sr. Burmeister that I owed my visit to the Santa Monica Ranch. I had been chasing Holsteins all over Mexico with little success, so in desperation I wired an SOS from Oaxaca. When I arrived back at my hotel in Mexico, I received a call from Sr. Burmeister and he said: "I have one of your Holstein friends waiting in my office to greet you," and with that a plaintive "Mooooo" came over the phone.

When I arrived at his office, he pulled a small package from his desk and presented it to me. It was a small box decorated with Holsteins and when you tilted it, it gave forth a friendly Holstein greeting. He must have hunted all over Mexico City for it. Wherever I passed on the way back to my hotel, people were stopping and asking to look at it and play with it.

MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL

I remember — Susi of Taxco — the most beautiful girl I saw in Mexico.

Before her marriage, Susana del Rio was the champion diver of Mexico and travelled widely. She has even competed in Montreal. Then, as all beautiful girls do, she got married eight years ago and became Sra. Susi Krackowizar. Her husband bought a ranch and they moved to the lovely state of Michoacan.

However their eldest daughter became allergic to feathers and since there were 10,000 chickens on the ranch it wasn't a good spot for her. So the parents pulled up stakes and have been a year and a half in Taxco. Then they found out their daughter's allergy was eggs—not chickens.

Susi has a most attractive shop near the plaza. At first she bought blouses and dresses ready made. But then she found that the sizes were unsatisfactory, so now she makes and designs her own. She has eight seamstresses. She also has silver articles and other products from Taxco.

Michoacan girls have lovely complexions and Susi is no exception. She has jet black hair which she wears in long braids and her charming white Mexican costume with touches of red made her alluringly beautiful. Her husband has just bought the Pacos Bar facing on the Plaza and when the day's work is over she helps him there.

HELPS SCHOOL

I remember — Ann Cates of San Jose de Purua. A visitor there for many years, she learned of a small school which badly needed equipment. So she made an arrangement with the hotel to give Spanish lessons to visiting tourists and the money was to go for supplies.

When she had equipped the school, it was decided a projector would be helpful. An American visitor offered to get her one if she could raise about $100. She did, by various means, and so the world is brought nearer to the children of this little Michoacan spot.

I remember—Alfonso Martinez Vega, born in Puebla but working in Mexico City. Formerly a teacher for many years and an author of a book on Spanish Mexican culture, he was a good friend, interpreter and companion. His friends and acquaintances were legion. No matter where we went or what I wanted he always knew somebody. Even to the day I wanted a picture of the Palace of Fine Arts. He escorted me up to the 8th floor of a big office building to meet someone he knew and wangled permission for me to hang out their big windows to get a perfect "shot."

IRISHMAN LINGUIST

I remember— Clyde Hamilton whom I met in Oaxaca. An Irishman from California who speaks Spanish like a native after five years in Mexico with the International Harvester Company. His territory extends from Michoacan in the west to further south than Oaxaca. He has learned to speak the dialects in the areas where they have been selling modern machinery to Mexican and Indian farmers. His experiences and knowledge made interesting listening.

I remember—Jesus—the bell boy at the Majestic Hotel in Mexico City—who met me when I returned from Patzcuaro. He recognized my Michoacan licence and offered to see that I got around Mexico City if I needed help, since hi s home too was in that state.

Oppose Pinklisting

OSHAWA (CP)—The Associated High School Boards of Ontario today passed resolutions opposing the "pinklisting" of school boards and the recent cut in capital grants for special school facilities.

Holding their annual convention here, the boards went on record as opposing the practice of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Association in "pinklisting" school boards which did not conform to its wage scales.

They also passed a resolution, to be forwarded to the provincial department of education, objecting to its ruling that capital grants for school construction be paid only for ordinary classrooms and administration of service areas.

Lawyer Disbarred

TORONTO (CP)—Reginald Carlston McLean, a Toronto lawyer, has been disbarred for "professional misconduct and conduct unbecoming a barrister and solicitor" it was announced Friday. The discipline committee of the Law Society of Upper Canada reported that McLean had converted clients' money to his own use and failed to keep books and accounts.

Claxton Fills In For 3 Ministers

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Claxton is a busy man these days.

He's acting for three other cabinet ministers, including Prime Minister St. Laurent, and every so often he takes over another portfolio or two when a minister or the minister acting for that minister leaves town.

This ministerial multiplicity is not unusual in summer when Parliament is in recess and this year it has been compounded by the Coronation and by the lures of an election campaign.

These are the days when most of the cabinet gets out into the country to labor among the grassroots and a cabinet corporal's guard stands vigil in Ottawa.

Mr. Claxton commands the corporal's guard.

He stands guard specifically for Mr. St. Laurent, for External Affairs Minister Pearson and for Health Minister Martin. Thursday he also acted for Agriculture Minister Gardiner because both Mr. Gardiner and his fill-in were out of town and because that secondary backstop role always falls on the prime minister or the minister acting for the prime minister.

Since the only thing Mr. Claxton likes better than a 12-hour working day is a 13-hour day, all this has not broken his normal stride.

Port Huron Eligible For Emergency Loans

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Port Huron, Mich., area was made eligible Friday for Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to restore homes and places of business damaged by Thursday's tornado.

Administrator Kenton R. Cravens of the agency declared the region a disaster area after being advised it had suffered heavy damage.

Loan applications will be received by the agency's Detroit office. A temporary office will be established by the agency at Port Huron to aid disaster victims.

Stove Explodes, Burns 2

HAMILTON (CP) — Thomas O'Haggan, 17, and Patrick Moore, both of Hamilton, were severely burned Friday when a gas stove they were attempting to light at the Elgin Spring and Steel Products plant at nearby Aldershot exploded. They were admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital where their condition was described Friday night as fair.

OFF TO CORONATION—Prime Minister and Mrs. St. Laurent say goodbye to Montrealers as they pause here en route to London for the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

Will Use 8 Luxury Liners As Floating Hotels In U.K.

By JACQUES POUTEAU

LONDON (Reuters)—Eight luxury liners bringing more than 2,500 tourists from North America and Europe will be used as "floating hotels" for the Coronation.

Gaily beflagged in honor of the ceremony, they will be moored in the Port of London.

Special arrangements have been made with the customs and immigration authorities to enable passengers to come and go at will during their stay.

Two are Dutch, three Swedish, two Spanish and one Panamanian.

Coming for Coronation Day only is the 15,652-ton Dutch liner Veendam which will arrive from Holland at midnight June 1 and leave for home again in the early hours of June 3. She will carry about 600 passengers.

Seats to watch the Coronation procession have been booked for passengers of the two Dutch ships. On Coronation morning, passengers will be handed luncheon baskets on leaving the ships. At night, a Coronation dinner and other festivities will await them on their return.

Further up the Thames, off Greenwich, will be moored the Panamanian ship Nassau. She left New York May 2 on a Mediterranean cruise and will arrive on the eve of the Coronation for a four-day stay.

The biggest floating hotel of all will be in Southamptan, about two hours by train from the capital. She is the 34,183-ton Cunard liner Caronia, which is bringing nearly 600 visitors from the United States after a 28-day cruise to the Mediterranean, Scandinavia and the British Isles.

Special arrangements have been made to enable her passengers to see the Coronation procession and they will be able to use the ship as a hotel until June 3.

Tie For First In Playwriting

OTTAWA (CP)—A young Canadian and an English immigrant have tied for first place in the Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop annual playwriting competition.

John Hoare of Montreal, British-born author, director and producer, picked plays by Norman Williams of Toronto and Peter Dwyer of Ottawa as joint first-prize winners this year.

Mr. Williams, 30, entered "A Battle of Wits," a work in Chinese form set in China centuries ago. It is his first play in five years although he has been writing since he was 19.

Mr. Dwyer, London-born and a graduate of Oxford University, won with a duologue, "Hoodman-Blind," a conversation-piece between a French countess and an emissary of the devil set in Paris in 1788.

Mayors Request Equalized Per Capita Grant

TORONTO (CP)—The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves decided Friday to ask the province to give all municipalities the same per capita grant next year.

The grants, starting next year, will range from $1.50 to $4 a person, depending on population. They replace the conditional grants now given for police, fire and other services.

When the matter was raised earlier in the convention, William Orr, deputy minister of municipal affairs, said the grants were weighted in favor of the larger places because their welfare costs and other expenses are higher.

Reeve W. L. Shanks of Thorold said the province is putting price tags on the small municipalities and penalizing them for operating more economically than the larger one.

NO MEANS TEST

"We should not be placed on a means test," said mayor W. R. Tomlinson of Port Elgin, whose resolution touched off the debate.

"We're not fighting with our city cousins," said mayor Don Carmichael of Gananoque. "But the cost of welfare is as great, if not greater, in the smaller centres."

He said the province will never take over welfare services, because they are operated too efficiently at the municipal level.

Reeve Oliver Crockford of Scarboro township, a Toronto suburb, was elected president of the association. He succeeds reeve Barry E. Atkinson, Sandwich East township.

Disposal Units In The Home Effect On Plumbing System

The increasing demand for food waste disposal units in homes has raised a number of questions as to their effect on residential water demands, on house drainage systems and on sewage disposal facilities. Several disposal units have been tested and their effect on the drainage system analyzed by the Bureau of Standards, with the following conclusions: 1. The effect on water consumption is not large. The use of grinders should cause only slight increase in water consumption when compensating factors related to individual usage and cleanliness of equipment are considered. The additional load is insufficient to require an increase in the fixture unit rating for the sink.

2. Grinders do not clog drain pipes to any appreciable extent. The only noticeable tendency toward clogging comes from a combination of grease and hot water. If cold water is used, the grease forms into globule and is readily carried away. Scouring action has been noted in partially-clogged drains, in fact, as a result of the use of the grinders.

3. The effect on internal pressures or vacuums within the drainage system is inconsequential. The grinders do not create excessive pressures in free flowing drainage pipes; they do not increase self-siphonage of the disposal unit trap so that presently permitted lengths of unvented drains for sinks need not be decreased; and, they will not increase tray seal losses by aspiration of stack vented fixtures connected at lower elevations.

4. The means for trapping the sink must be considered: (a) The grinder unit preferably should not be connected to a fixture drain having a back vent; (b) it should be separately trapped; and, (c) sink and laundry tray or a double compartment sink, it should have an individual drain to the stack.

Less work and more leisure. That's the way it will be, for the warm summer days to come, if time is taken now to rearrange your home for the hot weather ahead.

Whether your house is large or small, ranch-style or traditional, the emphasis should be on creating a cool, pleasant atmosphere to keep pace with the slow relaxed tempo of summertime living. The dramatically bright or lush deep colours, the interesting textured nubby fabrics that make a room cosy during the winter months have a way of making the same room seem uncomfortably cluttered and confined when the temperature rises.

First project in the programme to acquire that fresh-as-a-breeze look in the home is to retire heavy winter draperies, thick carpets and plump pillows to moth-proof storage for the next few months. At the windows, put crisp white or pastel curtains; perhaps light draperies in a gay but cooler colour range. Wide areas of well polished floors add immeasurably to a cool look, are easy to clean and provide an effective background for summery hooked rugs or the popular fibre varieties.

Simplifying the ornaments and knickknacks around the house is a final must on the list. Pack away the fragile figures, the silver ash trays, bowls and boxes that need careful cleaning and polishing. Replace them with crystal or pottery counterparts that are just as functional and decorative but so much easier to keep clean and sparkling. The fewer things to worry about mean more time to enjoy the cool, relaxed atmosphere created for the hot wilting days to come.

Be Sharp And Keep Your Tools Sharp

Once upon a time your woodworking tools were new and sharp —remember?—and you felt you could do work with them that was worthy of a trained cabinetmaker. But you weren't using the tools often, and when they needed sharpening you let it ride.

Now, however, you've gotten into the full swing of the do-it-yourself trend and your tools aren't what they used to be. Neither is your work. Your plane slips and gouges, your chisels won't chisel and your auger bits won't auger—to coin a verb.

So you want to sharpen up, but you don't know how.

Let's start with the plane. Next to the saw it's very likely the most imoprtant single tool. To sharpen it you need a little skill, only two oilstones—coarse and fine —and a can of oil. Saw sharpening, on the other hand, takes a higher degree of skill and some tools you probably don't have or don't care to buy. Saws are best sharpened by a professional.

First off, square up the cutting edge of the plane blade by holding it vertically on the coarse stone and passing it back and forth. Bear down hardest on the side that needs to be taken down.

Use a little light machine oil diluted with an equal amount of kerosene on the stone in all the sharpening operations.

Next, stone the face of the plane blade to remove tool marks or rough spots. These depressions in the face make a true edge impossible unless removed. Use an oval movement with the blade's face flat on the fine stone. And use plenty of oil.

Now stone the bevel on the underside of the blade, being careful to maintain it at the original angle, or at such an angle that only the cutting edge touches the wood you plane. Start with the coarse stone and finish with the fine. Use a continuous "figure-8' or oval movement.

Soon you'll achieve what is called a "wire edge," an indication that the job is nearly done. You have only to remove the wire edge—the very edge of the blade, which has been stoned down and refuses to be stoned off.

To break the wire edge, run it across a piece of hardwood once or twice. Dont try to stone it off.

Last, you stone the bevel at the very tip of the blade. Put the blade bevel flat on a fine stone, raise the heel of it slightly, hold the blade rigid and use the figure-8 motion on the oiled stone. To test the edge for fineness, place i ton a thumbnail. If it slides down, continue stoning.

Your chisel can be sharpened in exactly the same manner. To sharpen auger bits, an auger-bit file or stone can be used.

Stone or file the upper side of a bit's cutting edges, retaining the original bevel. Stone the opposite side of the bevel just enough to remove any burr, then stone or file teh small spurs that score the wood in advance of the cutting edges. Stone them on the inside only.

A cabinet scraper should be sharpened in a vise, using an oilstone on the bevel, which should be about 45 degrees. Use a coarse stone first, then a fine one, take off the wire edge with a piece of hardwood.

The most difficult part is to shape the hooked edge of the scraper. After all the sharpening is done, roll the edge over with a burnisher. This takes a hard but even pressure. Correctly sharpened, a cabinet scraper gives a fine shaving on wood.

FOLLOW THE STEPS illustrated above to sharpen plane blades and several other chisel-type tools to keen cutting edges.

Coronation Re-Emphasizes Britain's Links Between Church, Crown In Westminster

By ARCH MacKENZIE

LONDON (CP)—Links between church and crown will be emphasized anew at the Coronation June 2 within the grey stone walls of Westminster Abbey, "royal peculiar" embodying 1,000 years of Britain's history.

Edward the Confessor laid the abbey's course in royal history when he was buried there in 1066, eight days after consecration of the edifice he built.

Since then, the smoke-grimed, towered structure has been more prominent in the life-and-death cycle of British monarchy than any other church. The Queen will be the 38th sovereign crowned there since William the Conqueror's Christmas Day ceremonies in 1066.

INDEPENDENT POSITION

The abbey is called a "royal peculiar" to indicate the highly independent position it holds in the Church of England and as a church of royalty.

No bishop or archbishop presides over its dean and chapter. The Queen herself comes as a "Visitor." Yet the abbey and its fellow "peculiar" at Windsor Castle, St. George's Chapel, are not to be confused with the chambers of worship in royal residences, known as royal chapels.

Nor is the abbey's long past purely a reflection of royalty.

Its vaults cradle the bones of statesmen, churchmen, warriors, poets and unknown commoners. Its stone records in delicate graving the craftsmen of medieval England. Westminster boys' school is one of the oldest in this old land and its musical traditions, including the names of Orlando Gibbons, Purcell and William Croft, are legion.

Few recognize the official title ordered by the first Elizabeth, "the Collegiate Church of St. Peter, Westminster, Middlesex. Monkless since the Reformation 400 years ago, it is known around the world, nevertheless, as "the abbey."

PRESERVATION APPEAL

It is financially independent, drawing no state aid, and is hard up. Its newest appeal seeks £1,000,000 to preserve its vast historical wealth and walls, ravaged by time and London's smoke-ridden atmosphere.

Above all, the abbey is a national expression of Christian faith, open to all, conducting services daily and admitting millions yearly to gaze or pray.

Edward the Confessor and Henry III are responsible for the abbey, estimated to have cost £10,900,000 through the ages, of which £6,000,000 has been for repair and restorative purposes.

The Confessor received Papal permission to erect a Norman-style abbey, marking his victory over the Danes, and he built on a Thames-side site occupied first by an abbey some 500 years earlier.

In 1245, Henry III initiated a vast rebuilding program east of the nave. The work was carried on almost without interruption until completed in 1520. Last major additions were the Wren-designed towers at the west entrance, finished by about 1740 after his death.

Today, located close to the Houses of Parliament and Westminster Palace, whose age rivals its own, the abbey is a cross-shaped structure in an early English gothic style scrupulously honored by six centuries of builders.

FINE POINTED STYLE

The unexcelled pointed style within spreads through seven chapels and into the aisled nave, more than 500 feet long and 102 feet high. Before the nave's high altar the Queen will make her Coronation responses as she did her marriage vows in 1947.

The church is almost ready for its part in the 2½-hour-long Coronation ritual.

The traditional, sacred vestments have been unfolded and the abbey will be lengthened slightly by a temporary annex before the west entrance.

Here the Queen will descend from her coach at 11 a.m., enter the abbey and be crowned at 30 minutes past noon. Later she will lunch and rest within the abbey before taking the return processional route to Buckingham Palace.

Around the abbey's walls are being fitted the paraphernalia making this the most-widely publicized Coronation so far. Millions more than the 7,500 abbey audience will see or hear it.

The abbey's dean, Very Rev. Alan Campbell Don, is officially charged with the duty of instructing Her Majesty in the Coronation responses. His task will be a token one, however, since it's been reported that she is already word perfect.

CORONATION CHAIR—This is the historic Coronation chair in which Queen Elizabeth will be crowned June 2 in Westminster Abbey. It will be moved from its usual position in the Abbey (shown here) to a position in front of the high altar for the ceremonies. Beneath the seat is the Stone of Scone, brought from Scotland in 1297 to be added to the Abbey's royal trappings involved in the crowning ritual. The Stone was stolen Christmas Day, 1950, but was recovered.

Ask Ottawa Set Cheese Prices

STRATFORD (CP)—Western Ontario cheese exchange members, including buyers, producers and cheese makers, joined forces Friday to ask Agricultural Minister James Gardiner to establish cheese floor prices in parity with butter.

A deputation comprising the three component bodies of the exchange—producers, manufacturers and buyers—drew up a communication to Mr. Gardiner.

For the second time in two board sessions cheese was withheld Friday when bids did not satisfy manufacturers. The bid was 25 cents for April and May cheese, two cents lower than last week's price.

A QUEEN IS CROWNED—This is an artist's conception of how Britain's Queen Elizabeth II will look immediately after her crowning in Westminster Abbey. She is seated in the famous Coronation Chair, under whose seat is the Stone of Scone, upon which British sovereigns have been crowned since Edward II in 1308. The Queen, garbed in the Robe Royal or Pall of cloth of gold, wears St. Edward's crown, which, because of its weight, is soon exchanged for the lighter Imperial Crown. In her right hand she holds the Sceptre with Cross, and in her left the Rod with Dove.

Canadians Stage Dress Rehearsal

PIRBRIGHT, Eng. (CP)—Thousands of Commonwealth troops, including Canada's contingent, today went through a full-dress rehearsal of their Coronation parade.

There was a marked difference from the first drills by the Canadians three weeks ago. Some parts of the navy drill vary from the army's and RCAF's and, as one navy officer put it, the first parade was "pitiful." Now orders are given consecutively to each service.

Wing Cmdr. J. V. Watts of Hamilton, contingent commander, said his men looked "very sharp" and are in good condition. All Commonwealth troops marched 12 abreast to the beat of Canada's Royal 22nd Regiment band.

Brig. John (Rocky) Rockingham of Vancouver, former commander of the 25th brigade in Korea, arrived by car with his wife, son and daughter—but too late for the rehearsal. He had been given the wrong time for parade by the joint chiefs of staff in London. Rockingham now is attending the Imperial Defence College.

The Canadians move to Kensington Gardens in London next week and will tent out until the big day.

Aussie Premier Meets Churchill

CANBERRA (Reuters)—Prime Minister Robert Menzies will have secret talks with Sir Winston Churchill in London on further British atomic weapon tests in Australia in the near future, an authoritative source said today.

The tests would be on land, probably at the Woomera range in central Australia or some adjacent area.

The prime ministers will also consider setting up an atomic research station in Australia, the source added.

Australia may become the key Commonwealth testing ground for atomic weapons as the result of the talks, the source said.

Expansion of guided missiles research, now going on at Woomera, is also envisaged.

Menzies' recently visited Woomera to launch the first Australian-built pilotless aircraft. He arrived in London Friday to attend the Coronation.

Mr. Chevrier said the Stormont, which will act as a salvage and rescue vessel, is strong enough to tow any canal traffic "against the currents of this mighty river." Her worth would be best demonstrated with the building of the St Lawrence seaway.

Life In Brazil Described By Visitor

KEENE (ENS)—More than 30 members and friends of the Tillicum Class gathered at the home of Mrs. William Briar, Valliers, to hear Mrs. Jane Gall tell the story of her eight months in Brazil, visiting her daughter, Mrs. O. L. Hilmer.

The climate is very hot in Brazil. It was 90 degrees Christmas Eve at bedtime. [illegible] of the heat, Christmas is celebrated much as in Canada, although the artificial Christmas tree was brought from the attic and unfolded like an umbrella. It was decorated with lights and icicles. Santa Claus arrived in a car with a red suit and whiskers to distribute gifts to the children.

The days and nights are of equal length, darkness setting in at 6 p.m., and nearly every day there is a downpour of rain, probably for only 15 minutes, after which the sun comes out as hot as ever.

EDUCATION

Education is of prime importance in Brazil. It is the aim of everyone to obtain a degree. The children go to school from 7 a.m. until noon, six days a week. During the afternoon Mrs. Gall's grandchildren, who attend a private school, do their homework under supervision. Portuguese is the official language in the schools but in the higher grades English and French are compulsory.

There is no need of any heating system in the homes. The rooms are very large with ceilings 15 to 20 feet high. There are no drapes or curtains on the windows, which are covered with a stationary lattice and have folding doors, which may be shut and bolted.

Mrs. Gall's impression was that there are two classes of people in Brazil—the very rich and the very poor. The rich entertain lavishly and have many servants—including a couple of maids, a laundress, a seamstress and a man to wash the car and attend to the outside grounds.

The worship service, prepared by Velma McFarlane, was conducted by the president, Marybelle Elmhirst. Hymns were sung and the scripture reading given by Lois McFarlane. Edith McIntyre led in prayer and a reading "Royal Visitors of the Past," was given by Mary Tuthill.

The treasurer's report showed a bank balance of $85.50. Several letters and notes of thanks were read for cards, flowers and gifts.

A letter was read from Miss LaPlante of the Lang Home and School, inviting the Tillicum Class to attend their meeting Monday evening when Miss R. Young of the Children's Aid Society will be the guest speaker. The invitation was accepted.

Isobel McIntyre volunteered to look into the matter of getting the clock in the Sunday school room repaired or purchasing a new one.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Ruth Briar, Mary Mather, and Marion Elmhirst. Mabel Comrie thanked Mrs. Gall and the hostesses.

POLITICAL CRAZY-QUILT—Posters from all parties plaster pillars of Rome's famed Piazza Colonna in campaign for June 7 elections. Commies have even put posters on ancient ruins.

Veteran Gaspari Confident Will Win Italian Election

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

ROME (NEA) — Only a rash prophet would predict the outcome of the June 7 elections in Italy, where the normally confusing politics have taken on a crazy-quilt pattern this year.

But Alcide de Gasperi, 72-year-old premier, is confident he will win.

Pro-American de Gasperi is head of the Centrist coalition of Christian Democrats, anti-Communist Social Democrats, Republicans and liberals. To win, he must defeat the Communists and Nenni "Socialists" on the left, plus the Monarchists and the MSI, the fascist Italian Social Movement, on the right.

The Reds are giving him a run for his money—and Italy's democratic parties, including the premier's, are hard-pressed for campaign cash.

PLASTERED POSTERS

There is hardly a wall or fence in Rome that has not been plastered with Red posters. There are Communist placards even on ancient ruins and historic sites, including the statues of St. Peter and Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

The elections will cost the hard-pressed government about $10,000,000, with 6,400 candidates running for 590 seats in the Chamber of Deputies and another 2,000 seeking the 237 Senate posts.

There is one candidate running on a "beefsteak" platform who advocates a pound of beef a day for each citizen. He'll probably get a vote on June 7.

Paradoxically, the reason he can afford to do so is reported to be his shipping firm's brisk and profitable trade with Red nations. But of late there have been many complaints about the quality of the Mayor's free spaghetti.

FILM FOR SALE

Italian police recently revealed that $250,000 worth of unexposed movie film, made in East Germany, found its way to Milan by way of Amsterdam. It was offered to Italian and American movie producers at 25 per cent below the Western market price.

Cash is the root of difficulties facing de Gasperi's efficient government, for his problems are mainly economic.

There are 2,000,000 chronically unemployed Italians — with no possibility they will be absorbed by Italian economy. Difficulties are further aggravated by a top-heavy rearmament program.

But even de Gasperi's critics concede that after five years of Christian Democratic rule, Italy is now in better shape economically and morally than at any time since the end of the war. Life in Italy is now much cheaper than in France, Switzerland and England.

U.S. economic advisers of the Mutual Security Administration, who were openly and brutally critical of de Gasperi's overcautious economic program, are now more enthusiastic about the results.

In five years, Italy has emerged as a major European power, and de Gasperi has become a leading and consistent champion of the European defence community and European unity. Only the question of Trieste continues to disturb relations between Italy and Tito's Yugoslavia.

Italians will never rest until they get all of Trieste back. It has become a point of national honor.

For the present there are signs —though this is a hazardous prediction — that the pro-Red and pro-Fascist votes may be somewhat reduced in the June elections.

A new electoral law gives 65 per cent of the seats in an electoral district to the party that obtains 50.1 per cent of the vote. This favors the pro-democratic Centrist coalition. But the political balance remains very precarious.

In the 1948 elections the Communists and their left-wing followers garnered 8,000,000 votes or 31 per cent of the total.

Should the Russians step up their "peace" offensive between now and June, the Reds will reap the benefit. Even more than bread, the Italian man-in-the-street desires peace.

Canada Imports More U.K. Fabrics In '53

PORTSMOUTH, Eng. (Reuters) John Burden of nearby Cosham was adjusting the image on his television set Friday night when a Russian drama suddenly appeared on the screen.

Russia is about 700 miles away at its nearest point and the pickup apparently resulted from fluke conditions which cause the TV waves from Moscow to rebound instead of travelling in a straight line.

Similar freak occurrences have been reported in Canada and the United States.

Burden said he was adjusting the one-channel BBC telecast when the Moscow program appeared. The picture was unclear but the sound was good.

Britons Spend London Holiday

LONDON (AP) — Coronation-minded Britons scented champagne in the air today, and turned their Whitsun holiday inside out to get a foretaste of the big festivities only 10 days away.

Hundreds of thousands of families, all in holiday mood, switched the usual dash to sea and hill into a concerted surge on London to see the red, blue and gold decorations and join the excitement of this city preparing to crown Queen Elizabeth.

Roads around the big city were black with automobiles, as always when the three-day Whitsun holiday begins. But today most of them were provincial visitors travelling towards London. Most Londoners remained here.

In the many railroad stations holiday specials moved out half-empty for the sunlit countryside, while train after train disgorged a continuous stream of vacationers on to the arrival platforms.

Extra police were rushed on duty to deal with the mammoth holiday invasion here. Police and motoring organizations appealed to visitors to leave their cars in the suburbs in order to prevent traffic coming to a complete standstill in jampacked West End where the Coronation procession will pass.

Magnuson Scores U.K. On Trade With Reds

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"Ships of foreign nations which we consider allies," says Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem. Wash.), "today seem more eager to trade with our Communist enemies than to trade with us."

He called Britain "the villain in the piece" in Red China trade. If Britain tries to get Red China into the United Nations before the cold war is settled, Magnuson asserted, he and "almost everyone in the Senate" would favor the United States' withdrawal from the international organization.

Magnuson spoke at a luncheon.

Delegation Pays Austrian's Education Here

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

VIENNA (CP)—An Austrian boy or girl will study in Canada next year with all expenses paid as a result of the visit to Vienna by the Canadian delegation to the International Chambers of Commerce congress.

The unnamed student has one win to his credit already. He was the hands-down winner over an earlier suggestion for an afternoon tea or cocktail party.

The idea came up earlier in the week when the Canadians discussed whether to hold a reception in return for courtesies extended them here.

They agreed there were already enough social events and decided instead on some practical step toward furthering understanding between Canada and Austria.

Announcement of the scholarship plan came Friday when the Canadians, headed by D. P. Cruikshank, delegation chairman, were received by Austrian Chancellor Raab.

Under details to be worked out, the student may choose his own course and university.

Raab, in expressing his thanks, said he was particularly glad the offer came from Canada, "a country with an expanding economy and future."

The Canadians were the only delegation to be separately received by the chancellor. The visit was arranged by F. Stockinger, former member of the Austrian government, now a Canadian citizen and a resident of Cobourg, Ont.

Archbishop Issues Three Prayers For Coronation

CANTERBURY, Eng. (Reuters)—Most Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury, today issued three prayers for the Coronation and recommended them to all who witness, or hear or see the ceremony on television.

1. "O lord God of whom cometh all goodness and grace let the love of all of us who witness our Queen's Coronation or who hear the service or see it from afar surround her and uphold her, that in full assurance of the free loyalty and affection of the peoples committed to her care she may by thine anointing be established in Thy strength and enriched with all things needful for her ministry among us, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

2. "Almighty God who dost raise up races and nations to fulfil Thy purposes we pray thee to bind together in a common faith and duty the peoples of this land and of the British Commonwealth of Nations that taught by Thy truth and inspired by Thy love they may be strong to further Thy holy will, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

3. "O Lord Jesus Thou hast created me and redeemed me and has brought me unto that which now I am; thou knowest what thou wouldest do with me according to Thy will and have mercy. Amen."

The archbishop said that at the Coronation the Queen is called "to stand before us all and to stand for us all in her own person expressing the whole virtue of our people's history and tradition."

He said that at her Coronation she "comes to commit herself before us all to God, acknowledging her dependence and ours upon God for true health and power, seeking through the church in her anointing and communion that God will consecrate her for the work and ministry of her life among us."

"Her self-dedication to God must be matched by ours. We must sincerely seek for our own daily lives and relations with others the strength of God as she does.

"The Queen pledges herself to God that by His grace she may be faithful and true to us. We pledge ourselves to God that we by His grace may be faithful and true to the Queen, our fellows, to the nation in every good and honorable cause.

"That is our loyalty."

NEW SENATOR — Mrs. Muriel McQueen Fergusson, 54, of Fredericton, was "almost stunned" when told of her appointment to the Senate. Born at Shediac, N.B., she practised law at Grand Falls, N.B., from 1935 to 1943. For four years she was enforcement counsel for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Weekend Church Feature:

Jesus Opposed Hypocrisy

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

The Christian way of life and conduct, if one accepts and proposes to follow it, ought to be simply and easily defined. Is it not to love God with all the heart, strength and soul and mind, and to love one's neighbour as oneself?

Moreover, if one asks what it means to love one's neighbour as oneself, we have a commanding exposition by Jesus Himself in the great Parable of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10).

Yet it is obvious in the pages of the New Testament and in the religious life of all times, including our own, that religious people have been deeply concerned about the problems of daily conduct. They have differed widely about questions of right and wrong and have often been harsh in their demands and judgments upon those whose ideas have not coincided with their own.

The differences, too, have characterized whole sects and groups of people and have even characterized historic periods. We speak of the Puritan Revival and the Age of the Restoration. We might even speak of the Era of anti-Prohibition, with a real sense in each reference of the different moral ideas involved, each with its corresponding differences in conduct.

Are there reasonable standards of moral judgment that would mark the proper conduct of a Christian while avoiding great extremes of undue Puritanism and undue license?

I think that there are such standards and that guidance can be found in studying the words and the example of Jesus in relation to matters of conduct. In general, I think we are too inclined to relate the teachings of Jesus to the supreme matter of faith and love without paying sufficient attention to specific instances.

A striking instance concerns the Sabbath. It was made for man, Jesus said, and not man for the Sabbath. Punctilious observers thought it was wrong to heal on the Sabbath day. They would have had the disciples go through the grain field hungry rather than "sin" by rubbing a few heads of grain in their hands.

What Jesus opposed was the hypocrisy that made much of eating with unwashed hands (Matthew 15:2), while at the same time committing the foul sins of injustice and inhumanity (Matthew 23:13-35). Many, of course, have laid stress upon washed hands and similar secondary matters without in any way being lax regarding the more vital matters of righteousness.

I am inclined to deplore the tendency to make sins out of matters that are not inherently sinful. There are enough real sins and wrongs to fight without creating artificial sins out of matters that are neither against God nor against one's fellowmen. Goodness needs always the strong ally of common sense.

PCVS Echoes Comes Out First Copies Seen At Tea

The coming off the press of the PCVS 1953 Echoes Year Book on Friday afternoon was the occasion for a tea attended by most of the 129 students and the 10 teachers who worked on the Echoes Staff. There were also several invited guests.

Receiving were the editor, Bruce Walker, who is Head Boy of the school this year, the assistant editor Miss Margaret Hooten, Ron Leggitt, chairman of the advertising, and Paul Ward of the junior executive. Guests and teachers attending each received a lovely rose corsage or a boutonniere.

It was announced by Miss Helen McGregor, secretary of the teachers' Advisory Board, that Paul Ward will be editor next year with Margaret Hooten again the second in command.

Anticipated first copies of the book did not arrive until the affair was nearly over. However they came in time for the guests to give them a brief perusal and find that congratulations to the editor and staff were in order.

Special congratulations were extended to the cover designer Eric Jackson who came to school for the afternoon wearing his left arm in a cast. This popular member of the Echoes staff and of numerous school activities injured his arm rather badly when he fell in a high jump during the school field day recently, and this was his first appearance at school since.

Echoes pins were awarded by The Echoes to the students who have worked on the book for two years. Editor Walker explained that it was decided two years ago to give pins and that they were given last year for the first time but were then paid for by the students receiving them. This year the pins were gifts.

Those receiving pins were Margaret Hooten, Margaret Munro, Paul Ward, Eric Jackson, Barbara Ephgrave, Ann Hamilton, Bert Ross, David Bacon, Helen Hubble, Don Weese, Shirley Webb, Derek Holme, Grace Sarginson, Margaret Dobson, Murray Grafstein, Joanne Watson, Sally Poole, Carolyn Hendren, June Adams, Richard Faryon, Barbara Stewart, Jean McKenzie, Art Gilders, Beth Powell, Beverly Johnston, Barbara Walker, Ron Wilson and Jane Myers.

The president's report advised that a major change in this year's set-up was the allowance of grade 9 and 10 students on the staff, and that they were used mostly in advertising and circulation. Thus, there was only one lower grade student receiving a pin, Richard Faryon.

Editor Walker said he felt the book, though smaller than formerly, was a good example of the students' work. He attributed the smaller book and the lower sales to loss of many students to the Kenner Collegiate. However, he said the literary contributions of the students had not been as numerous as hoped for.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Ross Thompson and Mr. Robertson Davies for their help in judging the literary efforts was extended.

The editor expressed his hope that there will be an expanded use of Grades 9 and 10 students next year and extended his thanks to the executive and staff for their co-operation and help.

Paul Ward voiced the thanks to the editor and other members of the staff who were graduating this year, wished them highest marks in their examinations and success in whatever future endeavors they undertake.

Miss McGregor reminded that all students must pass their examinations to be eligible for further work on The Echoes.

The honor of presiding at the tea table was given this year to Miss Mary Johnston of the teacher advisory staff. The table was attractively set with lace and silver decorated with tulips and candelabra. Student members of the staff served.

A vote of thanks to those on the tea committee was moved by Arthur Low.

THE BLACK-AND-WHITE STORY is told here in terms of beach and sun clothes for resort-and-cruise wear. Striped terry beach jacket (left) has belted back and big, handy patch pockets. Pique bathing suit (centre) in white has apron front with black linen trim. Checkerboard boy shorts are worn (right) with sleeveless shirt that has contrasting collar. Both are in imported Irish linen. All designs are by Frances Sider. Beach jacket can be worn over shorts and shirt; swim suit can double as sun suit.

Brand New Look Found In The 1953 Swim Suits

MORE cover-up in swim suits, more dresses and suits in textured fabrics, more coordinated clothes. These are points to watch for in the 1952-53 cruise-and-resort fashions.

Cover-up in a swim suit doesn't mean that you'll look like a cocoon. But it does mean that there's a brand new look to this year's suit, compounded of more elongated lines, of the narrower skirt, bloomers and boy pants. The halter strap is with us and so is the plunging back.

There's much being made of the one-piece look in all resort wear. This means sun-dresses, play coveralls, knits in the classic chemise line as well as the swim suit. Lots of shawls and stoles and clever ties provide cover-up for the resort dress.

The "girl curve shape" is the pride of one designer. It's achieved by underpinnings built into each garment, to help a girl make the most of her figure on the beach.

Texture continues to be strong as a talking point in resort fabrics. Prints frequently make the pattern, often looking like an applique or like re-embroidered lace.

Old favorites have new faces for the 1952-53 season. Cottons, from sheer cotton georgettes through homespuns, have been used extensively by designers for coordinates and ensembles. There will be lots of these. Linen, in new weights, appear in plaids on smooth or rough surfaces for both dresses and sports wear.

Silk is a third important resort fabric, often handled in paper-like textures and sometimes combined with wool jersey or linen in handsome coordinated costumes.

'38 Club 15th Anniversary Marked By Evening Tea And Vacation Fashions

A 15th Anniversary does not usually call for a celebration but in the case of the '38 Club of the YWCA who made it the basis for this year's money-raising project, it proved popular and brought about un-anticipated financial success.

The program consisted of two short showings of vacation clothes and between and during each, tea was being served in the Y Green Room. Perhaps the real drawing card was the fashion parade, for the first audience was on hand before eight o'clock, but certainly there were a number of guests who came to re-new friendships made in the club, and some who could not attend sent letters which were put up for all to read.

Those pouring tea and serving were either present members of the Club, or have in some way been connected with it during the 15 years, either as members or sponsors. The models were girls who may soon become members.

Miss Doris Ackford played for the models, suiting the tune to the costume where possible. Mrs. Walter J. Gilling after commentating on each outfit told the price of it, thereby satisfying the curiosity of the onlookers.

Stiffened petticoats were worn under three of the pretty cotton dresses and seemed definitely to make them more attractive. The models were wearing seamless nylon hose in each case and these seem much more glamorous than bare legs.

The vacation wardrobe included several pairs of skirts and blouses, one a lilac and pink combination with sunshade to match; blue jeans and a colorful blouse for the fishing expedition; grey flannel slacks and a blazer for hiking; shorts for tennis and a new style of shorts for sunning, made of striped denim with high midriff front and the back slightly full and tied at the waist. There was also an octette of denim separates—pedal pushers, batwing jacket, visor cap, halter blouse, buttoned coats, shorts, skirt, and sleeveless blouse.

Adding style to a navy bathing suit was a striped taffeta skirt, taken off for swimming of course, which doubles as a shoulder cape. A smart, striped denim jacket was suggested for wearing over a strapless suit, or, a bright color cotton coat that can be a dressing gown, a brunch coat or a duster.

Summer furniture in a flower garden setting and handsome luggage sets completed the vacation time picture brought to mind by these clothes. The models were Misses Melva Lee Doxsee, Beatris Pelsis, Alva Graham, Joan Gardiner, Anne Lewis and Betty Merrett. They were directed by Miss Mary Delahaye and Miss Selina Buck styled their hair for this occasion.

In the tea room a profusion of seasonal garden flowers provided the atmosphere. On the tea table was an anniversary cake decorated in white with blue and topped with tiny candles and lighted candles flanking the cake and on the mantel were white program director of the Y, and ors.

Those receiving were the present president Miss Geraldine Dunford, (1951 and '52) Miss Flora Metcalfe, president in 1941, Miss Leta Brownscombe of the YWCA staff, one of the instigators of the Club, Miss Marion Foster, program director, of the Y, and president of the Board, Mrs. H. T. Rehill.

Tea pourers included the first president of the club, Mrs. Sidney Mitchell, and a charter member and second president Miss Grace Sargent. Also, Mrs. Paige Rowell and Mrs. Crawford Turner.

Former members serving were Mrs. D. Brown, Mrs. M. Coons, Mrs. L. Maudsley, Mrs. R. Kearns, Mrs. Ed. Downing (president in 1947), Mrs. R. Armstrong, Mrs. James Shadgett and Mrs. Alex Hunter. The present members serving were Misses Nell Schell, Isabel McCamus, Alice Whitred, Jane McArthur, Ruby Leach, Annie Williams, Hazel Mutton, Muriel Ball and Nellie Tinney and Mrs. E. Boote.

The committees who worked on arrangements for the tea and the fashion show under general convenership of Miss Hazel Wilson, (the most immediate past president, having served in 1949 and '50, were as follows:

Social, Miss Winnie Hunter, convener, Misses Marie Gibson, Marion Pound and Muriel Ball; fashion show, Miss Helen Edmison, convener, Mrs. Roma Brindle, Miss Nellie Tinney and Miss Hazel Mutton; servers, pouring and receiving, Miss Geraldine Dunford and Miss Annie Williams; decorations, Misses Ruby Leach, Isabel McCamus and Mrs. E. Boote; guest register, Miss Violet Lowes; tickets, Misses Jean Hammond and Aileen Patton.

Let Every Family Fly A Flag To Mark Coronation Day

BY NANCY CLEAVER

"Let's buy our own flag!" Tom suggested in the family council on Friday after supper.

"We had better brush up on our flag regulations before we invest in one," father remarked.

"Will we get a Union Jack or a Canadian Red Ensign?" Eleanor asked.

"We can decide that later, but first we had better find out how much it will cost," said mother, "but whatever the price I think it is a good idea."

TREAT WITH RESPECT

A flag is a symbol of a nation and must be treated with honor and respect. It must never be allowed to touch the ground. Nor should it be flown on stormy weather or after dark. Nothing should be placed on it, neither objects nor printed letters. When hung indoors it must never be on a lower level than that of a person when sitting.

The correct way to dispose of a flag which is torn or too old for further use, it to burn it. Two flags should never be flown from the same staff—this signifies that the nation represented by the top flag is the victor at war! Sometimes ignorant people fly the Union Jack upside down and this is a signal of distress. The broad white stripe bordering the cross of St. Andrew's must be on the upper side in the top quarter of the flag next the mast-head.

COLOR HAS MEANING

In 'flag language" certain colored flags throughout the years came to have definite meanings. Every one knows that white is the flag of truce and that a red cross on a white ground is a plea for peace and protection, and is used by doctors and nurses caring for the wounded amidst fighting. But how many could name the meaning of a yellow, a green, a red or a red or a black flag? A yellow flag is hoisted above a ship which has infectious sickness on board. A green flag is flown over a wreck at sea. In olden days a red flag meant rebellion or mutiny. Pirates brazenly ran up their black flag. The most famous of all flag commands in British History should be familiar to every Canadian: "England expects every man to do his duty"—Nelson's challenge before the battle of Trafalgar.

Some flag terms which are interesting to know are as follows: The "ground" is the main color in a flag. The "halyards" are the ropes which haul the flag up the staff and secure it. The "truck" is the knob at the top of the flagstaff. The width or part of the flag next the staff is the "hoist", while the length or outer part is the "fly" or "field". A flag is divided into quarters or "cantons" two next the staff and two in the fly. Terms used to raise a flag on the staff are to "run it up" or "hoist" it. To "strike" a flag means to lower it completely. To "break" a flag, it is rolled up in a ball, hoisted to the truck, and released at a given signal by pulling the halyard, and thus letting it float free.

Regimental colors are attached to "color pikes". When new cloros are presented to a regiment then the "old" colors are "trooped" or placed in a church or public building.

The admiral of a navy is called the "flag officer", and his ship the "flag ship". In the Royal Navy the white ensign is flown, with its St. George's cross on a white ground and the Union Jack in the upper left-hand corner. The royal naval reserve uses the blue ensign and the merchant marine flies the red ensign. The Canadian Red Ensign has the Arms of Canada in the fly.

It is fascinating to examine the color and design of the different flags of the countries in the world. An attractive poster in color issued by the United Nations Department of Public Information in September 1951 shows the U.N. flag in the upper corner, and the flags of the sixty member nations at that date. Single copies of this can be obtained from the United Nations Association in Canada's headquarters in Ottawa. Here the Union Jack is shown as the flag of the United Kingdom, and the Canadian Red Ensign is Canada's symbol.

Canadian parents should not delegate completely to school teachers or camp counsellors the job of training their children in patriotism. Imparting knowledge of our past, respect for the flag, our symbol of nationhood, and challenging boys and girls to prepare themselves to give their best to their country is a home responsibility too. Here is a poem, "The Flag," by an unknown writer, which any Canadian would do well to memorize:

"When you see the flag of beauty,
Do you feel the call to duty?
Do you hear the bugle sounding in your heart?
When you see its colors blowing
Does it set your spirit glowing
For your country, make you strong to do your part?
That Freedom may not perish
From the land that Freemen cherish
Do your part!"

Of Interest to Women

EVERY HOME should own a flag. Coronation year is a good time to invest in a new one.

O cedar GLASS WAX makes windows radiantly clean and smear-free Quickly, Easily!

DOROTHY DIX:

Serviceman's Girl Friend Has Become Enamored

DEAR MISS DIX: While here at a sanatorium I met a fine young man, and as time passes I love him more and more. Two months ago he proposed to me, and I accepted him. Now for the problem! Before I met Ray, I was going with a school chum, and we were on the verge of becoming engaged when I became ill. He has always been very nice to me, is now in service, and I am sure he expects to marry me when I am discharged from the hospital. I realize now that I never really loved Peter, and that Ray is the one for me. How can I break the news to Peter without hurting him?

TRUTH MUST OUT

ANSWER: It would be impossible for you to tell Peter you love someone else without hurting his feelings. However, the longer you postone the ordeal, the harder it will be on all three of you. If Peter really loves you, he is going to get a terrific shock to both his heart and pride. No matter how gently you break with him—and you are virtually breaking an engagement—he'll be hurt. Beating about the bush won't accomplish anything; this requires direct action. As soon as he is home again, which you intimate will be shortly, let him know that you wish to see him at once; tell him of your change of heart.

Of course it's always possible that he, too, may have found another girl, in which case a happy ending is assured for all. And just as a postcript—are you sure you really love Ray, and that your romance hasn't blossomed from a mutual sympathy in each other's illness? It would be well for you to go around in the outside world again before making definite marriage plans.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a girl of 15 and would like very much to write to a serviceman. However, my mother doesn't approve of this idea. Should I abide by her wishes, or write to one anyway? ANGELA K.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You most certainly should abide by your mother's wishes in this matter. While I think writing to servicemen is a nice thought, and I often give addresses of boys to girls who want them, I do so with the proviso that the girls should discuss the matter with their parents before writing. But I am opposed to the practice for girls of your age.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My daughter Ruth married ten years ago, and has a girl nine years old. Eight years ago Ruth obtained a divorce and lived with me for three years. Then she remarried, but left the child with me. Now my daughter is going out west to join her husband at his base, and wants to take the girl with her, but I feel I can give the child better care here. The stepfather isn't too fond of the youngster, and I'm afraid she won't be properly treated. GRANDMOTHER

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The child certainly belongs with her mother and, since Ruth wants her, there's nothing you can do but consent to your daughter's wish. It's perfectly understandable that since you have had the girl almost from birth, you are attached to her. Do try to be cheerful about the situation, write the youngster often, and perhaps events will take to a course that will bring her back to you.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Recently I bought myself a diamond ring, which I wear on my right hand so it won't be confused with an engagement ring. The purchase has led to all sorts of questions from friends, and I'd like to know how to answer them. VERA D.

✧ ✧ ✧

quality cocoa and ¾ cup boiling water until smooth and let stand until cool. Now sift together 1¾ cups sifted flour 1¾ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Make a deep well in the centre of the dry ingredients and pour into it ½ cup salad oil, 7 unbeaten egg yolks and the cooled cocoa mixture and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Now beat this batter until perfectly smooth. In another bowl beat together until stiff 1 cup egg whites and ½ teaspoon cream tartar. Now pour the egg yolk batter in a thin stream over the entire surface of the stiffly beaten whites, gently folding and cutting it into the whites with a rubber spatula until evenly blended. Pour into ungreased pan. One-piece tube pan is best. A 10-inch tube is baked at 325 deg. F. for 55 minutes then heat is increased to 350 deg. for 10 or 12 minutes longer. If you bake this in a 9-inch tube 50 to 55 minutes at 325 deg is sufficient. Same for loaf pan. Oblong cake and square cake are baked 45 to 50 minutes. After baking invert cake, let hang until cold, then coax out of pan with finger tips.

ORANGE CHIFFON CAKE

Into mixing bowl put sifter after sifting and measuring 2¼ cups flour. Put flour in sifter and add 1½ cups sugar, 1 tablespoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and sift into bowl. Make well in centre and in it put 3 tablespoons grated orange rind, ¾ cup orange juice, ½ cup salad oil, 5 unbeaten egg yolks, and then beat this until batter is smooth. In another bowl beat 1 cup egg whites with ½ teaspoon cream of tartar until stiff. Pour egg yolk batter in fine stream over stiffly beaten whites, and cut and fold it into them until blended Bake same as chocolate chiffon above. Times and sizes of pans are exactly the same.

QUESTION: I copied a recipe I saw for Peanut Brittle and tried it but did not like the baking syrup. Please tell me what kind of molasses to use. Is there a special kind for candy? Mrs J. S.

ANSWER: Buy the very best quality of light colored molasses. You can see a golden glow through it. It is not solid brown in color.

PEANUT BRITTLE

Three tablespoons butter, 2 cups light molasses, 2-3 cup sugar, 4 cups shelled, skinned, halved peanuts which have been sprinkled with salt. Melt butter, add molasses and sugar, bring to boiling point and boil until when tried in cold water it is brittle (275 deg Fahr.) Remove from heat. Immediately stir in the peanuts and 1 teaspoon soda. This will foam. Pour into buttered pan in very thin layer. Cool thoroughly before breaking up.

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Could you please send me a recipe for Banana Bread. . . I had perfect luck with your Chocolate Chiffon Cake the first 3 times, but the last couple of times it has been heavy on the bottom. . . top part was quite light. Would it be too much oil that would cause it to go like that? Would you mind sending it to me as I am wondering if I copied it down right. Have you a recipe for any other chiffon cakes?

Marion S.

BANANA BREAD

ANSWER: One and three-quarters cups sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking ppowder, ¼ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup shortening, 2-3 cup sugar, 2 well beaten eggs, 1 cup mashed ripe bananas. Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Cream shortening until fluffy then add sugar gradually while creaming. Beat in eggs. Sift in flour mixture alternately with the mashed banana, a small amount of each at a time, beating until smooth each time. Turn into greased loaf pan about 9x5x3 inches and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 70 minutes, or a little less if the loaf shrinks from sides. Good additions to this are ½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans or 1 cup chopped dates.

A film of underbaked batter or heaviness at bottom of chiffon cakes is usually due to insufficient heat coming from bottom of oven OR double thickness of metal in tube pan.

Try this slightly changed recipe.

CHOCOLATE CHIFFON CAKE

First mix together 2-3 cup good quality cocoa and ¾ cup boiling water until smooth and let stand until cool. Now sift together 1¾ cups sifted flour 1¾ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Make a deep well in the centre of the dry ingredients and pour into it ½ cup salad oil, 7 unbeaten egg yolks and the cooled cocoa mixture and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Now beat this batter until perfectly smooth. In another bowl beat together until stiff 1 cup egg whites and ½ teaspoon cream tartar. Now pour the egg yolk batter in a thin stream over the entire surface of the stiffly beaten whites, gently folding and cutting it into the whites with a rubber spatula until evenly blended. Pour into ungreased pan. One-piece tube pan is best. A 10-inch tube is baked at 325 deg. F. for 55 minutes then heat is increased to 350 deg. for 10 or 12 minutes longer. If you bake this in a 9-inch tube 50 to 55 minutes at 325 deg is sufficient. Same for loaf pan. Oblong cake and square cake are baked 45 to 50 minutes. After baking invert cake, let hang until cold, then coax out of pan with finger tips.

ORANGE CHIFFON CAKE

Into mixing bowl put sifter after sifting and measuring 2¼ cups flour. Put flour in sifter and add 1½ cups sugar, 1 tablespoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and sift into bowl. Make well in centre and in it put 3 tablespoons grated orange rind, ¾ cup orange juice, ½ cup salad oil, 5 unbeaten egg yolks, and then beat this until batter is smooth. In another bowl beat 1 cup egg whites with ½ teaspoon cream of tartar until stiff. Pour egg yolk batter in fine stream over stiffly beaten whites, and cut and fold it into them until blended Bake same as chocolate chiffon above. Times and sizes of pans are exactly the same.

QUESTION: I copied a recipe I saw for Peanut Brittle and tried it but did not like the baking syrup. Please tell me what kind of molasses to use. Is there a special kind for candy?

Mrs J. S.

ANSWER: Buy the very best quality of light colored molasses. You can see a golden glow through it. It is not solid brown in color.

PEANUT BRITTLE

Three tablespoons butter, 2 cups light molasses, 2-3 cup sugar, 4 cups shelled, skinned, halved peanuts which have been sprinkled with salt. Melt butter, add molasses and sugar, bring to boiling point and boil until when tried in cold water it is brittle (275 deg Fahr.) Remove from heat. Immediately stir in the peanuts and 1 teaspoon soda. This will foam. Pour into buttered pan in very thin layer. Cool thoroughly before breaking up.

DOROTHY DIX:

Serviceman's Girl Friend Has Become Enamored

DEAR MISS DIX: While here at a sanatorium I met a fine young man, and as time passes I love him more and more. Two months ago he proposed to me, and I accepted him. Now for the problem! Before I met Ray, I was going with a school chum, and we were on the verge of becoming engaged when I became ill. He has always been very nice to me, is now in service, and I am sure he expects to marry me when I am discharged from the hospital. I realize now that I never really loved Peter, and that Ray is the one for me. How can I break the news to Peter without hurting him?

TRUTH MUST OUT

ANSWER: It would be impossible for you to tell Peter you love someone else without hurting his feelings. However, the longer you postone the ordeal, the harder it will be on all three of you. If Peter really loves you, he is going to get a terrific shock to both his heart and pride. No matter how gently you break with him—and you are virtually breaking an engagement—he'll be hurt. Beating about the bush won't accomplish anything; this requires direct action. As soon as he is home again, which you intimate will be shortly, let him know that you wish to see him at once; tell him of your change of heart.

Of course it's always possible that he, too, may have found another girl, in which case a happy ending is assured for all. And just as a postcript—are you sure you really love Ray, and that your romance hasn't blossomed from a mutual sympathy in each other's illness? It would be well for you to go around in the outside world again before making definite marriage plans.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a girl of 15 and would like very much to write to a serviceman. However, my mother doesn't approve of this idea. Should I abide by her wishes, or write to one anyway?

ANGELA K.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You most certainly should abide by your mother's wishes in this matter. While I think writing to servicemen is a nice thought, and I often give addresses of boys to girls who want them, I do so with the proviso that the girls should discuss the matter with their parents before writing. But I am opposed to the practice for girls of your age.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My daughter Ruth married ten years ago, and has a girl nine years old. Eight years ago Ruth obtained a divorce and lived with me for three years. Then she remarried, but left the child with me. Now my daughter is going out west to join her husband at his base, and wants to take the girl with her, but I feel I can give the child better care here. The stepfather isn't too fond of the youngster, and I'm afraid she won't be properly treated.

GRANDMOTHER

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The child certainly belongs with her mother and, since Ruth wants her, there's nothing you can do but consent to your daughter's wish. It's perfectly understandable that since you have had the girl almost from birth, you are attached to her. Do try to be cheerful about the situation, write the youngster often, and perhaps events will take to a course that will bring her back to you.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Recently I bought myself a diamond ring, which I wear on my right hand so it won't be confused with an engagement ring. The purchase has led to all sorts of questions from friends, and I'd like to know how to answer them.

VERA D.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Simply say you bought the ring because you liked it, and considered it a good investment. You owe no one further explanation.

FOR PARENTS ONLY:

Let Every Family Fly A Flag To Mark Coronation Day

BY NANCY CLEAVER

"Let's buy our own flag!" Tom suggested in the family council on Friday after supper.

"We had better brush up on our flag regulations before we invest in one," father remarked.

"Will we get a Union Jack or a Canadian Red Ensign?" Eleanor asked.

"We can decide that later, but first we had better find out how much it will cost," said mother, "but whatever the price I think it is a good idea."

TREAT WITH RESPECT

A flag is a symbol of a nation and must be treated with honor and respect. It must never be allowed to touch the ground. Nor should it be flown on stormy weather or after dark. Nothing should be placed on it, neither objects nor printed letters. When hung indoors it must never be on a lower level than that of a person when sitting.

The correct way to dispose of a flag which is torn or too old for further use, it to burn it. Two flags should never be flown from the same staff—this signifies that the nation represented by the top flag is the victor at war! Sometimes ignorant people fly the Union Jack upside down and this is a signal of distress. The broad white stripe bordering the cross of St. Andrew's must be on the upper side in the top quarter of the flag next the mast-head.

COLOR HAS MEANING

In 'flag language" certain colored flags throughout the years came to have definite meanings. Every one knows that white is the flag of truce and that a red cross on a white ground is a plea for peace and protection, and is used by doctors and nurses caring for the wounded amidst fighting. But how many could name the meaning of a yellow, a green, a red or a red or a black flag? A yellow flag is hoisted above a ship which has infectious sickness on board. A green flag is flown over a wreck at sea. In olden days a red flag meant rebellion or mutiny. Pirates brazenly ran up their black flag. The most famous of all flag commands in British History should be familiar to every Canadian: "England expects every man to do his duty"—Nelson's challenge before the battle of Trafalgar.

Some flag terms which are interesting to know are as follows: The "ground" is the main color in a flag. The "halyards" are the ropes which haul the flag up the staff and secure it. The "truck" is the knob at the top of the flagstaff. The width or part of the flag next the staff is the "hoist", while the length or outer part is the "fly" or "field". A flag is divided into quarters or "cantons" two next the staff and two in the fly. Terms used to raise a flag on the staff are to "run it up" or "hoist" it. To "strike" a flag means to lower it completely. To "break" a flag, it is rolled up in a ball, hoisted to the truck, and released at a given signal by pulling the halyard, and thus letting it float free.

Regimental colors are attached to "color pikes". When new cloros are presented to a regiment then the 'old' colors are "trooped" or placed in a church or public building.

The admiral of a navy is called the "flag officer", and his ship the "flag ship". In the Royal Navy the white ensign is flown, with its St. George's cross on a white ground and the Union Jack in the upper left-hand corner. The royal naval reserve uses the blue ensign and the merchant marine flies the red ensign. The Canadian Red Ensign has the Arms of Canada in the fly.

It is fascinating to examine the color and design of the different flags of the countries in the world. An attractive poster in color issued by the United Nations Department of Public Information in September 1951 shows the U.N. flag in the upper corner, and the flags of the sixty member nations at that date. Single copies of this can be obtained from the United Nations Association in Canada's headquarters in Ottawa. Here the Union Jack is shown as the flag of the United Kingdom, and the Canadian Red Ensign is Canada's symbol.

Canadian parents should not delegate completely to school teachers or camp counsellors the job of training their children in patriotism. Imparting knowledge of our past, respect for the flag, our symbol of nationhood, and challenging boys and girls to prepare themselves to give their best to their country is a home responsibility too. Here is a poem, "The Flag," by an unknown writer, which any Canadian would do well to memorize:

"When you see the flag of beauty,
Do you feel the call to duty?
Do you hear the bugle sounding in your heart?
When you see its colors blowing
Does it set your spirit glowing
For your country, make you strong to do your part?
That Freedom may not perish
From the land that Freemen cherish
Do your part!"

Of Interest to Women

EVERY HOME should own a flag. Coronation year is a good time to invest in a new one.

Boiler Explodes, Cripples Lakes Freighter

Two crew members were badly burned, the U. S. Coast Guard reported.

Both the injured were removed to another vessel which changed course to speed to the side of the crippled ship.

It happened 33 miles northeast of the Portage Lake canal in the Isle Royale vicinity where the freighter Henry Steinbrenner sank in a storm May 11.

Injured in the explosion were Everett McConnell of Boyne City, Ind., fireman, and John Rudolph of Youngstown, O., second assistant engineer

The Morse, en route to Two Harbors to pick up ore, proceeded on her way at half speed after the explosion.

Westminster Abbey Planned For Coronation Ceremony

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—A great deal of history will surround the Queen when she is crowned June 2 in the Collegiate Church of St. Peter in Westminster.

That's the official name of the stately, strange and wondrous building known the world over as Westminster Abbey, a concentration in stone of about 1,000 years of British history.

Coronations are an old story for the Abbey. For nearly 900 years English kings and Queens have been crowned there. Not far from the spot where the Queen will sit in her Coronation chair lies the body of her great predecessor, Queen Elizabeth I, in an ornate white marble tomb.

Other sovereigns are nearby—Henry III, Edward I, Edward III and Richard II. Henry VII lies in his own chapel. So does Edward the Confessor, the pious Saxon king who was the first great early builder of the Abbey. His chapel is regarded as the most sacred spot in the hallowed building.

MORE THAN BURIAL PLACE

But Westminster Abbey is much more than a burial place of sovereigns. One of the aims of 13th century Henry III, who rebuilt the Abbey almost from its foundations, was to make it a place for the preservation of "all that is precious and beautiful."

The interior of the Abbey has grown by bits often aimless and unplanned.

One story, for instance, is that the poets' corner came about by chance. The Mediaeval poet Geoffrey Chaucer of the Canterbury Tales was not only a founding father of English literature, but a collector of customs, who was sent often abroad on political missions. He was buried at the Abbey in honor of his services as a faithful administrator.

Then other poets died, and it occurred to someone at the Abbey to lay them beside customs collector Chaucer. Spencer, Dryden, Tennyson, among others, followed Chaucer into the poets' corner.

The collection of dead poets seems at one point to have become an Abbey preoccupation. When William Shakespeare died the citizens of Stratford-onAvon feared his body might be claimed by the acquisitive Abbey. Consequently he was buried 17 feet deep in Trinity Church, Stratford-on-Avon, and a verse on his monument calls down a curse on any disturbing his bones.

Dr. Samuel Johnson lies in the Abbey, as does David Garrick, the actor.

Musicians were accorded a spot of their own. Men of science were recognized. In modern times the ashes and likenesses of scientists are clustered around the monument and grave of Sir Isaac Newton. Kings and Queens now are mostly borne to St. George's Chapel at Windsor, and many of the great soldiers and sailors are laid to rest at St. Paul's Cathedral.

The Abbey contains many records of martial deeds, and proud and tattered battle flags are among its treasures. In time the building acquired so many monuments and pieces of such heroic size that they partly concealed beautiful windows and blocked up passageways.

Yet in some mysterious way the Abbey attains a harmony of its own. In few buildings on earth is a deeper impression of solemnity given to a visitor.

DESIGNED FOR CORONATION

There is, before the high altar, a much larger space than in most churches. The space is called the theatre, and in it the solemn ceremony unfolds.

Perhaps the foremost of the strange facts about the vast building, 531 feet long and 102 feet high, is that the Abbey isn't an abbey at all. Nor is it a cathedral. It houses no bishop, and there hasn't been an abbot in the place for several centuries.

It is a church, all right, but a strange sort of church. In ecclesiastical terms it is a "royal peculiar." It is situated in the territory of an Anglican bishop, the Bishop of London, but it is excluded from his authority. Neither does the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England, have any control. In direct authority is the Dean of Westminster, Dr. Alan Campbell Don, who is obliged to take orders only from the sovereign

There is only one other "royal peculiar" in the realm, St. George's Chapel at Windsor

It is possible that in the beginning the abbey wasn't even Christian. There is some evidence an early building or monastery was built there about 600 A. D. by Sebert, king of the East Saxons.

Press Leaves, Ends Long Friendship

The saga of a "buddy" companionship between a man and a machine came to a close recently at CGE when a 500-ton punch press was taken out of operation. Thus ended a 32-year acquaintanceship between Ez Ray and his gigantic Ferracute Press.

It was in the early twenties that the two met. As time passed, Ez grew to understand the little idiosyncracies of his press, and despite the onslaught of years, the team continued turning out high quality work.

None of his fellow workers gave Ez very long to stay with the Ferracute but as calendar pages flipped, it seems the strange team, man and machine, outlasted the skeptics.

In their day they turned out practically all the big jobs and heavy work, supplying huge punchings for many major hydro and electrical projects.

BOW TO PROGRESS

Ez liked his years spent with the press and while he disliked to see the giant go, he realized all must bow to progress. And so the machine departed.

The press, however, was not alone in aging after these years of hard work. For, though still hale and hearty, Ez Ray is nearing 70.

So it is only fitting that, as the press goes the way of all machines, Ez will soon go the way of all machine operators and retire later this year.

And the Punch Press department of CGE just won't seem the same.

28 Monarchs, One Schoolboy Sat In Coronation Chair

By ANNE KRAMER

LONDON (AP) — Twenty-eight monarchs and a naughty schoolboy have sat on the Coronation chair on which the Queen will be crowned in Westminster Abbey June 2.

All through the centuries, the Coronation chair has intrigued would-be carvers, most of them pupils at Westminster School adjoining the abbey.

The best craftsmen in the kingdom have just polished and refurbished the old oaken relic, but neither they, nor the woodworkers before them succeeded in erasing the schoolboys' initials.

The lad who sat in the chair, Peter Abbott, also slept in it all night. He did it on a dare. Before he left, he took his knife to the chair and dug out the words.

That gave him a certain niche in history and probably a sound whacking as well.

One big carved signature—"N. Curzon"—is believed to be that of George Nathaniel Curzon (1859-1925), foreign secretary and leader of the House of Lords.

Westminster schoolboys today don't practice on the Coronation chair. A night and day security guard is posted. A police officer checks everyone in and out of the abbey. As a further precaution, an invisible ray is connected by warning signal to Scotland Yard. Anyone who gets too near the chair unknowingly touches off the alarm.

Back in 1887, some eager beavers of the ministry of works wanted to make the chair nice and shiny and ordered the woodwork stained and varnished. The country was appalled at the "mutilation." Shortly after the chair was devarnished.

Even the suffragettes had a go at it. Shortly after the outbreak of war in 1917, they tried to destroy the chair with a bomb, and damaged it badly in spots.

All the sovereigns of England since 1307 were crowned on the chair with the exception of Mary, wife of William of Orange. It was designed in 1300 by Master Adams, goldsmith to Edward I.

Only twice has the chair left the abbey: when Oliver Cromwell was inaugurated lord protector in Westminster Hall in 1657 and during the Second World War when it was taken for safety to Gloucester Hall.

The chair, made of well-seasoned oak and decorated with gold leaf, is still in pretty good shape for its 650 years. It is handled like a vintage cognac. The crypt where it is housed is kept at an even temperature and insulated against dampness. The chair stands on thick layers of soft, warm felt.

Traders Start Talking Summer Advance

By HARRY KINGDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Traders started talking about a "summer advance" on the Toronto stock exchange this week.

For the first time in three weeks, all four exchange indexes scored moderate advances on the week. Western oils led the parade with a gain of about 3½ points—their best rise in two months.

On the average, the indexes gained almost two points.

Students of the New York market said that in the last 55 years the market usually showed an upward trend from early summer to mid-August. Canadian markets normally follow the New York lead.

Traders interested in western oils said the gain in oils has long been expected. They pointed out that the oils failed to follow the lead of industrials in recovering from the March-to-April "peace scare" decline and said the recovery might now be starting.

The constantly-increasing capacity of Canadian pipelines—built, under construction or planned—should permit higher production from Western Canada oil wells, they said. Greater production should result in increased earnings for a number of companies.

Other observers suggested that investors generally have become accustomed to the idea of a larger measure of peace in the world and possible lower defence expenditures.

Toronto opened the week after the Victoria Day holiday with small losses while Montreal prices were mixed. Montreal continued mixed Wednesday while Toronto gained slightly. The Toronto rise continued Thursday but turned mixed Friday. Montreal prices were mixed both days.

The New York market was open and rising Monday, but slipped back Tuesday. A rise started Wednesday and continued until mixed prices took over Friday.

From Friday to Friday the Toronto exchange indexes showed industrials up 1.79 at 309.48, golds up .50 at 79.27, base metals up 1.45 at 158.63 and western oils up 3.60 at 116.69.

In the Montreal averages, banks were down .22 at 32.86, utilities up 7 at 93.7, industrials down .6 at 185.9, combined down .1 at 155.2, papers up 13.48 at 674.57, and golds up .82 at 60.54.

On the New York market, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up $1.20 at $111.40.

CORONATION PLANNING—Lady Jane Vane-Tempest-Stewart, daughter of Lord Londonderry, and one of Queen Elizabeth's six Maids of Honor on Coronation Day, inspects a 2,300 figure miniature model of the Coronation procession on display in London. The centre-piece of the exhibition is an accurate reproduction of the annex to Westminster Abbey, with the Queen leaving after the crowning ceremony. Models of this type indicate the tremendous amount of effort and meticulous care going into the timing and planning for the June 2 ceremonies.

The Movie Column

Better Movies Offered For Summer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —This summer will see no doldrums, as far as movie fare is concerned. In fact, theatres will be playing some of Hollywood's best pictures during the warm months.

Summer has been traditionally a slack season in the entertainment business. All but the best New York plays shut down, and the top radio and TV shows are replaced by smaller and cheaper programs. The theory is that people spend more time out of doors and vacationing during the summer.

The picture business has usually played mostly routines movies in the summer time, holding off its special attractions until the fall, when the biggest possible audience was avaible. This year will be different.

TAKE ADVANTAGE

Producers will be sending out their good pictures in order to get the cream off the market before the new techniques take over. Another reason: With the best shows off TV, more folks might turn again to theatres for entertainment.

By the fall season, a good many theatres will be converted to big screens. The first picture made especially for wide screens—"The Robe"—will be released. By that time, Hollywood's new-dimensional revolution may get into high gear. Some are predicting that normal-sized films will become obsolete.

Capsule review: "Thunder Bay" combines all the elements for an engrossing movie. It has an intriguing and timely background—the drilling for oil in offshore Louisiana. It has an excellent cast, headed by James Stewart, Joanne Dru, Gilbert Roland and Dan Duryea. It has color, action and romance. The direction and writing are craftsmanlike. It lacks only a touch of genium to make it seem like reality.

Korea War Saved Economy: Coldwell

OSHAWA (CP)—The outbreak of war in Korea "saved our economy from what surely would have been another recession," M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, told a nominating convention Friday night.

The meeting chose alderman Wesley Powers to contest the Ontario riding seat in the coming federal election. The seat now is held by Michael Starr, Progressive Conservative.

Mr. Coldwell said "it is a sad reflection that any measure of prosperity we achieve at any time is largely the result of war and the demands created by war."

He said the Liberal government has given no evidence that it can prevent unemployment should it become unnecessary to continue the rearmament program on the present scale.

Sqdn. Ldr. Greenaway's book "Arctic Air Navigation" now is used by the RCAF as a text and by the RAF and USAF as a reference manual.

Adjusters Establish Offices In Sarnia

MONTREAL (CP)—The All Canada Insurance Federation, in a statement Friday, said adjusting companies have established two offices in Sarnia to provide, settlement of claims arising from Thursday's tornado.

Windstorm losses of this nature are covered by a "supplemental contract" usually attached to ordinary fire insurance policies, said the statement, and these policies should be examined by holders to see if supplemental coverage is provided.

Newspaper advertisements and radio announcements are directing insured sufferers to adjustment offices, said the statement.

Graph Shows Crime Tops In '49-'53 Period

TORONTO (CP)—A graph prepared by the department of reform institutions shows that the last four years have been the worst for lawbreaking in Ontario in at least four decades.

Distributed Thursday to members of the legislature's select committee on reform institutions, the graph reveals that more Ontario residents go to prison in times of prosperity than in times of depression and more end up behind bars in peacetime than in wartime.

USSR Favors Big Four Conference

Russia Makes Plain Antipathy To Big 3 Meeting

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union's latest major statement on foreign policy has made it plain the Kremlin strongly believed in a Big Four conference but just as strongly opposes Big Three talks which don't include the Russians.

The Soviet expression came in a full-page Pravda editorial Sunday. The Communist party organ:

1. Condemned President Eisenhower's plan to meet with Prime Minister Churchill and a new French premier. Such a meeting, said Pravda, means a continuance of western "collusion" against the Soviet Union and "can bring about the further heightening of the tension in international relations."

2. Generally approved Churchill's proposal for talks by the top East-West government leaders and particularly that "Churchill, unlike other statesmen of the West, does not tie up his proposal. . .with any preliminary obligations for one or the other side."

BLASTS U.S. DEMANDS

3. Blasted American demands for farther Soviet action as a preliminary to any East-West meeting. Regarding Korea and Austria (which Eisenhower has cited as areas where the Russians could back up their peace talk with peace action), Pravda said: "In both these cases things depend not on the Soviet Union but on the U. S. A. and England, which have not yet given their 'just share' in either case."

4. Called for settlement of the Korean war and the German question to "prepare the soil" for solution of other world issues. Pravda said Germany should be reunified but that a "revival of German militarism" must be prevented; the last Communist proposals on Korean prisoners-of-war provide the "necessary basis for a practical solution of this last question which stands in the way of a truce and, therefore, the end of the war in Korea."

TORONTO (CP)— Police today were checking the disappearance of an injured man's wallet as he lay helpless following an accident which cost him his leg. Vincent Watt, 47, who was struck by a car Friday while he waited for a street car, said his wallet contained $65.

Cloud Different After Atom Shell Explodes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The first atomic shell fired by the United States swished across desert proving grounds here today to burst with a brilliant flash over a simulated enemy target.

The shot was fired from "Atomic Annie," the army's 280-millimetre atomic cannon.

Five minutes later an atomic cloudy formed, visible in this resort-gambling town 75 miles away. It developed a lazy S form and appeared to have an ice cap.

The cloud rose swiftly and seemed to be travelling fast. It did not have the true mushroom shape so familiar in previous nuclear tests.

CREW LOADS GUN

A crew of nine men loaded the atomic gun, then retired to a safe distance for the firing, by remote control from the control point 10 miles away.

The shell was fused to explode 500 feet above a target area seven to eight miles north-northeast of the giant gun, which can fire both conventional and atomic shells.

The target area represented a typical enemy back-of-the-lines installation. In a grove of 50 trees, which survived the May 7 atomic blast, stood a 45-ton diesel locomotive, 15 boxcars, tanks, planes, guns and several types of military housing, from fortifications to tents. Various types of army clothing also were subjected, as were rabbits, mice and pigs in pens.

WILSON WATCHES

Among the U. S. leaders on hand for the test were Defence Secretary Charles E. Wilson and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff. Nearly 100 congressmen including Representative W. Sterling Cole (Rep. N. Y.), chairman of the joint atomic nergy committee were assigned positions several miles behind the trenches where 2,525 troops and 575 military observers had comparative box seats.

The trenches were 5,000 yards from ground zero, or twice as far as the nearest armed forces volunteers have ventured to an atomic burst. The troops were to attack as soon as radiation lifted.

Another 280-millimetre gun was stationed some 200 feet away, ready in case of emergency.

The gun crew, headed by Col. Devere Armstrong, was to retire to trenches "at a safe distance" after loading the gun.

Both guns were tested during the last week in 12 rounds of firing with conventional ammunition.

Republicans "Desperate" For Truce

GOP Source Claims Party Popularity Hanging In Balance

WASHINGTON (AP)— Republican sources have described the Eisenhower administration as "desperately anxious" for a truce in Korea. An influential Republican in Congress said Sunday the administration's domestic popularity may hang in the balance at Panmunjom, where truce talks resumed today.

Another Republican source said the U. S. public wants the war ended but "with honor."

A Korean truce that met with general approval in the United States would be regarded as the first great achievement of administration. It might end Republican worries about retaining control of Congress in next year's elections.

In foreign affairs, a satisfactory truce would go a long way toward bringing about Allied policy unity to be sought at the Big Three—Britain-U. S.-France — conference next month. Such an armistice might be accepted as the evidence of Russia's good faith through deeds which Eisenhower has laid down as preliminary to any Big Four session.

TRUCE TALKS RECESS

PANMUNJOM (AP). — Korean truce talks resumed today amid tight secrecy and then recessed until June 1—apparently because top-level decision on the critical prisoner exchange issue is needed.

Presumably the United Nations command presented a new proposal at the outset of today's session, which ended an eight-day, Allied-requested recess.

Washington sources had said a possible new approach would be offered on the last major barrier to an armistice—what to do about 48,500 Communist prisoners refusing to return to Red rule.

NO INKLING GIVEN

There was no inkling as to whether such a plan had been offered but—if so—the Communist delegation probably would have asked a long recess to refer the matter to higher authority.

Government Plans To Study Case Before Prosecuting

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's new anti-combine commission has reported that the Montreal branch of Procter and Gamble Co. of Canada Ltd. twice allegedly broke the law on resale price maintenance. Under that trade practice, banned by Parliament in 1951, a supplier would order a wholesale or retailer to resell goods at a fixed price, sometimes threatening to cut off supplies if that order was not obeyed. The three-man Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, in a 28-page report to Justice Minister Garson, said Montreal regional officers of the big soap company for a time cut off supplies to the Dealers' Supply to maintain certain prices, but the name of the threatened wholesaler was not disclosed.

Mr. Garson said he will make an announcement on the question of possible prosecution after all the facts have been studied by legal advisers.

The commission, headed by C. Rhodes Smith, former attorney-general of Manitoba, emphasized two pertinent facts:

DONE BY MANAGER

1. The attempt to enforce resale price maintenance was done under the direction of R. E. Goudreau, Montreal district sales manager, without the knowledge of head office at Toronto. When the general management was told of the situation, it took steps to make sure the attempt was not repeated.

2. Mr. Goudreau, whose territory took in all of western Quebec and the Maritimes including Newfoundland, allegedly entered the price maintenance practice to protect a purchasing system whereby small independent retailers could buy the company's products at prices almost as low as the chain stores.

But the new commission, set up last November, took a stern view of any violation of the law—no matter for what reason.

SINCERE MOTIVES

"However fair and sincere may have been the motives which directed Mr. Goudreau's attitude and action, we do not think that they may be invoked as a justification for contravening the prohibition enacted by Parliament."

If manufacturers were allowed "to formulate their own private exceptions to the general law in order to advance what each of them might claim to be worthy purposes . . . so many exceptions to the basic principles of the legislation might be created that its main and essential object would be completely defeated."

The commission also emphasized that a company must be held responsible "for acts and things done by its officials and agents in the course of their employment and within the scope of their authority."

FIRST CASE

This was the first case of a contravention of the 1951 ban which had raised a storm of protest by national industrial organizations.

Evidence before the commission was that Procter and Gamble had three methods of selling its soap and fats products: in carload lots, under the "pool car" system, and in less than carload lots.

Prices for carload lots were the lowest, but many small retailers could not buy whole carloads at a time. So the company started the "pool car" system, under which orders from a number of neighboring retailers were pooled to cover a carload which was delivered through a wholesaler at a price just slightly higher than regular carload prices and thus gave them

Court Refuses Third Appeal For Rosenbergs

WASHINGTON (CP)—The U. S. Supreme Court today refused for the third time to grant a hearing to Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, condemned atom spies. This meant that their only apparent chance to escape the electric chair would be to tell the government any espionage secrets they still hold.

President Eisenhower rejected their clemency pleas last February. But justice department sources have said the Rosenbergs have been told they might be able to save themselves from the chair by telling federal prosecutors what they know of spy activities in the U. S.

CONVICTED IN 1951

The husband and wife were convicted more than two years ago of wartime conspiracy to transmit atomic secrets to Russia. They have maintained their innocence.

In addition to rejecting the appeal, the high court directed that the stay of execution granted by the circuit court in New York Feb. 17 be vacated. The stay had been granted to permit filing of the appeal acted on today.

The Rosenbergs had been scheduled to die the week of March 9.

The justice department presumably will ask Judge Irving R. Kaufman in New York to fix a new execution time.

British Climbers Given Chance To Reach Peak

NEW DELHI (AP)—Himalayan experts here said today the British Mt. Everest expedition's plan to mount double or even triple assaults on the peak's summit has made its chances "the most hopeful yet."

At least 10 previous expeditions have tried to scale the glacial 29,009-foot mountain, the world's highest, and failed. The British climbers, led by Col. John Hunt, are reported making their final attempts from an advance camp 2,000 feet below the summit.

Because their only communication is by native runner to Katmandu, Nepal, reports from the climbers usually are delayed a week or more.

DEPENDS ON WEATHER

"It depends on how long the weather holds," commented Robert Botz of the New Delhi Himalayan Club. "My guess is they will keep trying until the monsoon strikes. If they have enough time they will be able to use each team of climbers more than once."

The Indian government weather station has predicted at least one more day of fair weather.

The double attack plan calls for a couple of two-man teams to try the last dash across the south ridge to the summit, one at a time. After an attempt, a team would need about a week's rest to regain strength to try again. Fifteen men are in the party.

Postal Workers Plan Demands

TORONTO (CP)—A meeting of postal employees Sunday decided to ask post office authorities to introduce a working week of five eight-hour days, pay for overtime, a general increase of $500 a year and collective bargaining rights.

Charles Axford, president of the Toronto branch of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, said the turnover among letter carriers in the Toronto area is about 100 a month, highest in staff history. He said the turnover in Welland is 100 per cent.

Present top saalry for letter carriers is $2,850 a year, attained usually after three years. Starting salary was raised last week from $2,340 to $2,500. These salaries are based on a 44-hour week. Carriers on residential walks work 48 hours but get one week off every 12 weeks.

Don Prisoner Escapes

TORONTO (CP)—A Don jail prisoner held on a charge of illegal possession of narcotics escaped early Sunday through a washroom window in the emergency department at Toronto General Hospital.

Police said they believe John Marra planned his escape carefully and had outside help.

Sarnia Damage Estimated At $10 Million; May Get Flood Fund Aid

SARNIA (CP)—Millions of dollars damage from Thursday's tornado was increased here today by a steady downpour of rain which soaked roofless buildings and trickled into windowless homes. Hundreds of volunteers worked throughout the morning spreading tarpaulins and tacking up tarpaper coverings. Civic officials today estimated total damage from the tornado at $10,000,000, but said "it will go higher."

J. S. Duncan of Toronto, Ontario director of the Canadian Disaster Relief Fund, has recommended that fund officials consider aiding Sarnia with part of the $1,459,000 left over from contributions to the Winnipeg flood relief collections

Since the bill forming the Canadian Disaster Relief Fund has yet to be proclaimed, it is up to officials of the flood fund at Winnipeg to decide on a course of action.

SEND WORKERS

Sarnia's industries will continue sending workers into the downtown area today and Tuesday to help clear the rubble. City workers will take over the job Wednesday.

In the downtown area, hardest hit by the whirling funnel of wind which slashed through this chemical city of 42,000 Thursday evening, thousands of workers continued reconstruction work Sunday behind rope barricades while hundreds of residents watched from nearby rooftops.

City manager E. Royden Coulter said that, from now on, it is probable the system of barricades will be changed for the first time since the storm made more than 500 persons homeless and caused damage estimated by Mr. Coulter at $5,000,000.

ERECT BARRICADES

Thousands Jam Parade Route

LONDON (Reuters)—Under a cloudless sky today tens of thousands of sightseers swarmed through the decorated streets of London, surveying the route the Queen will follow on Coronation Day.

Today was Whit Monday, a national holiday and usually the occasion of a mass exodus to country and seashore. But the trend this weekend was reversed, with London the main goal.

Men in shirt-sleeves and women in light summer dresses, clutching children by the hand, gawked at the gay emblems displayed along the June 2 processional route and clambered over bleacher stands which will be the reserve of ticket-holders next week.

Hawkers did a roaring trade with colored hats, red, white and blue favors and artificial roses which have become an unofficial symbol of the Coronation.

Some of the sightseers came from long distances in chartered buses. Most of them carried packages of sandwiches and bottles of tea and soft drinks.

Rivers Threaten Serious Floods

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP)—Three flooding rivers aimed their muddy crests at the southwest Louisiana coast today, threatening a town of 2,000 and oil-fields 40 miles south of here.

This city of 50,000 was still choked with floodwaters of the receding Calcasieu river, which left 15,000 homeless and $15,000,000 damage here. Health officials were vaccinating for typhoid, but no cases were reported.

While Lake Charles and its submerged air force base got ready to mop up, the little town of Cameron, on the coast, braced for a water assault at the mouth of the Calcasieu.

The U. S. weather bureau here predicted water up to three feet in Cameron's streets within 48 hours.

Within a radius of 10 miles of Cameron are some 25 oil wells, each protected by its own little levee in the marshes.

Airliner Crash Kills 6, Hurts One

Four [illegible] were killed [illegible] from the tess for the Meteor Air Transport Company of Teterboro Airport, N.J. were killed instantly.

A mechanic, Floyd Stanley Evans of Lodi, N.J., died after the crash without regaining consciousness. He suffered a skull fracture. All aboard the plane were employees of the airline.

The plane made one pass at the field and was turning for a secofid attempt when a wing dug into the earth.

Japs Manhandle Mrs. Roosevelt

TOKYO (AP)—Twenty Japanese women waving Communist banners today manhandled Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in downtown Tokyo when she refused them an interview, the newspaper Yomiuri reported.

The newspaper said the widow of the late U. S. president was rescued by Japanese guards and was uninjured.

Mrs. Roosevelt, on a tour of Japan, was dragged from an automobile outside the labor ministry building.

The newspaper said that when Mrs. Roosevelt's automobile pulled up in front of the building, the women clamored for an interview.

When Mrs. Roosevelt refused, [illegible] car.

Raging Floods Strike Scotland

FORT WILLIAM, Scotland (AP)—A thunderstorm spread raging floods over west and central Scotland today.

Thousands of Whitsun holiday-makers were marooned in trains, buses and steamers as mountain lochs overflowed and sent waters rushing across roads and rail lines.

Hundreds of tons of rocks and road materials were swept into the main street of this west coast resort after two inches of rain in four hours turned mountain roads into torrents.

Air ministry officials in London said the storms covered all the west coast of Scotland and parts of western England. They are likely to reach London and eastern England Tuesday, officials said.

Sparrow Laziest

U.K. Lark Regains Its Title As Earliest Of Early Birds

GLANTON, Eng. (Reuters) — After sleeping in for three years, the lark has again won back its title as the earliest early bird.

About 700 bird watchers through the world proved that Sunday. They got up before the lark just to find out exactly what time it does rise and sing.

The survey was organized by Noble Rollin, head of the World Bird Research station at this Northumberland town in the north of England.

The previous three surveys showed that the lark, instead of being the earliest riser in the bird world, had become a sluggard. The curlew, wood pigeon and the pheasant had all sung their dawn chorus before it.

But Sunday the lark must have heard the rumor going around that it was a sleepyhead. For through the British Isles, at least, it and its kinfolk were up at the first glow of dawn.

The earliest lark in Britain sounded off at 3 a. m.

The bird-watcher who heard it sing at Northampton, England, reported: "It was so early I nearly dropped my notebook in amazement."

Rollin himself noted the order in which birds greeted the day hereabouts. His timings: lark, 3:11 a. m.; redstart, 3:30; song thrush, 3:44; blackbird, 3:47; robin, 3:48; goldcrest, 4:13; willow warbler, 4.29.

Reports from listening outposts scattered as far away as Connecticut, Japan and India will take weeks to come in.

"But phone calls I've received so far confirm that the lark has again come into its own," said Rollin. "There is no doubt this time about it being the earliest riser."

The watchers discovered that the laziest bird is the sparrow, "who gets up when it feels like it."

Dulles Arrives For Turkey Tour

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP)—State Secretary John Foster Dulles and other United States officials on a Middle East tour arrived here from Pakistan today for a one-day rest.

Dulles declined to make any comment to newspaper men and refused to allow photographs to be taken.

Winding up three days of conferences in Karachi Sunday night, Dulles told a press conference he would return to Washington after his 20-day trip "with no disposition to meddle in the affairs of others but with a keen realization that what happens in this part of the world has world-wide repercussions."

Speaking of Middle Eastern defence against Communist aggression, Dulles said he did "not have any firm view as to the precise organization which might develop."

Tractor Fitting Saves Life Of Boy Driving

COOKSTOWN, Ont. (CP) — A three-inch crank fitting saved the life of 11-year-old David Hood Sunday when his father's tractor literally climbed a shed. The boy apparently froze to the controls.

As the vehicle broke through the ceiling and began toppling, he jumped. He fell in the path of the tractor, but the crank fitting caught on a ceiling beam and held the machine as the boy scrambled to safety.

Some Batteries Underground

U.S. Army To Spot Ack-Ack Missile Units To Protect Centres Of Major Importance

WASHINGTON (AP)—Details of the army's program to spot guided missile anti-aircraft units around major U. S. cities have come to light, including the fact that some batteries will be located underground.

Information which became available for the first time Saturday showed the army will require an average of 96 acres for a battalion using the Nike missile to protect industrial, port and government centres against high-flying enemy bombers.

Twelve launchers will be used in above-ground installations to fire the 1,000-mile-an-hour missiles which, the army claims, have uncanny accuracy against even other guided missiles or supersonic aircraft. For above-ground bases, the army will need 96 acres to deploy the weapons in proper firing position.

Nine launchers will be in underground installations.

Specifications for sites requires that they be adaptable to radar use for detection and tracking of enemy bombers and be clear of obstructions for the take-off of the missiles. The sites also will include underground storage facilities, magazines and housing for troops.

Except for details made available Saturday and two previous announcements, the U. S Army has been officially silent about guided missile defences.

An over-all length of about 20 feet, a body diameter of approximately 18 inches, Fins which control its flight, similar to those of an airplane, are about three feet in span. Total weight is about 1,000 pounds.

The guidance system is in three phases—a pre-set, initial guidance, like aiming a gun in the general direction of the target; a "command" mid-course guidance which uses radio and radar to steer the missile toward the approximate area to which an enemy bomber is approaching; a "terminal" phase system in which the missile strikes home by following radar signals bounced off the target.

Fatalities Total 14 In E. Canada

Drownings Account For Four Deaths Of Nine In Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boating accidents accounted for three of the six drownings reported in Eastern Canada during the weekend.

Also listed in a Canadian Press compilation of 14 week-end fatalities today were four deaths in traffic mishaps and four from miscellaneous causes.

Ontario reported nine violent deaths, Quebec three and New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island one each.

The Ontario deaths:

Violet Brown, 5, died in a fire which swept her home at Monteith, 30 miles northeast of Timmins. Her mother and seven other children escaped.

BOAT OVERTURNS

At Nighthawk Lake, 24 miles east of Timmins, Emile Onieu, 37, was drowned when a boat overturned.

Eino Jokinen, 45, of Hurkett, was found drowned near a log jam in the Port Arthur district. Also in Northwestern Ontario, a victim not identified was drowned at Lake Saganag near the United States border, provincial police reported.

John Eastwood, 3, was drowned when he tumbled off a wharf at Lancaster, 15 miles west of Cornwall.

CHILD CHOKES

Mrs. Arthur Moreau, 17, was killed and four other persons were injured when a truck out of control hit a culvert near Oshawa.

While eating a peanut butter sandwich, Dorothy Muriel Cote, 4, choked to death at Niagara Falls. In the same city, James Wilson, 60-year-old brakeman, died in a railway yard shunting mishap.

Rejects Offer Of Premiership

PARIS (CP)—Andre Diethelm, 57-year-old leader of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's parliamentary following, decided today against trying to put together a new French cabinet.

Diethelm's decision came after a meeting with the deputies who had been elected under the banner of de Gaulle's Rassemblement du Peuple Francais. De Gaulle has disbanded the RPF as a political party but the 72 deputies continue to use the name.

France has been without a government since last Thursday when Radical Socialist Premier Rene Mayer was defeated in a vote of confidence on his demands for financial reforms. The Gaullists were chiefly responsible for the government's fall.

Diethelm is the second parliamentary leader to turn down an offer from President Vincent Auriol. Socialist Guy Mollet declined Sunday.

Threaten, Bomb Negro Families

CLEVELAND (AP)—For the second time in five days, there has been an attack here on the homes of Negroes living in neighborhoods where whites also live.

The latest incident was dynamite explosion early Sunday, at the home of Rev. Smith Ware, 48, a former Baptist minister.

The dynamiters also were after Ware's next door neighbor, Lee Malloy, also a Negro. But the bomb they put on his porch didn't explode.

Just two miles away, someone last Wednesday threw a bottle containing a note through a window in the home of Mrs. Dolores Johnson, 36.

"Get out of this neighborhood," said the note. "The next time it will be a bomb." The note was signed: "K. K. K."

Sunday's blast knocked the Ware and Malloy families out of their beds. No one was hurt.

Trade Fair Attendance In Lindsay Doubles '52

LINDSAY (ENS)—Attendance at Lindsay Trade Fair this year, according to officials, was almost double last year's figure, the first year the fair was held.

Total official count of 10,018 was tallied for three days of the fair this year despite a poor crowd on the first day when rain cut attendance drastically.

According to chairman of the fair for the Chamber of Commerce, J. C. Patterson, at least $60,000 worth of sales was concluded on the floor of the fair and another $125,000 in business is expected to result from the various exhibits.

Officials state that the whole fair was a decided financial success. The best crowd of the three days was seen on Friday evening when 3,000 persons jammed the Lindsay Armouries at one counting.

talking to members of their delegation, said the Allies had requested a news blackout on the session. A similar blackout was imposed in April, 1952, in an effort to iron out differences on the prisoner exchange issue.

The Red newspaper men indicated disapproval of the secret sessions when they were first informed by the Red delegation at this morning's meeting. The Red correspondents did not return to Panmunjom from Kaesong for the afternoon secret sessions. The delegates met a total of about two hours, with two recesses.

The South Korean delegate, Maj.-Gen. Choi Duk Shin, did not attend the session.

A reliable South Korean source said Choi refused to go because he could not accept part of the new proposal, but an Allied spokesman said Choi telephoned that he missed the helicopter from Allied headquarters at Munsan.

It was the first time a South Korean truce delegate has missed a session.

Lt.-Gen. William K. Harrison, senior Allied delegate, did not hold his usual press conference after the meeting. He turned aside all questions with "no comment."

There was speculation before the meeting that the UN command would make a "now or never" effort to break the truce deadlock.

The vital issue of what to do with prisoners refusing to return to their Red homelands remained the biggest problem.

B.C. Douks Burn Seven Homes After Warning

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Torch-throwing arsonists early Saturday burned seven homes and failed in attempts on two others in Kootenay district Doukhobor villages.

The homes burned all belonged to the radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobors and were in the villages of Krestova and nearby Goose Creek.

The fires followed the Friday warning from Premier W. A. C. Bennett that the "fooling around" is over for the Doukhobors.

The fires broke out around 3 a.m. within minutes of each other, RCMP reported.

BURN ALL OVER

"Houses started burning all about the district," said a police spokesman.

"Two unexploded bottles filled with gasoline were found, but by the time investigators got them several people had fingered them."

No arrests have been made.

"The fires followed exactly the same pattern as the burnings at Perry Siding and Appledale last month when 13 houses were destroyed," the spokesman said.

Krestova, headquarters of the Sons, was the scene of mass burnings in 1950.

Fire is a Doukhobor form of protest, and it is not uncommon for the "Sons" to put the torch to their own homes.

Say Princess Turns More To Religion

LONDON (AP) —The Sunday Pictorial has come up with an explanation why Princess Margaret is shunning her old gay haunts: She's going to church instead.

"While the Queen has been preparing herself for her Coronation, her 22-year-old sister has dedicated herself with a new vigor to the religious way of life," the tabloid said in a front-page feature Sunday.

"It is no doubt as a result of the princess's new and fuller religious life that the rumor has spread that she plans to enter a religious order after the Coronation," it added.

CUT PRICE

However, the Dealers' Supply Co. of Granby apparently began selling company products at a price below suggested by Procter and Gamble's Montreal office. Evidence was that Mr. Goudreau felt this price-cutting might injure the "pool car" system. Retailers might not subscribe to the pool if they could obtain the product from the jobber at a price almost as cheap as the pool car.

On orders from Mr. Goudreau, L. C. Tremblay, general supervisor of salesmen in the Greater Montreal territory, requested the Granby company to obey the price maintenance order. When the jobber refused, supplies were cut off for about four months until the jobber agreed to comply with the order.

Biggest Exercise Starts Week Of Civil Defence

OTTAWA (CP) — International civil defence week, designed to train civilian personnel on both sides of the border and to dramatize need for mutual emergency aid, starts June 1, the health department announced today.

"Operation Niagara—1953" will be one of the biggest exercises staged on the continent. Hub of activities will be the St. Catharines-Niagara Falls, N. Y. area as Canada goes to the "aid" of the neighboring U. S. city.

Climax of the week will be June 5 when approximately 100 fire and rescue trucks, police cars, ambulances and other emergency vehicles manned by 400 Canadian civil defence workers cross the international border.

Attending will be Health Minister Martin, federal minister in charge of civil defence, and Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, federal civil defence co-ordinator. The operation will be under direction of civil defence director Bradley Norton of Niagara Falls, N. Y., with the Canadian contingent headed by Brig. R. G. Whitelaw of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., civil defence co-ordinator for Lincoln and Welland.

Arrangements for Ontario civil defence participation will be under Lt-Col. Jack Adams, the province's civil defence training officer. Lt.-Col. C. Les Smith, chief training officer, civil defence division of the health and welfare department, will handle the federal contribution.

Canadian and U. S. aircraft are also to participate. Rendezvous for the Canadian group will be St. Catharines.

Report 2 Cases Of Hog Cholera

OTTAWA (CP)—Another two outbreaks of hog cholera were reported by the agriculture department today, bringing the total number of infected farms in southwestern Ontario to 17.

The new cases of infection, however, were well within the quarantine area, in counties where outbreaks had occurred before.

One was at Shakespeare in Perth county and the other at Grassie in Lincoln. Both cases were traced to dealers. The department said there is no report of any farm-to-farm secondary outbreak.

But the disease is continuing to take its toll in dead pigs. So far the number of hogs that died of the disease or were slaughtered in the eradication stands at more than 700, a jump of about 100 during the week-end.

Council, Children's Aid Joust – With Cars

It's not very often that officials of the city have cause to disagree with the Children's Aid Society.

But it happened in Peterborough Saturday when a car belonging to the Peterborough Children's Aid Society collided with the left front door of a car belonging to Ald. Arthur Burrows, chairman of the parks committee of Peterborough City Council.

It wasn't a serious encounter. About $20 damage was done to the door of Ald. Burrows' car. Damage estimated at $35 was done to the right front of the CAS car, driven by Miss Dorothy Metcalfe, 22, 563 Gilmour Street.

Brushes Power Line

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—While making a parachute jump Sunday, Glen Masterson, local president of the Canadian Parachute Club, realized he had misjudged the wind. He floated a short distance from the designated landing spot and as he landed his chute brushed 2,200-volt power wires. It caused a short circuit and power was off for about an hour.

RCMP Concerned At Growth Of Organized Gangsterism

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCMP is concerned about a possible growth of gangsterism—organized crime—in Canada. The national police force cites two factors for this anxiety: 1. A United States anti-crime drive which may chase some big-time criminals across the border. 2. Expansion of Canada's population, providing richer pickings for hoodlums.

The RCMP view is set out in a revised edition of its publication "Law and Order in Canadian Democracy," a 273-page book on crime and police work. Originally published in 1949, it now has been brought up to date.

Dealing with the sharpened crime problem caused by growth of population, the book says that organized crime by its very nature must breed in thickly populated areas.

'HEAT IS ON'

And, "in gangster parlance, 'the heat is on' across the border. To many of the harassed criminals in the U. S., our country with its wealth and growth, must seem to offer new and safer fields for their rapacity."

"Much effort," the RCMP adds drily, "may be needed to convince them otherwise."

New and stronger laws may be required to curb crime in the face of the two developments.

"It may be," says the RCMP, "that additional safeguards will be needed against that unending search by criminals for the corrupt 'Protection' without which they cannot operate for long as organizations."

But the effectiveness of any such measures, the book warns, will depend in the final analysis chiefly —if not wholly—on the public. The law cannot be changed any faster, or enforced any better, than the general community changes in its opinions and beliefs.

NO NEED TO BE SMUG

Canadians are inclined to be a little smug about the relatively small amount of gangster activity in this country, the RCMP observes. But any satisfaction should be tempered by the fact that this is only a matter of degree.

"For it," it says, "we have our own 'sordid story' of organized crime, of drug rings, of smuggling and bootlegging gangs, of betting syndicates, of chains of brothels, of gang murders.

"We have, too, the correlative story of bribery and corruption, without which very few gang rackets can exist."

While the Canadian history of gangsterism is largely that of local organizations, the book says, every large city in the country has a serious problem in combatting organized crime. It is still "a very active" problem in most cities.

"Given only a lowering of the standards of legislative bodies, courts and police; given the slightest leeway for corruption and, above all, given a falling-off of public vigilance and morality," the RCMP says, "The vicious elements that create the problem could and would become a very real and firmly-entrenched threat to our national well-being."

Rosebushes Sell Quickly In City

An Examiner advertisement cleared out Harold Johnston's rose bushes so fast that people who delayed calling at his greenhouses, west of Crawford's Grove were too late, and had to be content with shrubs, petunias or something else.

"Many of the bushes had lost their identification tags," Mr. Johnston said Saturday. "So, rather than do a lot of explaining to buyers, we priced them down to 35c each. They soon vanished Some people bought them in bundles from 10 to 25 bushes. They ought to have a lot of bloom this summer. The easiest way out for us was to get rid of them, and we did."

Fritz Marti of Bowmanville who has been offering two-year field-grown bushes on the local market for the last three weeks has been passing out a lot at $1.45 each. Marti is a Swiss who has been in Bowmanville four years.

"This is my first crop of bushes" he told the Examiner Saturday.

Believe Anthrax May Hit Again

CHICAGO (AP) —The American Veterinary Medical Association warned today there is danger of new flareups of anthrax in areas where the disease took a heavy livestock toll in 1952.

The association said a new outbreak already has occurred in Franklin County, Kansas, one of the hardest hit sections last summer.

The association said the Kansas outbreak is believed to have been caused by anthrax spores which remained on the ground from the 1952 epidemic.

"One of the chief difficulties in controlling anthrax is the fact that the spores can lie dormant in the soil for years, then cause new outbreaks," a spokesman said.

Czech Officer Says Russia Ready By 1955

WASHINGTON (AP)—A former Czech Army officer, trained in Soviet military strategy, has informed the House of Representatives un-American activities committee of purported Russian plans to launch war in Europe "before 1955."

The Russian decision to "take over Western Europe," the committee was told, is predicated on Soviet suspicion that Britain is preparing "a definite attack to destroy the Soviet Union" in 1955.

The testimony, given in a secret committee session May 13 and 14, was made public Saturday in an unusual volume entitled, "Soviet Schedule for War, 1955."

The witness is identified as Col. Jan Bukar—a name which chairman Harold Velde (Rep.-Ill.) said was assumed to hide his true identity as a Czech partisan fighter against the Germans in the Second World War.

COINCIDES

The year, 1955, is the same year which former President Truman and his top advisers listed as the period of the greatest danger of attack from Russia.

President Eisenhower has scoffed at this idea, disclaiming any faith in what he called magical formulas.

He said he did not believe anyone could predict when, if ever, another government would start a global war.

The House committee headed by Velde predicted in a foreword to its hearing transcript that Bukar's testimony "will be met by disapproval by some in the United States and elsewhere, who will seriously object to being interrupted from the placidity they are undeservingly enjoy."

Bukar told the committee the Soviet target date for war was disclosed to him as one of 3,000 officers in training at a Russian military school for conquest at Moscow between 1945 and 1947.

The witness told the congressmen Russia's plan to overwhelm Western Europe was outlined in a lecture by a Kremlin foreign service expert named Sverdlov

Plan Invitation From Mayor For Ambassador To Visit City

R. DOUGLAS STUART

Assuming that R. Douglas Stuart of Chicago would be approved by the U. S. Senate as United States ambassador to Canada, as reported several days ago, it was expected at the city hall today that he would receive an early invitation to visit Peterborough after taking up residence in Ottawa.

Mr. Stuart has personal recollections of Peterborough days when he was beginning his business training and career.

Mrs. Hugh Waddell, the wife of Mayor Waddell, is a niece of the new ambassador, and he is also the uncle of John Stuart, Jr., of Old Orchard Farm.

Mr. Stuart is a brother of Mrs. G. A. Macdonald who lived here for many years, and who at present is staying at the Waddell home while His Worship and Mrs. Waddell are attending the Coronation.

It was suggested at the City Hall today that the invitation to Mr. Stuart to visit Peterborough as U. S. Ambassador would be extended to him as soon as it was definitely known here of his appointment had been approved.

Mr. Stuart, who is president and vice chairman of the Board of The Quaker Oats Company in Chicago, is a director of The Quaker Oats Company in Peterborough in 1906.

He is not only a frequent visitor to Peterborough, but has spent so much time and has so many business and personal interests in Canada that his appointment as United States Ambassador is a happy one which should be welcomed by all Canadians.

THIS 300-POUND BEAR with his front paws draped around the neck of hunter Ted Watson was trapped and shot after it had raided the apiary of Douglas Hill who lives two miles east of Havelock.

Bear Trapped, Shot After Raids On Bee Hives

HAVELOCK (ENS) — A bear weighing 300 pounds and measuring six feet eight inches which has been raiding the apiary of Douglas Hill since Wednesday night and causing an estimated damage of $400, was shot Friday morning in a special trap set for him.

The apiary is located on the property of Donald Clarke, two miles east of Havelock. For several nights residents in the neighborhood had been disturbed by dogs barking. Thursday morning, Mr. Clarke discovered the bear's tracks in his yard. The bear had evidently been carrying the hives into the nearby woods, before beginning his feast on the golden liquid.

Ted Watson, a nearby neighbor, set a trap Thursday night 100 yards from Mr. Clarke's home. He built a fence around the trap, placed a small pail of honey in it as bait, and camouflaged it with leaves.

Friday morning Mr. Watson received a phone call saying that the bear was in the trap. He and his mother drove to the scene and shot the bear.

Mr. Hill believes that he will be able to salvage three hives out of the twenty destroyed by the bear.

Feeding Crowds Coronation Day

LONDON (Reuters) — An army of cooks, waitresses and dishwashers is getting ready for the biggest operation of their lives—Coronation Day.

They will have to feed the millions who will crowd central London to see the coronation procession.

Plans for the great day were made months ahead by three or four main companies owning cafeteria chains.

One firm alone plans to feed 1,000,000 persons, a project involving a staff of 12,000 and 600 trucks to bring 1,000 tons of food and equipment to "strategic" points.

Another company, also planning on a basis of 1,000,000 customers, has already made up 1,000,000 sandwiches, wrapped them in cellophane and put them in cold storage.

The big turnover is expected in special tents and temporary buildings built along the route.

Reckoning on a hot day, one sidewalk organization is moving in with 500,000 soft drinks and 500,000 ice cream bars.

The companies will also handle a heavy trade in a more expensive "buffet lunch" served in the special stands where distinguished visitors and overseas tourists will sit.

Man Charged With Shooting At Neighbor

COBOURG (ENS)—Judgment was reserved for a week when Ekel Grills, age 51 of Haldimand township appeared in police court on a charge of shooting at Garnet Anderson, his neighbor with intent to cause grievous bodily harm.

Harry Deyman acted for the Crown and Russell Honey of Port Hope for the accused. In view of the fact that the difficulties between the accused and the complainant involved family matters, Magistrate R. B. Baxter held part of the court in camera. Anderson was represented by A. R. Willmott.

Anderson, who is a young man, told the court that on May 12 he turned up his lane after taking the car out to check the timing. The emergency brake was dragging and he stopped part way up the lane and got underneath the car to ease off the brake.

"I heard a shot and got out from underneath the car and climbed in and started away. I then heard something hit the back of the car. I drove up to the house and got out and examined the car and there was a hole in the back, above the right tail light and in the trunk compartment the slug of a bullet was lying beside the spare tire.

"I am not the white-haired boy with the Grills now," testified Anderson. The rest of his evidence was taken with the public excluded.

FOUND HOLE

Provincial Constable Lyle Erskine told the court that he investigated the complaint of Anderson and found a hole in the car with a sliver of lead still adhering to the edge of it. There was a slug in the trunk compartment and apparently it had struck the spare tire and bounced off. He interviewed the accused who told him of trouble between him and Anderson.

The constable examined the rifle, a 22 repeater and Grills told him that he had fired a shot from the corner of his barn. Anderson's car was part way up the lane at the time about 651 feet away. A test was made with the gun and it penetrated a board six inches wide and two inches thick, going right through. Grills had complained to him before about Anderson and the constable said that he believed that the complaints formed the background of the shooting.

SCARE ANDERSON

Grills spoke of certain difficulties which he said he had with Anderson. At the time of the shooting, he picked up his rifle and said to his wife that he was going to scare Anderson. He fired a shot in the air, away from the car up the lane and he estimated the car was 270 feet away. As Anderson started off he fired another shot and for the third shot, as the gun was swinging back and forth, he steadied it against the fence and fired in the direction of the car but to the right.

"I felt sure that the gun would not carry that far," testified the accused.

Elmer Grills, son of the accused, gave evidence concerning the matter about which the court was closed to the public.

Canadian Arms Production Seen Stabilizing Influence

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In the words of the economists, Canada's arms production has passed from a "dynamic" to a "stabilizing" influence on the fast-growing Canadian economy.

That means the rate of spending on arms is over the hump—it has passed the peak and now is slipping downward.

The change, which took place during the last few months, apparently has left no serious scars on the economy. Economists are confident that Canada's national production of goods and services will make a billion-dollar gain this year to a peak of $24,000,000,000, despite falling prices.

DOWNWARD TREND

Although the arms - spending trend is on the downward s lot of money still is being into the military section of the industrial economy. Officials believe that about $1,150,000,000 likely will flow out of the federal treasury into the arms machine in the current 1953-54 fiscal year.

Here's how economists estimate the rate of arms spending during a three-year period: fiscal year 1951-52, $1,000,000,000; 1952-53, $1,200,000,000; 1953-54, $1,150,000,000

That makes a total of [illegible] 350,000,000 in three years. And defence spending is by no means over. Other money is also going into the military pocket—millions of dollars more for military pay and allowance and upkeep.

But the arms machine has taken the biggest chunk: Aircraft, electronic products, guns, ammunition and ships. A lot of these production programs are still far from completion, and though there's talk of a possible big drop in defence spending next year, some economists don't agree.

They believe the Canadian taxpayer may have to shell out another $1,000,000,000 or more in the fiscal year 1954-55 to complete all the defence programs and pay for replacement of obsolete material.

So while defence spending may be pointing down, arms production may remain a "stabilizing" influence on the Canadian economy for a good many months to come.

Large Rainbow Caught In Shelter Valley

COBOURG (ENS)—Bill Perry's record rainbow trout of 6½ pounds was broken over weekend when Roy Cooney of Grafton caught one weighing six pounds, nine ounces.

Perry's trout was 28½ inches long and Cooney's was 27½. Both were caught in Shelter Valley Creek and in both cases dew worms were used as bait. As far as is known, Cooney's trout weighed heavier than any caught so far in Shelter Valley Creek.

Sea Cadets Hold Annual Parade To Trinity Church

Approximately 35 Peterborough Sea Cadets attended Trinity United Church under their commander Lieut. J. S. Gardiner to commemorate the anniversary of the Battle of the Atlantic.

The guest minister was the Rev. Dr. A. E. Armstrong of Toronto and former supply preacher at Trinity church.

Special music for the service was provided by the choir under the direction of Donald Kennedy, organist. They sang, Send Out Thy Light, by Gounod. Mrs. J. A. McNeil and Morton Knox sang a duet, How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds, by Brown.

Mr. Kennedy was assisted by Mrs. Robert Baker at the piano.

Cars Collide

COBOURG (ENS) — Two cars collided on Saturday night at Park and Division Sts. when a car driven by W. W. Taylor of Grafton was in collision with one driven by Joseph Bellamy of Cobourg.

Both were proceeding north on Division and Bellamy was turning left to Park St. when the collision occurred.

Constables C. Cunningham and Homer Seale investigated.

Firestone Develops Sensational New Dri-Charged Battery

This revolutionary new Dri-Charged battery will give motorists longer, more economical service than conventional batteries now in use. Developed by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, the battery was made possible by a new glass separator and a plastic bottle that holds battery acid indefinitely.

Upon delivery to the customer, the new Firestone Dri-Charged battery is "born" when the battery acid is poured into the battery cells. The dry battery at this time snaps to life and, from this point on, becomes the same as an ordinary wet storage battery. Demonstrating this simple process of energizing a Dri-Charged battery are E. W. Barbour, Firestone Merchandise Manager (right) and H. D. Shipman, Trade Sales Manager.

The Downer's Corners Main

The City Council has financially guaranteed and the Utilities Commission will build a water main east along Highway 7 across the river to serve commercial buildings and a few houses in that territory. The cost is estimated to be about $50,000. This limited project is an excellent opportunity to test, for Peterborough use, the composite piping known as Transite. All other water mains in the city are made of cast iron piping. There are many strong arguments for the use of the new material. It has been successfully installed in hundreds of cities in Canada and the United States. The rate of its municipal use is increasing every week.

* * *

The chief reason for using Transite is that it is cheaper than cast iron piping—up to fifteen percent cheaper. There has been a local hesitation to give up cast iron piping, yet the reasons advanced for retaining the iron conduits and not installing the composite piping have failed to convince a good many Peterborough people, among them some engineering experts. Now is the time to give the new kind of water main a reasonable chance to prove its worth. This can readily be done in a limited installation such as the main to Downer's Corners, at a possible saving of $7,500 in the total cost of the work. Such a saving, and the excellent opportunity to put Transite to the test should immediately appeal to all the Utilities people, to the water ratepayers, and to the City Council which, for the taxpayers, has financially underwritten the installation.

Profitable Parrots

As soon as there is a profitable popular demand for something that involves breaking the law, persons willing to break a law for profit appear. Occasionally, popular demand of this nature has been fostered by those willing to break the law for profit, as some drug peddlers are said to do. In other instances, the willing lawbreakers go into action to supply an obviously existing demand needing no fostering. We have seen it happen with liquor and with cigarettes. Now it's parrots.

About twenty-three years ago, the U.S. Public Health Service had a Federal regulation enacted forbidding the importation of parrots, parakeets, and other members of the parrot family. Incidentally, other nations have similar regulations, all for the same reason. These birds sometimes carry a disease called psittacosis, resembling pneumonia, which may attack humans and which did cause a number of deaths prior to the enacting of the ban against importation.

There was only one exception to the ban: a duly accredited institution could import the birds, and some time after the enactment of the ban this led to an amusing incident. King George V had either purchased or had been given a parrot, and the bird was on its way to England. Officials suddenly realized that this was against the law, but decided that something had to be done. So, by some legal process, His Majesty became an institution and thus eligible to import a parrot.

To return to the profitable parrots of the U.S.: Medical men there now say that the birds are not very dangerous. Antibiotics can turn the disease they may carry into a minor nuisance. Anyway, there are other bird and animal carriers. The parrot lovers immediately wanted their favourite birds. The ban still existed. And the willing lawbreakers went cheerfully to work smuggling parrots, profiting so substantially from their activities that an international organization was formed. The trade has flourished until one of the operational hazards today is the hijacker, the crook who waylays other crooks and takes from them their illegal produce.

From The Brewery Warehouse To The Filtration Plant

Water Street in its quiet hours—rare these days of heavy city and district traffic—is a pleasing thoroughfare. It is also one of our oldest streets. A few vestiges of a hundred years ago remain—some old buildings used as offices, a low stone structure behind Mr. Currelly's law office, (reputed to be the oldest existing building in the city); and perhaps some of the venerable trees on north Water Street. A drive along the street from south to north in an uncrowded part of the day and at this time of year is a delight.

Across from the Brewers' Warehouse is a wide expanse of the river, with the islands and tree-lined gardens of the east side. The near side is unfortunately occupied by railway tracks, a trestle bridge, cinders and dumped waste. Incidentally, where once there were only a couple of tracks the rails have enlarged their coverage as the bank has been filled; the area is now a regular shunting yard. By whose permission have these new acres of river bank been thus pre-empted?

From the canoe company plant to the liquor store there is little to attract. The back side of the old market place (now the city's parking lot) is unsightly. Yet the removal of the old city building has opened to view the high and not displeasing facade of the east side of Water Street. The Post Office building presents a problem. Who will wind the clock when the postal people vacate the building to take up the new quarters on Charlotte Street? Half way up the block between Hunter and Brock, on the east side, there is a short alley which gives an unfamiliar glimpse of St. John's church.

From the Brock corner north, Water Street takes on its open and green face. Its trees are distinguished—both in Victoria Park and bordering the sidewalk on both sides. The new city hall space (how well the sods have taken!) makes possible a wider and handsomer public view of St. Paul's church spire than has been obtainable since the church building was begun in 1857.

North from Murray to Park Hill Road and beyond are substantial Victorian and Edwardian residences, and many smaller but solid, neat and tidy houses showing the general aptitude of Peterborough people to keep their houses well. At the Goose Pond is one of the loveliest panoramas within the city limits, fringed by the Walter Stocker shrub and flower border, outlined by Nicholls' Oval park and the exquisitely-shaped arches of the Black Bridge. The street at Goose Pond used to be so narrow that two carriages had to pass carefully lest ladies should be agitated by their nearness to the brink. Over the years the banks have been filled. Now the road is wide and the beautiful beds of flowers have been created. It is very different from what has happened to the reclaimed land across from the Brewers' Warehouse.

Crossing Park Hill Road (Smith Street, you know) one catches a glimpse of Inverlea Park and its tulip beds. Then on past other solid houses until the swift river sparkles on the right, giving power to two generating plants, and providing (on the dams) vantage points for fishermen. The north side is rather undeveloped and, in some places, unkempt. But the tender May foliage of trees continues, distracting the eye from blemishes.

And so on, past signs advertising minnows, past garage and collection of cabins, to the Water Works (1909 identifies it) and the Filtration Plant. These two properties are now becoming one, and through the vision and devoted work of the Utilities management and staff over the last twenty years, one of the most commodious, interesting and pleasant public parks of Peterborough is being created.

Every year there are improving changes. Part of the iron fence has been removed; why, we do not know. Perhaps some work in progress has made this necessary. In one of the deer runs down to the river there is a little home-made fountain. It does not of course vie with the illuminated fountain which has been a brilliant feature of the place for many years, but like the new trees being set out and zoological specimens being aired, it adds its own bit of unaffected charm.

Warning: do not expect to dawdle in busy hours over whatever pleasures Water Street offers. Then they evaporate in traffic fumes. It is our longest street, but also one of the most heavily travelled.

Sarnia Smitten

A tornado is the most violent storm that nature produces. Sarnia people today need no proof of this statement. The violence is accentuated by the suddenness of a tornado's appearance and the relative calm outside it. Persons a few miles from the wrecked streets were quite unaware at the time that Sarnia's roof had been raised, its walls razed. They returned to discover rubble.

The contrast between violence and calm is curiously echoed in scientific descriptions of tornadoes. For instance, a weather report Friday: "Thundershowers occurred in the warm air ahead of the occluded front moving east across the Great Lakes area. The severe instability along this line was responsible for the tornado which struck the Sarnia area Thursday evening." Severe instability, indeed.

An American meteorologist named Snowden D. Flora has just published a book on tornadoes of the United States. Here against the disparity between the awful force of a tornado and the calm description of it, chills the imagination. Of one tornado in Kansas, he merely says: "Where the funnel touched the ground, destruction was complete." The funnel which crossed southwestern Ontario Thursday evening left destruction in its wake where, for one hundred seconds, it touched Sarnia.

Musical Notes

By PETER PIPER

I STILL think that the greatest hindrance to a well-balanced musical education in this country today consists in the lack of a broad general knowledge of the corpus of musical literature which can ony be got from browsing amongst scores. To take a typical example there are plenty of students who can get through the first movement of a Beethoven sonata more or less creditably, but in the majority of instances there is something lacking—a sense of style. There is, to my mind, no short cut towards remedying this defect. The only way is to immerse oneself in Beethoven; to read his life, to see him in his music-historical setting, and above all to listen to his symphonies, chamber music and other compositions and to try to play them oneself. I would go so far as to say that a knowledge of the orchestra of Beethoven's day is almost essential to the proper rendering of certain passages in his piano works that are conceived on orchestral lines. A thorough knowledge of harmony and counterpoint, too, is necessary in order to play from the inside out rather than from the outside in. Too often, I am afraid, one receives the impression of a performer going through the motions of playing without much idea of what it is all about. The notes are all there, but there are numerous indications of a musical education without depth and background.

✧ ✧ ✧

WHAT is to blame for this state of affairs? I have heard some put the blame fairly and squarely on the head of—the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto. I have heard it said that that body is producing standardized examinees instead of real musicians throughout the length and breadth of the country. From Vancouver to Halifax the "machine", so we are told, is processing pupils through ten grades, culminating in the diplomas. Anything not in the syllabus is a closed book to them. This may be partially true, but I cannot see that the Conservatory is really to blame. Nobody is obliged to take examinations, but they have proved their worth, and if the Conservatory ceased operations some other body would step in. As it is, there are other examining bodies to add variety, and it is a pity that they are not more active, for competition is mutually stimulating.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT IS NOT, to my mind, the examinations that are the culprit, but rather the current attitude of parents, students, and also, I regret to say, of some teachers towards examination results. Useful as they are as guides and stimuli, if too much stress is laid on them much harm can be done. The craving of today is for "results", quick results, of a tangible nature. If progress in music can be measured in terms of grades and marks so much the better. Unfortunately music is an art, not an exact science, and marks and grades are inadequate and can often be quite misleading. If this were more generally recognized I would feel happier about the situation. As it is the successful examinee is apt to get a swollen head and imagine that there is nothing left for him to learn: he should ponder the remark of that great man Maurice Ravel, who, when asked where he had studied replied that he was still studying—when he was already internationally recognized as a great composer! On the other hand the unsuccessful examinee may become unduly discouraged at his slow progress.

✧ ✧ ✧

OUR URBAN civilization would do well to learn from the age-old wisdom of the countryman, who sows the seed and waits patiently for the crop to grow. He does not plough the field up again in a week but awaits the result in God's good time. We are in far too much of a hurry and are much too inclined to look for short cuts. Merely by turning a switch we can have instantly at our command sources of power that our forefathers scarcely even dreamed of, and we fondly assume that we can apply this push-button technique to the process of learning. Whilst we can actually make learning easier for the students of today this facilitation of a formerly painful process has its drawback. The presentation of information in easy pre-digested form means that the student does not have to think so hard. Brains are like muscles: they grow with use and atrophy with disuse. I would not advise strong meat to be given to the sucklings—but is not the mental weaning too long deferred? Instead of getting the habit of foraging for himself the student is kept too long in the position of the nestling, who has only to open his beak for the teacher to drop a nice fat worm into it.

✧ ✧ ✧

ONE WAY of combating the present state of affairs is to build up our musical libraries in our own homes. Most houses have Bibles; how many so-called musical homes have the complete Beethoven sonatas, Bach's Forty-eight Preludes and Fugues, and so on? The pieces in the Conservatory grade books are, for the most part, well chosen, but they are merely selections from a vast repertoire, and must be rounded out with much more extensive browsing. Unfortunately printed music in this country is ferociously expensive. The home market is still scarcely large enough to warrant extensive music publishing in this country (most Canadian publishers are subsidiaries of American or English firms), and consequently a good deal of music has to be imported. This is sold at a price considerably higher than in the country of orgin. A good music library represents a considerable investment of money, yet when one considers the large sums that are cheerfully paid nowadays for every conceivable luxury the small amount of money laid out on books and music should give rise to national heart-searching.

✧ ✧ ✧

LAST Wednesday night we were favoured with a delightful half-hour of Elizabethan music played and sung by Greta Krauss and Lois Marshall. The strict antiquarian would doubtless object that it would have been more correct to play this music on the virginals than the harpsichord, but the two instruments are so akin that this is rather a carping criticisim so long as the harpsichordist uses a restrained registration. It is well that we should from time to time have an opportunity of hearing this delightful music in something like its original form. One of the best-known airs, It was a Lover and his Lass, which Miss Marshall sang, was given in its authentic version, so much fresher and more subtle than the more usual (and incorrect) form, which was flattened out by the Victorian steam-roller for drawingroom use, all the characteristic rhythmic and harmonic twists having been ruthlessly effaced.

To The Moon and Back By 1980?

By PETER STURSBERG

ALTHOUGH certain international organizations have taken up the question of interplanetary travel, the publication of an article entitled "The Challenge of the Spaceship" by Arthur C. Clarke in the current issue of the official UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) magazine "Impact of Science on Society" would seem to be the first time that the United Nations as such has paid any attention to it.

In December 1951, Oscar Schachter of the United Nations legal department did present a paper during a symposium on "Space Travel" at the Hayden Planetarium in New York, but Frank Forrester of the planetarium is inclined to believe that he appeared as an individual rather than an official. Mr. Schachter dealt with the possible legal aspects of such ethereal voyaging and examined the question whether there should be a freedom of space similar to the freedom of the seas.

There is a note of apology in the way the international editors of the UNESCO publication introduce Mr. Clarke's article, a revised and up-to-date version of a paper which he presented some time ago to the British Interplanetary Society. They say that his predictions "are made with enthusiasm, perhaps too much enthusiasm."

Nothing daunted by this douche of editorial cold water, Mr. Clarke asserts, with what seems like a great deal of confidence, that there will be regular interplanetary travel by the end of the century. In fact, he predicts that the first space ship will land on the Moon and return to the Earth in the late nineteen seventies, while he says there is no reason why reconnaissance flights to the planets, presumably by pilotless rockets, "should not take place by 1960."

Mr. Clarke is one of those who have fired the imagination of youth with the idea of space travel. Mr. Forrester is another. It was the latter who devised the reservation forms for space travel which visitors to the New York planetarium can obtain. Mr. Forrester describes these reservation forms as a stunt but a realistic one to appraise the interest in space travel.

✧ ✧ ✧

SO FAR, more than twenty-nine thousand have signed up for the first trip to the Moon; most of them want to go there, although some would like to visit Mars, and there are a few hardy souls who have put their names down for Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. The majority of those who have filled out the forms are 'teen-agers, but the second largest group is between twenty-one and twenty-nine, while the oldest would-be space traveller is eighty-five.

Mr. Forrester says that the reservation forms will be handed over to the first commercial interplanetary travel organization—but up to now no such company has been set up.

The editors of the Unesco magazine agree with Mr. Clarke that "it is none too soon to envisage the possible implications of space travel on the social and political plane," and that seems to be the main reason for the United Nations specialized agency giving publicity to such a speculative subject.

"An attempt to construct a philosophy of astronautics," Mr. Clarke writes, "is far from premature; it is, if anything, a little belated. In the last few years we have seen the political and ethical chaos produced when a great technical development comes into a world which is unprepared for it."

IT WAS WITH such a purpose in mind that the symposium was held at the New York planetarium and Mr. Schachter delivered his paper on the legal aspects of space travel. Although this may be dismissed as fantastic, a number of Americans have already written to Washington asking for the grant of titles to land on the moon; they have received replies saying that it is not within the realm of the United States Government to provide such rights.

The construction of such "space platforms" as were produced by Werner Von Braun, the German rocket expert who is now in the buided missiles department of the United States Ordinance Corps, would undoubtedly cause international trouble. As envisaged, these platforms would be used as military bases suspended one thousand miles above the surface of the earth.

Mr. Clarke, however, is not hopeless of a space future. At the end of his Unesco article, he says: "The crossing of space—even the sense of its imminent achievement in the years before it comes—may do much to turn men's minds outwards and away from their present tribal squabbles."

Seals Ride Ice Floe Into Chaleur

(SAINT JOHN TELEGRAPH-JOURNAL)

THE 600 seals that floated into the Bay of Chaleur recently on an ice floe from the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and were watched from the coastline near Dalhousie as they dived into the sea in quest of herring or basked in the sunshine on the beach, formed altogther a bigger invasion of their kind than had been seen on the North Shore in a generation at least.

The sleek, fat, cumbersome mammals must be mystified by mankind's varying reactions to their visits. The despatch said that the Mounites were on hand, prohibiting residents from shooting the seals. And yet when the herd drifts out into gulf again they will get much different reception from the watchful crews of the Newfoundland and Nova Scotia sealing ships and from the shore-based hunters of the Magdalen Islands, between Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Sealing seems to the novice a cruel business, and rarely can a new hand on the ships enter into the hunt at first enthusiastically and without qualms. The kill begins usually in mid-March as the seals come drifting down from the North, sometimes as many as 60,000 in a single pack. Across the ice the crewmen range, clubbing the young seals, which are especially sought for their blubber, skin and fur. The slaughter is often so widespread that the decks of the sealers are awash with blood.

Sometimes, though, it's almost as dangerous for the hunters as for the hunted. Many a stout sealing ship has been crunched and splintered, despite its reinforced hull, by grinding ice floes. And few people who live and work on land would relish the job of the Magdalen Islands, who trudge far out on the ice fields dragging shallow, flat-bottomed boats behind them—odd craft which serve as sleds for the seals or, in emergencies, as lifeboats for the hunters.

The playful but destructive seadogs which the Bay of Fundy coast knows so well are, incidently, another species of hair seal and somewhat smaller. Both types are different from the full seal of the Pacific. The seadogs are saved from wholesale killing by the fact that although their colony in these parts is one of the largest along the Atlantic shoreline, there aren't enough of them to form the basis of a seadog-hunting industry.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Jesus went unto the mount of Olives. And early in the morning He came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them . . .

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record it not true.

Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go . . . And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world . . . Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it . . .

He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God. (John 8: 1, 2, 12-14, 23, 44, 47.)

✧ ✧ ✧

In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him . . . And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world. (I John 4:9,14).

You Can't Win

(Dean Eagle in Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal)

The great horse Citation, now retired, won more than a million bucks—$1,085,760 to be exact. Yet his brilliant record is grim testimony to a fact that horse bettors already are aware of: Only horses beat horses regularly; people rarely beat them.

If you had wagered $2 on the nose of Citation every time he ran you would have made about enough to buy a pair of shoes. Citation ran in 43 betting races, won 31 times. Thus, at the rate of $2 a race, you would have invested $86. Citation's win mutuels totaled $99.50, so you would have made a profit of $13.50.

If you deposited $86 in the credit union of the place where you work on April 22, 1947—the day Citation won his first race—the sum would have netted you $14.59 by July 14, 1951, the date of Citation's last race. Thus, the credit union at four per cent paid $1.09 more than Citation.

Luscious Lady Named Lilo Worthy Addition To Imports

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A luscious lady named Lilo is the latest on the list of exciting French exports, and a worthy addition to such delicacies as champagne, perfumes, truffles and Denise Darcel.

Lilo is a blonde dynamo, provided with excellent lines by nature and Abe Burrows, and with songs by Cole Porter. Her singing and clowning is a show-stopper in "Can-Can," which opened its Broadway run this month.

Already she is being compared with Ethel Merman, for her big voice and clear projection; with Betty Hutton for her looks and energy; with Edith Piaf for no reason except both are as Parisienne as the Champs Elysees.

Broadway has discovered a new musical comedy star, but Lilo is no emigre Cinderella.

She's a particular darling of the Paris theatre, a popular veteran of the cabarets who slipped into the "Folies Bergeres" and then into operetta and musical comedy success.

She was "discovered" almost a year ago by producer Cy Feuer. She was co-starring then with the French Sinatra, Luis Mariano, at the big Chatelet Theatre, where her voice bounced off the back walls with every syllable as distinct as it was to the row "A" customers.

One night last summer, Feuer heard her slangy slightly - blue song, "Ca m'Fait Que qu' Chose," which translates approximately "It Does Something to Me."

Feuer raced backstage to ask Lilo, who had learned English during a 10-month engagement in London in 1951, about playing in a Broadway musical comedy. Somewhere along the line he murmured the magic words "Cole Porter."

"I knew this was what I had wanted," Lilo said. Four months later, she caught a plane for New York and, in an empty theatre, sang a few of her French songs for writer Burrows and producer Ernest Martin. Then she was bundled into a plane for Hollywood, where she did a repeat performance for Feuer and Porter.

"Cole," she remarked with awe, "caught my range and my voice perfectly just hearing me once. The first song he wrote after that was 'I Love Paris.'"

That's one of the hit songs in "Can-Can." She's not sure whether it or "C'est Magnifique" is her favorite song in the show. The latter is more the type she became famous for in Paris, a sly, sophisticated tuneful piece with a bit of broad comedy.

ELIZABETH the Queen

By Marion Crawford

XVII

I often recall a make-believe game that the Princesses, especially Princess Margaret, were fond of playing when they were children. We called it "If".

Princess Margaret would prance about the playroom chanting, "If I could be anything I liked, Crawfie, do you know what I'd be?"

"A good girl, I should think," I would reply. "Certainly a Princess should be good."

"But if I weren't a Princess, Crawfie, I should like to be . . ."

And she would search her lively imagination for a dozen fantastic professions, some of which she had read about in books and others that she had invented on the spot. Her images were always colorful and stimulating.

Princess Elizabeth sometimes entered the game, but she always tried to connect it with the real life outside, of which she could catch only glimpses. She was absorbed by healthy curiosity about the way other people lived, and tried to put herself in their places. Instead of playing a game, she exercised this faculty while we drove in the streets or in the country.

Among the little throng always to be seen waiting outside the Palace were several familiar faces. Many elderly women were among them.

"We know them, don't we, Crawfie?" Princess Elizabeth would say. "But still, I wonder who they are"

There was one old lady, dressed in black, with a lean, sad face, who was always waiting at Hyde Park Corner at four o'clock on Friday afternoons as we drove down from the Palace to the Royal Lodge, Windsor.

We always took the same route —up Constitution Hill, and round the traffic island into the Park. The Princesses became interested in her, speculating on whether she would be there or not.

She always was.

As our car came abreast of the gate where the traffic has to slow down in order to file through the arches into the Park, there she would be, watching.

Princess Elizabeth would be worried about her if we were ever delayed on our journey, or—as rarely happened—there was a change in our week-end routine.

"I hope she will not wait too long," the Princess would say. "She doesn't look very strong."

She was always interested in the "outside world" on which she considered me an authority—although to tell the truth I saw very little of it—and would ask me endless questions about it. I believe that until her marriage the Princess had no clear understanding of the way people lived outside palace walls.

It is one of the strengths of the British Constitution that the Queen sits upon the top rung of the ladder that others must climb with such endeavor, so that however high a man may mount, there is always someone above him—a man or woman who took that place, not after a lifetime of application, but by inheriting it as a natural birthright.

I would sometimes play the "If" game myself. What would Princess Elizabeth like to be and do, I often asked myself, "if" she were free to choose?

The course of her life was set. Certain things happened, always had happened, and always would continue to happen so far as she knew. A child does not ask what water tastes like, or puzzle over the way she breathes. These thing are taken for granted. So, then, was Princess Elizabeth's way of living.

But on her honeymoon, and certainly afterward, when she flew to visit Prince Philip in Malta, Princess Elizabeth saw and experienced for the first time the life of an ordinary girl not living in a palace.

She could never be quite free from all attention, of course, however thoughtful people are. And in Malta the citizens made a genuine effort not to cloud her visit with the kind of staring attention she gets nearly everywhere else.

But Princess Elizabeth could never dissolve into the background and enjoy herself as an unknown person can, although on certain rare occasion she has seen what life might be like if she had not been a Princess.

As I think over her personality, trying to settle on those points which seem to me on reflection most characteristic, I find one word continually in my mind: thoughtfulness.

Let us suppose that she had been plain Miss Elizabeth Windsor. What then? How would she have differed My? personal opinion is that she would be much the same.

After careful thought the only difference I think which would have been obvious in her would be a slightly less serious outlook on life.

Princess Elizabeth never had the gay, carefree character of Princess Margaret. The two girls of the same birth and upbringing differ in many ways. Their complexions are different, for example.

Princess Margaret has an excellent skin, but not of the same alabaster quality as Queen Elizabeths. In summer Princess Margaret gets quite sunburned.

Queen Elizabeth and her mother have skin of a similar type and they both have to guard not only against tanning but also against sunburn.

He's changing the nation's landscape

You may see the result of what he is doing in the city's changing skyline — or out where the corn grows tall . . . in the mushrooming suburbs — or in the new look of Main Street in a mellow old town.

Where many a vacant lot once stood, he helps fill it with a fine new school. Where you used to see a building that was an eyesore you may now see a new apartment house, store or post office that he played a role in providing.

Thanks in part to him, many houses rise here and there, or row on row, in community after community. New ribbons of asphalt tie town to town. Somewhere, a new bridge is built.

New industrial plants, too, are sometimes the by-products of his helping hand. Perhaps one of them has provided you with a job.

And do you see those great steel towers that parade across the rolling farmlands, bearing power-laden wires in their outstretched arms? They may be monuments to this same man.

Who is he?

Petes Yank Out A 12-9 Win Over Brampton Squad In Rugged Senior OLA Fray

BRAMPTON. — Paced by Ike Hildebrand who caged three last-period goals, the Peterborough Trailermen toppled Brampton Excelsiors 12-9 in a high-powered, senior lacrosse battle played before 1,000 fans in Brampton's Memorial Arena Saturday. Searching for their first victory of the current OLA season, the Excelsiors, a mixture of veterans and last year's Minto Cup juniors, kept pace with the Petes down to the final session when Ike drove in the game-winning hat-trick. Moon Wooton, Peterborough net-minder, and Brampton's Jimmy Dodds faced each other in a brilliant goal-tending exhibition. Both were called on time after time to block determined attacks by the goal-hungry forwards.

At the quarter-mark, the Petes trailed 3-2. A three-goal attack by Rusty Slater, Dootch Vitarelli and Jack Mason turned the tables through the second with the half-time score reading Peterborough 6, Brampton 5. At the three-quarter stretch the defending champions led 9-7.

ROUGH ENOUGH

Eighteen penalties were called, including majors to Brampton's Bob Sutherland and Nick Ferri, and Roger Smith and Grant Burns of Peterborough for a couple of mid-game brawls.

Aussies Score 289 In Innings

LONDON (Reuters)—Australia's touring cricket team scored 289 runs in its first innings against a Minor Counties combination Saturday, virtually insuring yet another quick victory.

At the close-of-play, the minor counties had replied with only 27 runs for six wickets.

In county cricket, favored Yorkshire ousted Lancashire for 173 runs. The neighboring county had answered with 64 for one wicket at the close. Len Hufton, England's probable captain in the first test international against Australia, was clean bowled for two runs.

But two other England batsmen made centuries Saturday. Denis Compton hit 143 for Middlesex against Sussex and Reg Simpson scored 100 for Nottinghamshire in a game against county champion Surrey.

Boy, 6 "Beats" U.S. Open Champ

NEW YORK (AP)—A six-year-old boy, two one-armed players and Gen. Omar Bradley were among the 9,972 players who beat U.S. Open champion Julius Boros in national golf day rounds Saturday.

A 79-year-old Baltimore veteran, a one-eyed enthusiast and Governor Arthur Langlie of Washington also earned "I Beat Boros" medals in the second annual event sponsored by Life magazine and the Professional Golfers Association.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Close to 125 lawn bowlers will be out to the greens, this evening to tee off in the first of the 1953 schedule games.

Some of the bowlers have had the odd game during the past week but most will come in cold.

It promises to be a good long season—according to the schedule book the men's games run right through until September 15, and the ladies up to Sept. 3.

Besides the schedule games, there are local and open tournaments, club singles, novice singles, sponsored by the Examiner, and many more competitions, and just at this time we would like to pass along a little advice to the new bowlers and some older ones, and we hope it will be received in the same spirit it is given:

READ THE BOOK

Read your schedule book, from the front to the back or from the back to the front or from the middle both ways. It makes no difference as long as you read it; get to know what is going on in the club and when.

And then we're going to pass on this old chestnut—"Be on time." One or two bowlers coming late can upset everything. And finally, learn the rules of the game and play the game accordingly. If the other fellow knows the rules and you don't, you are under a heavy handicap.

Hoping it's fine weather for this evening. That's all for now.

Gault Retains Title In Bantamweight Bout

SPARTANBURG, S. C. (CP)—Henry (Pappy) Gault of Spartanburg retained his North American bantamweight championship Saturday night with a 10-round technical knockout victory over Manny Castro of Mexico City. The bout had been scheduled for 12 rounds but Castro, 19, was groggy when the ninth round ended and was unable to answer the bell starting the 10th. There were no knockdowns.

Gault weighed 117¾ Castro 117½.

418 Canadians Beat Boros' 70

TORONTO (CP) — The United States Open Golf champion, Julius Boros, shot a 70 at the Oakmount Country Club at Pittsburgh Saturday. During the week-end 6,362 Canadian golfers tried to beat him; 418 did.

The 418 will be presented with bronze medals bearing the words "I beat the U.S. Open champion, Julius Boros, May 23, 1953."

The beat-Boros competition was known officially as the second annual national golf day tournament, sponsored jointly in Canada by the Royal Canadian Golf Association, The Canadian Professional Golfers' Association and the U.S. magazine, Life. Proceeds are shared by the Canadian Red Cross and the golf associations of Canada for the promotion of golf among juniors.

The divot-diggers improved on Boros' score of 70—aided by their club handicaps, except in the case of Walt Mcelroy, former Canadian amateur champion, who shot 69 in Vancouver without a handicap.

In Toronto, 123 of the 1,941 competitors beat Boros, as did 20 of the 223 in London, Ont., 34 of about 1,400 in Montreal, and 11 out of 370 in Ottawa, 12 out of 254 in Windsor, Ont., 95 out of 998 in Winnipeg and 87 out of 785 in Vancouver.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Cobourg's "gray fox of the gridiron" is on the prowl again. Mr. Fred Dufton, manager of the colorful Galloping Ghosts down along the lakefront, is seeking more good players for the autumn grind. And he doesn't care where he looks for 'em. In fact, he'd sooner look up this way than elsewhere because (a) Peterborough produces good footballers and (b) a local player leaving here not only helps Cobourg but weakens the Orfuns. Ghosts would prefer to beat Orfuns than any other club in the province. Just recently, the wily Fred phoned Jerry McGillis and invited him and brother Don— two valued members of the Orfuns— to drop down to Cobourg and discuss an offer to go with the Ghosts. But we understand they're not interested. However, Fred will keep trying.

Is there going to be no girls' softball here at all this season? So it would appear. Prexy Bill Flint could get nowhere at a meeting or in subsequent calls around town, and he turned the matter of formation of the loop to recreation commissioner Alex Sinclair. The latter hasn't had any luck so far, either. No sponsors, apparently. This is unfortunate for the lasses who wish to play and for the fans who like watching their games in the Bowl. It will be the first summer in more than 20 years that no girls' softball is played in the East City saucer, but this is a sure thing if interested parties don't get hopping right away. After all, 'tis close to the end of May.

But Not Always Thus

Interest in the lasses' summer sport didn't lag in other years, not since its revival back in '31 under president Russ Kitchen. The grounds over east were obtained for the girls by Bob Cotton, veteran alderman then, and many city and district teams were available at the start and for many years. Sixth Line, Keene, CGE, Westclox, Choate's, Marines, Brentons, Woollens, Quakers, Ashby's, Lock Co., Burtol's, Cobourg, Lindsay, etc. and etc., fielded teams regularly during the past two decades. Westclox won the PWSL title during Bill Bennett's long term as president, after Ev. Thomas. It's a shame to see damsels' sport fold up even for a year. Can't we get even four sponsors this summer here?

Fergus Thistles don't believe for a minute that Petes, Yorks and St. Kitts are the teams to beat for the OLA senior title this year, and they're saying so quite emphatically. Fresh from a victory last start over the surprised St. Catharines Athletics, the Thistles promise a thorny ride for the Trailermen here tonight. Petes can't afford to be tired this eve, either, after three hard games in four nights, or they could absorb their second straight loss at home. Fergus has such aces aboard as Harry Kazarian, Don Gear, Ron Landoni, Don Campbell, Marlowe Woods, Elmer Harris, Don McWhirter, Bill Allum, Bob Buchanan, J. J. Hill, Jim Halls, Frank Chambers, Stan Abbott, Russ Black and Ralph Speck among others. Thistles rarely are a soft touch.

Petes Had To Hustle

While Mimico were soundly trounced in St. Kitts on Saturday —and we're not sure yet how strong Hamilton is —there doesn't appear to be more than one or two weak sisters in the OLA senior setup at present. Brampton Excelsiors gave the Mann Cup champs a torrid tussle in Brampton night before last eve bowing 12-9 on three fine goals in the last quarter by classy Ike Hildebrand, who received a cut over the eye. A rather rough fray with two scraps and a lot of close ones. Curly Mason, Russ Slater and Lou Nickle each tallied twice for Bob Thorpe's team, singles going to Dootch Vitarelli, Grant Burns and Jerry Fitzgerald. Jack Bionda had four for Brampton and Cowboy Al Gurbutt three. This Bionda is a nice lacrosser but tends to hog the ball.

Oshawa cleaned up on the COSSA track and field meet in the Motor City on Saturday with 71 points. PCVS came second with 18, Outram being a senior winner in 880. Top two contestants in events at this meet participate in the Ontario federation of school athletic associations track and field meet at Lake Couchiching next Satuday. For Ontario high school honors. Besides the winners at the OCC meet in Toronto last Friday, some of the SPS boys did well. John Martyn won three seconds in intermediate, the 100, 200 and relay. John Gordon was first in the junior shot put. Pat Masterson was second in the senior high jump and third in the hop, step and jump. Terry Fitzpatrick was second in the intermediate broad jump and third in the 220. Jaycees here plan to stage their postponed high school meet on Coronation Day.

12 Records Set In Kingston

KINGSTON (CP) — Twelve records were established at the fourth annual Kingston and district track and field meet Saturday which attracted about 200 entries from nine eastern Ontario schools.

Kingston Collegiate and Vocational Institute won the grand aggregate trophy with a total of 93 points. Albert College of Belleville was runner-up with 78 points and Gananoque followed with 69 points.

Gananoque's junior boys with 37 points took home the junior section trophy. KCVI came through strongly in the intermediate class with 47 points. Brockville boys, with 18 points, took second. Albert College of Belleville collected 61 points to win the senior events.

In the junior group, KCVI girls gathered 27 points to win easily over Gananoque's five points. The Napanee girls, with a strong intermediate squad, took the honors in this class with 18 points followed by KCVI with 11.

KCVI boys set six of the 12 records. In the intermediate class Doug Munroe clipped nine-tenths of a second off the 200-yard record, setting a mark of 24.1 seconds. In the 440 he set a mark of 55.8 seconds.

Bud Ray of Belleville Collegiate set records in the junior 100 and 200 yards. He ran the 100 yards in 11.1 seconds while in the 220 he established a record of 25.4 seconds. Mike Gaetz of Albert College, Belleville added 4½ feet to the senior shot put to set a mark of 42 feet 8½ inches.

Experts Still Not Certain Of Gay Ghost's Greatness After Showing At Pimlico

Baltimore (AP)—The experts can go on arguing today whether Native Dancer is great, good or just the best of a poor crop, but there's no question the grey colt has excited the public more than any horse, probably since Man O'War.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's pride proved conclusively in Saturday's Preakness he has that indefinable quality of colors.

Rarely, if ever, has a race horse been applauded by the crowd walking to the post as he was at Pimlico by 30,756.

Never has a horse caused such a distortion of betting.

There was $696,639 bet on the seven horses and $546,663 of it was on Native Dancer. Moreover, while they put $85,705 on him to win and $79,382 for second, bettors poured in an amazing $281,576 on him for third.

This was outsmarting the racing laws of Maryland. The state guarantees 10 cents on the dollar, and the Dancer didn't figure to be much, if anything, over that to win. He wasn't, paying only $2.40 for first and 20 cents less in the next two spots. Pimlico had to fork over $46,012 of its own money to make the minimum payoff.

So great was the public faith in Native Dancer that the next lowest win odd was $11.20 for $1 on Royal Bay Gem. And this disparity despite the fact that Native Dancer had been beaten three weeks before in the Kentucky Derby by Dark Star, one of his competitors in the Preakness.

The public made Dark Star their third choice at $11.30 to $1 and he finished fifth.

Some of the experts still weren't fully satisfied at Native Dancer's greatness after Saturday's race. Their reluctance was due to his failure to win by any more than a long neck over Jamie K, the surprisingly strong finisher who had won but three of 19 previous races against mediocre competition.

These experts want to wait for the Belmont, final event of the triple crown, June 13 when Jamie K, and his jockey, Eddie Arcaro, will have another chance.

Plans Assault On 4-Min. Mile

AMES, Ia. (AP)—Wes Santee, the slender 21-year-old Kansas University junior, expects to run the long-talked-of four-minute mile before he is graduated next spring.

There is good reason for his confidence. Santee raced to a U. S. collegiate mark of 4:06.3 Saturday as Kansas won the big seven conference track title.

Discussing with reporters his chances of running a four-minute mile, Wes said:

"Of course conditions have to be just right, and I think I will get those conditions before I graduate next spring."

UEW Soccer Squad Trims Picton 10-0

Although short four regular players and playing just 10 men, Peterborough UEW were much too good for Picton in an Eastern Ontario Soccer League match on Saturday to win 10-0. They pressed all through the first half, and Hoyle scored twice for a 2-0 half-time count for Peterborough.

In the second half, Gremet at left half scored, and Hoyle made it 4-0. Holroyd added another from a post rebound. Ryan put a pass into the goal mouth from the wing and Strong smartly put the ball into the net for No. 6 with his nose. Holroyd got another and a Picton back helped a shot from Gremet into the net. Murray was next on a pass from Hoyle, and Croll finished the scoring with a nice one on a pass from Holroyd to wind it up 10-0 for UEW.

Brantford Builds Bigger Lead, Oshawa Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If their starting record is any criterion Brantford Red Sox will likely be a strong contender for top honors in the Senior Intercounty Baseball League. They currently lead the league.

The Red Sox enlarged that lead Saturday night with a 6-0 shutout of Waterloo Tigers.

In other league games London Majors defeated Guelph Maple Leafs 5-1; Kitchener Panthers edged Galt Terriers 2-1; Oshawa Merchants set back St. Thomas Elgins 4-1 in an afternoon game and 22-3 in a night game.

PITCHER'S WIN

The Oshawa afternoon victory was hard-earned by the pitching of Ted Stone who gave up only six hits and subdued Elgins for seven frames before tiring. It was Oshawa's third straight win and coupled with the night victory they moved into a sixth-place tie with Guelph.

In the night game the Merchants staged a wild 12-run scoring parade in the second inning which saw action from three St. Thomas hurlers. Joe Grasso pitched to seven batters, Amede Cecruydt took over and pitched to every man on the batting order once before giving way to Lefty Wilson. Every batter on the Oshawa team came to bat twice to stage the second-inning marathon.

Monday's games: Oshawa at Kitchener; Waterloo at St. Thomas; London at Guelph; Brantford at Galt.

GRAND RE-OPENING

Dodgers' Big Inning Beats Phillies 16-2: Yankees Win

By JACK HAND, Associated Press Sports Writer

Who said Philadelphia's a dead town on Sunday. Brooklyn Dodgers think it's gayer than Paris, louder than Coney Island and wilder than an office Christmas party. When you score 12 runs in an inning, before a man is out, as the Brooks did Sunday in the eighth at Connie Mack Stadium, no town is dull. The great inning gave the Dodgers a 16-2 victory but still left them in fourth place in the National League race.

Milwaukee split a doubleheader with Chicago Sunday, winning 5-4 and losing 5-2, to keep the half-game margin with which they took the top spot Saturday. St. Louis elbowed into second place on Gerry Staley's five-hit shutout of Cincinnati, 2-0, and New York Giants belted Pittsburgh 11-3.

Johnny Sain's batting and pitching for the Yankees' triumph over Boston left the world champs still 3½ games out front in the American League. Cleveland moved into second place on two wins over St. Louis, 5-1, and 9-8. Chicago held third beating Detroit 3-1. Washington topped Philadelphia 6-3.

12 RUNS NONE OUT

At Philadelphia, thirteen Dodgers walked or hit before an out was made in the eighth inning. Twelve runs turned a neat 4-2 game into a rout before five Phil pitchers managed to retire a batter. It took 42 minutes to play the half inning, 16 Dodgers going to bat.

Triples with the bases loaded by Pee Wee Reese and Carl Furillo did the most damage. The five Phil pitchers in one inning tied a major league record. The 12 runs fell short of the modern record of 15 set by the Dodgers against Cincinnati in the first inning of a May 21 game last year. The all-time record is 18 by Chicago in 1883.

Milwaukee started Johnny Antonelli against Chicago in the first game and relieved with him in the second, getting off with a split. The Braves scored five runs in the second inning of the opener on one hit, two walks, two errors and a fly ball to hand Warren Hacker his seventh loss. Vern Bickford won on relief.

SMOTHER BUCS

The Giants smothered Pittsburgh with the help of Bobby Thomson and Alvin Dark, who teamed to bat in a total of six runs. Thomson homered for the Giants and Carlos Bernier hit his first big league homer for the Pirates.

Al Rosen's three-run homer in the first game and Ray Boone's grand slam in the second game were the big blows in Cleveland's two victories. Early Wynn threw a four-hitter in the first to best Bobo Holloman for his fifth score. Dave Hoskins, second of four Tribe pitchers, took the second over Bob Cain.

Sam Mele's double and Jim Rivera's single knocked in two runs in the ninth for White Sox' victory over the Tigers.

Washington bunched all its six hits in the first two innings while Connie Marrero parcelled out nine Philadelphia hits along nine innings to cop his fourth.

ROE BEATS ROBERTS

In the National League Saturday, Brooklyn defeated Philadelphia 2-0, Preacher Roe topping Robin Roberts in a pitching duel. Ned Mathews' eighth homer and Lew Burdette's fine relief pitching in the last three innings helped Milwaukee to a 5-3 victory over Chicago. New York's six-game winning streak was stopped by Pittsburgh 8-4 and a four-game St. Louis winning streak was stopped 6-0 by last-place Cincinnati.

In the American League, New York beat Boston Red Sox 3-2 behind Vic Raschi's four-hit pitching. Al Rosen, Larry Doby and Joe Tipton homered in Cleveland's 5-1 win over St. Louis. Joe Dobson was the winner and Ned Garver the loser as Chicago defeated Detroit 4-2 on a three-run ninth-inning rally. Harry Byrd, the first of three pitchers, was the winner as Philadelphia won 8-6 from Washington.

Leafs Leading IL As Buffalo Drops 3 Straight

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Although they lost two out of three week-end games to Rochester, Toronto Maple Leafs today are out front in the International Baseball League as the erstwhile leaders, Buffalo Bisons, dropped three in a row. Montreal Royals moved into second place with two victories in three games and Buffalo fell to third.

Saturday Rochester Red Wings edged Toronto 3-2 and the two teams split a Sunday doubleheader, Rochester taking the first 5-4 and Toronto the second 3-0.

Buffalo was humbled 6-3 by Syracuse Chiefs Saturday and lost a Sunday twin-bill to Baltimore Orioles, 11-5 and 4-3.

Montreal defeated Springfield Cubs 5-4 Saturday, bowed to them 5-3 in the Sunday opener and took the second 7-5.

Ottawa Athletics took both ends of a doubleheader from Baltimore Saturday, 9-3 and 4-3 and did a repeat against Syracuse Sunday, 5-1 and 7-4.

In Toronto Sunday, Lou Sleater, Leaf southpaw, got off to a bad start in the first game, giving the Wings one run in the first, and three in the second. The Leafs tied it up with a four-run third-inning rally, but Lou Ortiz sent the winning run in with a single in the sixth.

Toronto spaced their three runs in the second game. Starter Denis Reeder took the loss and Don Johnson the win.

Ron Northey's grandslam homer in the fifth inning of the opener was enough to give Springfield their Sunday win over Montreal. They started strongly in the second game but two homers by Rocky Nelson, one in the first with one on and another in the seventh with two aboard, did the trick for Montreal.

Fine relief pitching proved the strong point as Ottawa took both their Sunday games. Ed Burtschy relieved Ed Hrabsczak with the score tied and the bases loaded in the seventh inning of the first to put out the fire and Bob Trice relieved Al Romberger in the fourth of the nightcap, again with the score tied, and added a win to his record.

Taylor's Filly Surprises In Toronto Loss

By JOHN PATERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—What happened to Canadiana?

E. P. Taylor's flashy filly, a 1-10 favorite, stunned 16,000 fans at Woodbine Park Saturday by finishing fourth to J. R. McIntyre's long shot, Blue Scooter, in the second of two divisions of the $2,500 Plate Trials at six furlongs

Canadiana's stable-mate, Lively Action—half-brother to Epigram, 1952 winner of the Queen's Plate—scored an upset victory in the first division of the trials, intended as a prep for the 94th running of the plate at 1¼ miles Coronation Day, June 2.

Blue Scooter paid $23.90, $7.50 and $5.80. Lively Action paid $25.60, $10.30 and $6.60.

Betters on the place and show winners in both divisions were rewarded. In the first division, Big Heap paid $29.50 and $11.80 and Briarcrest paid $12.40. Lowmond, in place position in the second division, paid $9.60 and $6.00 and Winter Lady showed for $9.00.

Canadiana's defeat brought hope to a number of other owners and trainers, awed previously by the stature of the filly, Canada's 1952 "horse of the year," and winner of nine races including a couple of starts in the United States. She was 8-5 favorite in the winter books for the plate.

Her jockey, Jose Vina, sad-faced little Cuban, still was disconsolate when interviewed at the track Sunday.

"I didn't sleep last night. I felt terrible. She's a great race mare and she'll prove her class before long. She just didn't run her race Saturday and that's all."

Trainer Gordon (Pete) McCann said: "I'm pretty sure the plate will be a different story."

Blue Scooter covered the course in 1:13. Lively Action's time was 1:13 2-5.

Call Off Strike

DETROIT (AP) — International headquarters of the United Auto Workers (CIO) Sunday night ordered 8,000 striking employees of the Budd Company to return to their jobs and the strike was called off. The strike stemmed from a jurisdictional dispute within the Budd local of the UAW and made idle 27,000 Chrysler Corp. employees since Wednesday. Budd makes bodies for three of Chrysler's four divisions.

Security Council Bid

WELLINGTON (AP)—New Zealand will be a candidate for a seat on the United Nations security council at elections to be held at the end of this year. Announcing this today acting Prime Minister Keith Holyoake said this decision was made as a result of the recent visit by Prime Minister Sidney Holland to Washington and New York.

Patrols Guard Abbey

LONDON (Reuters)—Special patrols are guarding Westminster Abbey day and night against the danger of fire. The patrols in the abbey, where expensive pre-Coronation preparations have been going on for weeks, will continue until after June 2.

Aids Newcomers

WINNIPEG (CP)—An organization to aid newly-arrived immigrants was formed here by D. St. John Magnus, who arrived from England last July with his wife and two children. Magnus said the aim is not to replace existing societies but to see that the newcomer gets help during his first few weeks.

Windsor Schools Win Track Meet

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Windsor High schools swept the 31st annual WOSSA track and field championships at J. W. Little Memorial Stadium Saturday.

The Border City contingent captured all four team titles and each of the four individual titles.

Nine meet records were broken and one was tied. All but one were turned in by Windsor schools.

London Central's time of 1:33.0 in the senior 880 relay shattered the existing meet mark and also lowered the Canadian high school mark by nine tenths of a second.

FIVE TRACK RECORDS FALL

TORONTO (CP)—Five Canadian track records were broken Saturday at the Canadian open relay championships held at Varsity Stadium here. Only 100 fans watched the 200 athletes participate in the 20 events. Competitors were mainly from Toronto and district.

A Toronto track and field foursome broke the mark for the four-mile-open relay. They knocked 24.8 seconds off the old mark of 19:14 set by the University of British Columbia team in 1949.

Hamilton Delta Collegiate lowered the Canadian high school sprint relay record by 9-10 second by pounding off the half-mile course in 1:33.9. A Toronto secondary schools track club took the 440-yard juvenile relay in 45.5 seconds. The old record was 46.6 seconds.

Hamilton Central Collegiate broke the 880-yard high school spring relay record with a time of 1:34.1, 7-10 seconds better than the old mark. Another Toronto secondary schools quartet cracked the juvenile 880-yard invitation club relay with a time of 1:38.9 against the old mark of 1:36.6.

HARRIST SOLD TO TIGERS

DETROIT (AP)—Chicago White Sox Saturday sold Earl Harrist, veteran 32-year-old righthander, to the pitching-weak Detroit Tigers for the $10,000 waiver price. The Sox then re-instated Bob Keegan, another righthander who had been on the disabled list since April 14 with a sore arm and knee.

Keegan, 30, pitched for Syracuse of the International League last season, compiling a 20-11 record.

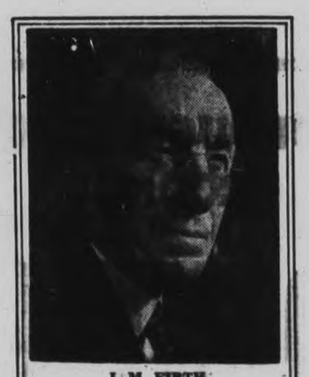
Derby Favorite Goes Lame Again

LONDON (AP)—Nearula, 7 to 2 favorite for the Epsom Derby, was reported today to have gone lame for the second time in less than a week.

The colt's trainer, Capt. Charles Elsey, said the Two thousand Guineas winner had suffered a recurrence of trouble in one of his fore-feet "but he has certainly not been scratched from the Derby."

The big race is June 6, however, and with only 12 days to get Nearula in shape Elsey was plainly downcast.



Aureole, which will run under the Queen's colors, was the 4-to-1 second choice at a callover last week-end.

Hogan Wins Colonial With Three-Under Par

FORTH WORTH, Tex. He had a 72-hole total of 282. Doug Ford of Harrison, N.Y., and Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., tied for second with 287.

"We send out a short burst of radar detector waves, they find the plane and bounce back on our radar screen. We've got him spotted and can guide him down to the runway."

The Ground Control Approach (G.C.A.) Technician grins.

"Radar waves travel at the speed of light so if the 'echo' took two seconds to reach our screen, we'd know the pilot was at the impossible distance of 186,000 miles from base. Queen As Young Princess Early Caught On To Her Royal Prerogatives

Just eight days from now Queen Elizabeth II will be crowned and consecrated Queen. To give the story of her personality and upbringing, James F. King of the AP's London staff has written a series of five stories carrying Elizabeth from cradle to throne. This is the first of the series.

By JAMES F. KING

LONDON (AP) — Even as a princess at the toddling age, Elizabeth II caught on to her royal prerogatives.

One of her early discoveries on a visit to Buckingham Palace was that the sentry presented arms every time she passed. This was amusing. So, slipping away from her nurse, she paraded back and forth smiling happily as the poor sentry clicked his heels to attention each time.

Elizabeth's early consciousness of her position may have been due to her grandfather, King George V.

Once he held her up on the palace balcony to show her off to a crowd below and whispered, "They're cheering for you, you know."

The little girl beamed with delight and a few days later was caught testing her royal authority by ordering a playmate to bow low in homage.

From these and other stories, Elizabeth has been called "the girl born to be queen."

Yet the throne seemed far removed for the first child of the popular young Duke and Duchess of York when she was born early in the morning of April 21, 1926 in the home of her maternal grandfather, the Earl of Strathmore in London.

Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor was a royal princess in her own right, but third in line to the throne —behind her uncle David and her own father who told friends he himself was "not palace minded."

Before she was 10, King George died. Uncle David, the dashing Prince of Wales, became Edward VIII, and abdicated after 324 days. Her father became King George VI, and by a sharp twist in fate she had come into the direct line of succession.

George VI died Feb. 6, 1952 at the age of 56 and the princess became Queen. It was less than 26 years since her birth—when, according to ancient custom, since discarded as archaic, the then home secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, was on hand to verify the birth of the royal princess. The report is that the tiny princess showed her independence at once by yawning in the face of the home secretary.

She won the hearts of Britons at once. The birth brought a little brightness into the drab lives of a people torn by the impending general strike of 1926 and the miseries of mass unemployment. For the moment all Britons could unite at least in affection for the Royal Family.

Elizabeth came under the official royal inspection of her grandmother, Queen Mary, immediately.

The matriarch bent over the cot of her first granddaughter and sighed, "I wish you were more like your mother."

To this day, Elizabeth is commonly known as "her father's daughter." She holds a remarkable likeness to the late George VI, the man who never expected or wanted to be king but won affection by application to duty as "the people's king," especially during the anxious days of the Second World War.

The rearing of children in the Royal Family, though modified down through the years, had long followed the general Victorian pattern that strength of character was developed by severity and even repression.

But the shy Duke of York preferred the life of a country gentleman to the limelight and was determined to shield his young daughter from the overpowering shadow of the crown as much as possible. His wife, a Scottish commoner named Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, dreaded the bleak rigidity of royalty's life, too.

So there was nothing austere or primitive about the princess' early upbringing.

"In the days of my childhood," she remarked years later, "the sun seemed always to be shining."

She invented a nickname for herself as soon as she could talk. Elizabeth was too much of a tongue-twister. The best she could do was "Lilibet"—and "Lilibet" she remains even today in the Royal Family circle.

Elizabeth was only four when sister Margaret was born. She showed no jealous resentment against the newcomer to the nursery. Instead Lilibet showed a maternal instict and wanted to take complete charge of the new baby.

Over the years an unusually close bond of companionship, even for sisters, has grown. Elizabeth always has been the more serious and determined, Margaret the gayer and more mischievous.

They had the usual sisterly scraps. Lilibet, when provoked, flashed a fiery temper.

Their early years were as nearly normal as was possible for two daughters of a royal duke. They got as dirty making mud pies in the garden as any youngsters. They spent hours dressing dolls and playing house, and ran wildly about at hopscotch and hide-and-seek games.

They had many pets. Elizabeth loved animals, especially horses. She learned to ride at the age of three and was given her own shetland pony on her fourth birthday.

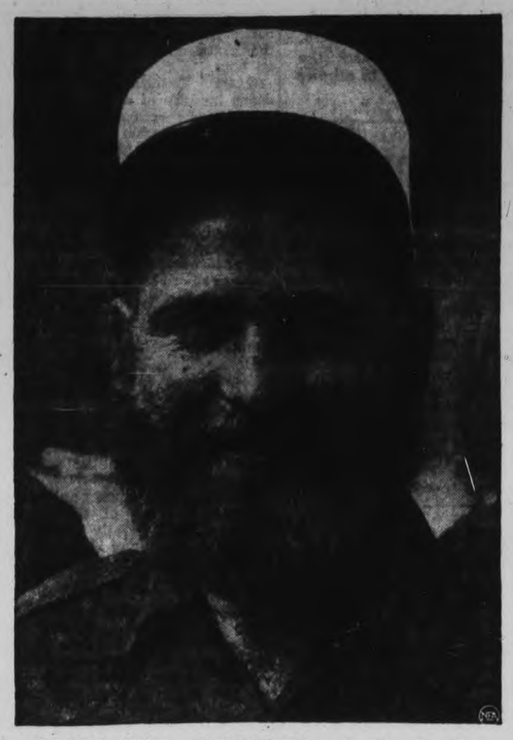
King George V in his declining years looked forward eagerly to the Buckingham Palace visits of his lively granddaughter, who liked to tease him. She shouted with laughter when he pretended to be angry as she ruffled his hair or stole food from his plate for her Welsh corgi dogs.

She would sit wide-eyed on his knee while the King spun yarns about the far-away places he had visited and the strange customs he had seen. This was the introductory course in her education.



Like any healthy youngsters, the sisters enjoyed a good pillow fight. The trouble was that their regal grandmother caught them roughhousing.

So Queen Mary decided it was time to take Lilibet under her wing. Though at the time the mantle of the monarchy seemed far removed from the little girl, the dignified old lady wanted to make sure that her granddaughter learned the stern code of duty which members of royalty are expected to maintain.

It was the beginning of an apprenticeship for the reigning Queen. Queen Mary, who held strong views on the bringing up of young princesses, was to have a tremendous influence on Elizabeth through the years.

HEADED OUT ON PATROL—French Legionnaires march out of the gates of Le Kef past the great wall that protects the Tunisian fort. Sniper killed Legionnaire on patrol recently.

French Foreign Legion Ever Ready To Fight

By FRED SPARKS

LE KEF, Tunisia (NEA)—I am visiting an outpost of the Foreign Legion in North Africa, where Arab nationalists have been shooting and stabbing French citizens, tossing bombs and generally acting unfriendly.

The Legion battalion here, housed in an ancient hill fort overlooking Le Kef's minarets, watches for any Arab trouble makers.

These mercenary soldiers would love to find some. They signed five-year contracts which specify fighting, not quartermaster jobs or free college education.

NOT LIKE MOVIES

Water polo, in a California-style swimming pool here, is one pastime that makes temperate Le Kef unlike a movie version of a starving Legion post.

A trooper at Le Kef must mind his deep knee bends or soon he'll look like he swallowed a beach ball. The cook used to chef in a snooty Budapest restaurant and the baker created strawberry tarts, crowned with whipped cream, for Parisian gourmets. There's table wine for all ranks, including visiting newspapermen.

The other night a young soldier was shot in the head from behind a wall while on armed patrol in town. The sniper hasn't been scratched to date, despite a sniffling bloodhound survey.

Legionnaires figure the isolated killing was masterminded by a terror group among Arabs seeking independence as part of the current nerve war. More snipers are expected.

And faster than you can say "revolution," nationalism in North Africa could shift from the odd stab or shot to guerrilla warfare like Malaya, where motorists spend $300 to armor plate their cars.

In case of any real rough stuff Fort Le Kef would protect French farmers and muscle open the road to Algiers and Bizerte.

Already in parts of Tunisia French cornfields have been fired, vines unrooted, and barns destroyed although physical assaults have been against natives co-operating with the French.

Nearby farmers pack their own artillery and are fixed to radio Le Kef in case of raids.

Legionnaires would race in with professional perfection, having been hired and trained primarily to slap down mischief makers in French colonies. All served in Indo-China and other wars under various flags, including German, Italian, Spanish, Polish, Hungarian, Yugoslavian, and Canadian.

The French Foreign Legion is still the same old goulash of nationalities, although one thing is certain: It is the most anti-communist army in these parts.

Most new Legionnaires fled Iron Curtain countries. They share the views of a Romanian corporal who told me: "I pray to return to my homeland as an Allied soldier to kick out the Reds—and pay off a personal debt to a Communist leader."

NOTHING PERSONAL

A civilian doesn't ask too many personal questions around Le Kef, unless he wants to get his upper lip pulled over his chin, but I understand many joined for neither political nor economic reasons.

This could mean to forget the face of a girl in Brussels or a police blotter in Copenhagen. They're as safe from yesterday in the Legion as if they were on Venus, with fresh new names and nationalities.

The film fancy about Legion romance is flatly fake. Garrison duty at Le Kef is blah and the Arab girls I saw around would hardly excite a man stuck on a sand dune since the Coolidge Administration.

With one exception: I motored past an Arab girl of regal beauty mounted on a camel.

Her transport was well groomed and several retainers walked alongside, indicating she was the daughter of Sheik Somebody or other. A Legionnaire stopped his jeep and stared at her. She stared back.

Rainfall Brings Radioactive Substances Born In Sky

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP)—All rain is radioactive, pelting you and the earth with H-bomb atoms.

These atoms are tritium, the triple-weight hydrogen fuel for H-bombs.

The tritium that falls in rain is born high in the sky in smashing collisions as cosmic rays darting in from space strike atoms of the earth's atmosphere. The tritium atoms then combine with oxygen, just as ordinary hydrogen does, to form water which falls as rain.

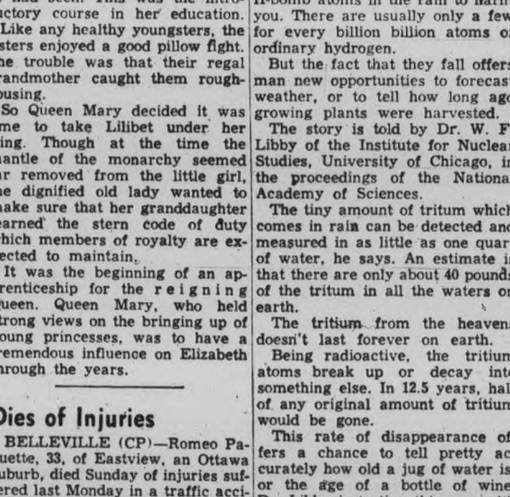
There are not enough of these H-bomb atoms in the rain to harm you. There are usually only a few for every billion billion atoms of ordinary hydrogen.

But the fact that they fall offers man new opportunities to forecast weather, or to tell how long ago growing plants were harvested.

The story is told by Dr. W. F. Libby of the Institute for Nuclear Studies, University of Chicago, in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The tiny amount of tritum which comes in rain can be detected and measured in as little as one quart of water, he says. An estimate is that there are only about 40 pounds of the tritum in all the waters on earth.

The tritium from the heavens doesn't last forever on earth.



Being radioactive, the tritium atoms break up or decay into something else. In 12.5 years, half of any original amount of tritium would be gone.

This rate of disappearance offers a chance to tell pretty accurately how old a jug of water is, or the age of a bottle of wine. Dr. Libby is testing this now with both water and wine. Wine would get tritium from grapes which grew or rainwater, or from any water used in making the wine.

Another potential use of the tritium clock would be to tell how many years ago corn, wheat or other crops had been harvested. Learning how much tritium the average plant would absorb in its lifetime, and how much of it had since disappeared, the date of harvest could be placed.

Checking the tritium in wells could show whether the well water comes from sources depending on rainfall, and hence whether the well would reflect seasonal changes in rainfall.

Tritium measurements in the air might show whether an air mass has picked up moisture from the sea, where tritium content would be low, or from rivers and lakes of the continent, fed by rain. Tritium measurements might also show whether there is vertical mixing of the atmosphere. More tritium is produced at a height of nine miles than at six or seven miles.

UN Employees Must Pay U.S. Income Tax

WASHINGTON (AP)—Several hundred foreign employees of UN who are permanent residents of the U.S. will have to pay U.S. income taxes under a ruling by Attorney-General Herbert Brownwell.

Officials reporting this said the ruling—based on the McCarran-Walter immigration bill which became effective last December—may, of course, be contested in court.

Heretofore, under laws governing relations between the US and the UN, aliens paid by UN were exempted from US income taxes and this exemption was interpreted to cover aliens permanently residing in the U.S.

ENDS EXEMPTION

The effect of the new ruling is to end the exemption as far as permanent alien residents who are employed by UN is concerned. The ruling does not affect the much larger group of foreigners working for UN who are in the U.S. on a temporary basis.

Officials understand that the same ruling being applied to the special group of UN employees also applies to all employees of foreign embassies who are living in the U.S. on permanent residence arrangements. A protest on behalf of the entire diplomatic corps is understood to have been made to the State Department some time ago.

Officials here said UN employees who are affected by the ruling will not suffer personally because their tax payments will be made by UN in the same way that it now reimburses American citizens for their U.S. tax payments.

"Influence Man" Waits Sentence For Contempt

WASHINGTON (AP)—The career of Henry W. Grunewald, Washington influence man with connections in high places, is about to be smacked by a judge's gavel.

Henry "the Dutchman" will be sentenced Thursday for contempt of Congress.

Grunewald is the "mystery man" whose shadowy operations in the United States capital during nearly a quarter-century ran his income up to six figures. As the raspy-voiced man-about-town gave his story to skeptical investigators, it was one involving such things as:

"Amazing winnings on the horses —more than $361,000 in six years— rather than fat fees for fixing tax cases. Yet Grunewald "couldn't remember the name of one nag he bet on."

Fees of $4,000 and $7,500 Grunewald said were merely for introducing people to each other. He told of gifts, favors and loans to government officials. He says he didn't ask favors in return.

$4,000 IN TIES

Furthermore, Grunewald says he gave away about $4,000 worth of Christmas ties at $7.50 apiece to prominent persons. Word has been getting around that some members of Congress and various big business men are shivering at the thought the list of recipients might be made public.

Months ago Grunewald appeared before a House of Representatives ways and means sub-committee investigating past scandals in the internal revenue bureau. He refused to tell them anything more than his age—60. He was indicted on 31 counts of contempt and pleaded guilty to one. The punishment could be as much as a year in jail and a $1,000 fine. Later he agreed to talk.

ENTERTAINMENT

Grunewald for a time had a home in Florida where he entertained persons such as George J. Schoeneman, then commissioner of internal revenue, and Charles Oliphant, at the time chief counsel of the internal revenue bureau.

For a year or more, Daniel A. Bolich lived in Grunewald's downtown hotel suite while serving as assistant internal revenue commissioner.

All three men resigned after Congress began uncovering various tax scandals. Bolich subsequently was indicted on tax evasion charges.

Grunewald, who said he never cheated the government out of a dime on income taxes, said he got a $25,000 fee in 1949 from New York lawyer Walter Duke.

It was brought out that internal revenue bureau records show Grunewald arranged for Duke to see Oliphant and that Duke's client, the Consolidated Electric and Gas. Co. of New York got a $500,000 tax refund speeded up.

Royal Coaches Not Noted For Comfort

Vehicular transportation for Britain's monarchs has come a long way since the first Queen Elizabeth jolted over London's ruts in a springless coach some 400 years ago, but it is going to slip backward nearly 200 years at the coronation of Elizabeth II.

In the Coronation parade, the Queen will ride in the royal coach of state, an ornate, gilded, four-ton vehicle pulled by eight grey horses, complete with outriders. The coach was built for George III in 1761 and first used by him in 1762.

At that time it was the latest thing in luxurious personal transportation, although its "springs" were (and still are) long leather straps that did little to level chuck holes and bumps, even at the maximum speed of three miles an hour.

Queen Victoria disliked the coach because of a "disagreeable oscillation" induced by the leather suspension system, an oscillation said to give passengers the impression they are crossing the English Channel on a stormy day.

The first Queen Elizabeth, a capable horsewoman, disliked her coach, too, but she accepted the discomfort and set the fashion for her successors on the theory that it was more becoming for feminine royalty to "relax" in an elaborate vehicle than to jog about on horseback.

Horse-drawn coaches provided transportation for British monarchs until well into the automotive age. Some members of the royal family prided themselves, as did other gentlemen of their time, in their ability to drive four horses at once.

Today, except when pageantry demands the use of the royal coach, British royalty rides in automobiles—usually large and comfortable Daimler limousines.

THE SCALDED CAT

Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, maintain the limousine tradition but they have expanded on it. The Queen owns a light Daimler, given to her on her 21st birthday when she was still heir presumptive. She learned to drive during the war and once startled palace guards by arriving at the wheel of an army car. She is reported to do little or no driving now.

The Duke, however, not only drives his own car, but has earned his wings as an airplane pilot. In the automotive field his pride is a special Rolls sport car called "The Scalded Cat," with a rated top speed of 130 miles an hour. He bought "The Scalded Cat" for $17,900 in 1950.

Denies Disappearance

HEIDELBERG, Germany (Reuters)—The United States Army in Europe knows nothing about the alleged disappearance of three big Patton tanks during manoeuvres near the Czechoslovak border, a spokesman said Sunday. But the army is investigating the reports, he added. A New York newspaper said Saturday the 48-ton tanks have been missing for two days.

F. H. Patterson New President Optimist Club

The Optimist Club inaugurated its new executive officers for the 1953-54 season, which begins July 1, at a dinner at Club Aragon on Saturday night. The installation ceremony was performed by District 15 Governor W. T. "Army" Armstrong, of St. Catharines, who first gave a short address on the "Cost of Living." Mr. Armstrong's theme was not financial, but rather he based the "cost of living" on the personal sacrifice and the satisfaction to be gained by service, and by lending a helping hand to those who need help. He said he would like to see this "cost of living" go up instead of come down, as he believed that the small sacrifices we make by helping others is wonderfully rewarded by the self-satisfaction gained.

The following new officers were installed by the governor: Frank H. Patterson, president; Clare Galvin, secretary; George Sorenson, treasurer. Other elected officers who were unable to attend are Donald Irving, Douglas Blue, Edward Faux and Dr. Allan McDougall.

Members and guests present included Governor Armstrong, Lt. Gov. and Mrs. John Hamilton, of Newmarket; Mr. and Mrs. Mac Bell, of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Galvin, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hemming, Mr. Geo. Sorenson, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Royds, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. John Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Hanbidge.

Pair Of British Diplomats Disappeared Two Years Ago

LONDON (AP)—On the night of May 25, 1951, two men sauntered aboard the excursion steamer "Falaise" at Southampton. The next morning they stepped ashore at St. Malo, France, got into a taxi and drove 60 miles to the railway station at Rennes. They stepped out of the taxi—into oblivion so far as the Western world is concerned.

The two men were British diplomats Guy Burgess, 40, and Donald MacLean, 38. Now, two years later, they are still being sought by Western Europe's best cloak-and-dagger talent as the central figures in one of the world's most spectacular vanishing acts.

Authoritative sources refuse to admit that Burgess and MacLean have slipped behind the Iron Curtain. But the trail is cooling fast and they admit it. One official source said: "Of course, any clue that turns up will be vigorously investigated, but the trail is pretty cold and it's getting colder."

HARD TO BELIEVE

On the other hand, Britons find it hard to believe that two diplomats could drop out of sight so completely despite hot pursuit by police and undercover agents from every country in Western Europe. At one time, Burgess and MacLean were being hunted by 15,000 intelligence men and police.

The alternative, it is widely believed, is that Burgess and MacLean went behind the Iron Curtain. But neither the Soviet Union nor any of her satellites has ever admitted this.

Burgess and MacLean were foreign office experts on United States affairs and MacLean at one time sat on the American-Canadian-British wartime committee which handled political aspects of the atom bomb.

MI.5, Britain's most secret military intelligence outfit, spread its net wide throughout Western Europe in an effort to locate the two men. The Surete—France's Scotland Yard—probed even the faintest clues: nothing.

Many speculations have been advanced as to their fate—the two men went to North Africa and joined the French Foreign Legion; they entered a monastery.

SENT TELEGRAMS

Foreign office officials said the men sent telegrams to relatives shortly after their disappearance. Two from Paris were attributed to MacLean. One was addressed to his American wife, the former Melinda Marling of Chicago, saying: "Had to leave unexpectedly. Sorry, darling. I love you. Please do not stop loving me. Donald." The other, to his mother, Lady MacLean, read: "I am quite all right. Do not worry. Love to all." It was unsigned.

One attributed to Burgess was from Rome to his mother, Mrs. J. R. Basscti. It said: "Terribly sorry for my silence. Am embarking on long Mediterranean holiday. Do forgive, Guy."

British officials breath easier as time passes. Although the two men were experts on foreign policies when they vanished, events are rapidly cutting their value to a foreign power by outdating their knowledge. No documents were missing when Burgess and MacLean disappeared.

See Ike Against Gold Price Hike

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representative Clair Engle (Dem. Calif.) said today the Eisenhower administration probably will contiue to oppose an increase in the price of gold, now pegged at $35 an ounce.

Engle has proposed legislation to provide for a free market for domestic newly-mined gold. He contends the gold mining industry will go out of business under high production costs and the present price of gold.

He discussed the problem of the gold miner with W. Randolph Burgess, former bank official who is special adviser to Treasury Secretary George Humphrey on monetary matters.

Engle said Burgess believes that a free market for gold higher than the price paid by the government would tend to undermine public confidence in the stability of the dollar.

"It was very apparent," Engle said in a statement, "that the treasury department and the new administration, if it follows Mr. Burgess' advice, will oppose the bill for a free market for domestic newly-mined gold, just as the tresury department did over the last several years."

WINS HUMOR MEDAL.—The Leacock medal for humor for 1952 has been awarded to Lawrence Earl, of London, former Canadian newspaper man. The award was for his book, "The Battle of Baltinglass," a humorous report on the fantastic battle the village of Baltinglass in Eire put up to see justice done in its sub-post office. Born in Saint John, N.B., he attended Dalhousie University in Halifax and went to Britain as a war correspondent for the Montreal Standard in the Second World War. His first book, "Yangtse Incident," was a best-seller in the United Kingdom and Canada. He is married to Jane Armstrong, also a feature writer.

50 Vets Busy Wiping Out Hog Cholera

More than 50 veterinarians of the Federal Department of Agriculture have been concentrated in the area of West Central Ontario in quarantine action against the outbreak of hog cholera.

Up to the week end nearly 600 hogs had died or been destroyed. However, Simcoe county is furthest east where the disease has been reported.

Careful and gradual investigation of more than 1,000 lots of hogs from the sales barn, where the original infected lot was purchased, has confirmed infected swine on 13 premises in eight counties. They are in the area of Perth, Wellington, Huron, Waterloo, Halton, Lincoln, Wentworth.

Some of the sales barns in the area under quarantine may become involved, but so far the health of animals division veterinarians are checking every one of the hogs that passed through the sales barn where the animals diagnosed with hog cholera were sold. This means they will have to examine more than 6,350 hogs from that barn alone.

Rejected By Royal Family Buckingham Palace First Occupied By Victoria

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Conceived in the stubborn whim of George IV, sprawling grey-and-yellow Buckingham Palace has survived public and kingly censure to become synonymous with the British sovereign.

As the No. 1 royal residence this 40-acre, town-house-turned-palace in the heart of London will stand out with venerable Westminster Abbey in the Queen's crowning June 2.

As palaces go, the 690-room structure is a rank newcomer. For tradition, it must make do with silk worms and money squabbles while the abbey boasts ecclesiastic and royal roots so bedded in Britain's past that fable cloaks their origin.

Nevertheless, the palace's short and often humdrum history can't obscure its position since 1837 in the day-to-day life of Britain's royalty.

COSTLY PROJECT

George IV started to rebuild red-bricked Buckingham House in 1825 because he wanted a palace the envy of Europe. What he got, most agree, was a town house and a lot of trouble.

"I am too old to build a palace," he conceded at the outset, but pressed on through costs mounting eventually close to £1,000,000, a House of Commons investigation and interminable delays. He had insisted on the site, acquired for £21,000 in 1762 by his father, for nostalgic family reasons, though he was the only one of George III's nine children not born there. He died before he could occupy the palace.

Brother William IV spurned the draughty place and tried unsuccessfully to give it to Parliament as a new home.

In 1837, young Queen Victoria became the first resident a month after her accession. With a reluctance, possibly inspired by the emotional tug of leaving her birthplace, she quit Kensington Gardens Palace for a 63-year Buckingham Palace stay.

Since then, the palace has been the sovereign's London home, continually revamped and reformed, resurfaced, added to and sometimes openly disliked.

Its clocks figuratively stopped on the death of the prince consort in 1861. The gloom symbolizing the Victorian period to many descended on what had been the gayest residence in Britain. Pleasure-loving Edward VII termed it "the sepulchre" as Prince of Wales and, on his accession, swept away the past. George V dreamed of selling it, although he did more to modernize it, including addition of central heating, than any other sovereign.

MASSIVE STRUCTURE

Despite changes, it's much the same now as when finished by architect John Nash, whose regency-period work lives on in Regent's Park and Regent Street. Round the bones of Buckingham House he built a massive central block with wings ending in pavilions. These extremities gave way to the second and third sides of the palace court. Queen Victoria completed the square with the fourth side, to gain extra room "for a little family (nine children) fast growing up."

The addition, resurfaced in 1913 in grey Portland stone, is the guard-dotted east side, best known of all the palace features, facing down the Mall to Admiralty Arch on Trafalgar Square and looking out on St. James's and Green Parks.

What tradition the rambling edifice can claim includes a tenuous link with the abbey, whose pre-reformation Benedictine order of monks owned the land. Thrifty James I unsuccessfully tried to grow his own silk on the four acres remaining in royal hands by 1609. His mulberry trees lived but the silk worms died. Eventually the land became privately owned, supported various houses and then was bought by George III.

QUEEN'S HEADQUARTERS

In the Coronation scheme, the palace is far more than a mere town house for Queen Elizabeth. It is the true heart of the elaborate planning and correlation that the conscientious, meticulous Queen has made her own.

The first of millions of public eyes will seek out her slight form Coronation Day from stands a stone's throw down the Mall, before she has passed the freshly-painted palace fence en route to the most important function of her life.

Her arduous day will not end when she passes the 100-year old stone gates that afternoon. Ahead will be a 400-seat dinner, a palace jammed with the most notable guests and a balcony appearance for a fly-past staged by 24 Royal Canadian Air Force Sabre jets and accompanying Royal Air Force planes.

PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER

VOL. CVI. No. 121 MONDAY, MAY 25, 1953

Main Street Topics

BEQUESTS

It is understood that two bequests totalling $50,000 have been left to Trinity United Church. The bequests are the residue of the estates of the late Mrs. Susan Margaret Porter and the late Miss Margaret Hamilton.

BIRD NOTES

Night hawks are working in their own way on the sound barrier these evenings, and the avian jets, the swallows, are doing everything but tail dives any time of the day. High winds dumped unfledged robins from their nest with usual cries of parental anxiety at a prowling enemy cat. Meanwhile, little red polls are examining the neighborhood trees for accommodating forks in the branches.

MILLIONS OF SEEDS

The thousands of dandelions that last week gilded the expansive green lot at the rear of the Civic Arena, Park St., have cast their bloom. The flowers have served their brief purpose, and today their winged seeds are about ready to blow,—millions of them. Whatever sentiment turns to the dandelion in its blossom stage, the fact remains that it is a common weed, and at present becoming commoner.

Radio Employees Ask For Conciliation

Deadlocked in a contract dispute after two meetings with the company, CHEX employees in the bargaining unit are today applying to the Canada Labor Relations Board for conciliation.

The application is being made by Adrien Gagnien, representative of the National Association of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians (CIO-CCL).

The Peterborough bargaining unit includes 14 altogether—announcers, technicians, a continuity writer and librarian. They were certified in March, the first group of private radio station employees in Canada to reach that status.

Two other radio stations — CKWS in Kingston and CKVL in Verdun, PQ—are also certified. Kingston is also applying for conciliation.

CEDAR LAKES PARK OPENING took place Saturday afternoon. One of the cleared picnic beauty spots overlooking Big Cedar Lake, TOP, is representative of many of the scenic sites viewed by more than 150 interested people, CENTRE, following speech making. Official opening act, LOWER, was performed by the Hon. Harold Scott, centre, who cut a roadway ribbon. He is flanked by park association president Norman Gainer, left, and Mrs. Fred Marshall whose late husband's foresight started the project four years ago.

Two Cars Stolen During Weekend

City police are keeping a lookout for two cars which were reported stolen Sunday.

A dark blue 1952 Pontiac sedan belonging to Murray Mullen, 95 Aylmer St., was stolen from the rear of his home some time between 12.30 a.m. and 12.30 p.m. Sunday. Mr. Mullen reported that the car was locked and he had the keys when it disappeared. Licence number of the car is 4424R.

J. E. Drumm, 290 Westcott St., reported that his 1940 Chevrolet, with a black top and grey body, disappeared from the lane of 220 Dalhousie St. about 12.40 a.m. on Sunday.

Licence number of the car is FW393.

Cedar Lakes Park Opened For Public By Harold Scott

"I suggest to you that we are but trustees for another generation ... What verdict will history give us even 15 years from now if we fail to do all in our power to hand them over a better heritage than we received?" With these words of the late Fred Marshall who delivered them to a Peterborough service club in 1944, the Hon. Harold Scott, acting minister of lands and forests, ended a speech on Saturday afternoon before a crowd of more than 150 citizens in the sunny open woods of Cedar Lakes Park. It was official opening day.

Mr. Scott's speech came at the end of a few words from many citizens who, with many of the project's hard workers and well wishers, gathered to take part in the ceremonies and view the public 500-acre tract between Big and Little Cedar Lakes, 6 miles north of Burleigh Falls.

PRESIDENT'S WELCOME

President Norman Gainer welcomed the people to the ceremony. He was followed by Reeve of Burleigh-Anstruther, Norman Wilson who said how glad he was, personally, that the park was in his district. Charter member James Fraser, manager of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, paid tribute to the foresight of the late Fred Marshall who dreamed of the citizens acres and started the project rolling. He introduced Mrs. Fred Marshall to the gathering who said a few words of appreciation.

Warden Ernest Leeson brought greetings from the County of Peterborough and Alderman P. J. Anglesy, representing the mayor of the city, urged citizens to support the park and bring it to its final development stages.

The clergy were represented by Dr. C. O'Donohue (Roman Catholic) in the absence of Bishop Gerald Berry, and in the absence of Rabbi Babb, a short speech was made by Irving Moldaver on behalf of the Peterborough Jewry. Gordon K. Fraser, M. P., said how [illegible] interested gathering and that he hoped the park would develop as quickly as possible.

The bugle band of the Peterborough Sea Cadets under First Lieut. William Carr, made a smart appearance and played three numbers at the opening and closing of the ceremony.

MANY REPRESENTED

The crowd was well represented by various district and community bodies; people of Coe Hill and Apsley, members of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association and various service clubs and welfare organizations, to name a few.

People drifted off by foot and car to see their public park. The mile and a half road to Big Cedar Lake led them to turn-out clearings where 15 picnic tables dotted beauty spots overlooking both Big and Little Cedar Lakes. [illegible] ers were out in abundance and the fresh west wind drove insect pests into the brush. In the words of the late Fred Marshall's brother, George, of Toronto.

"It was a fine day, an enthusiastic crowd and the finest natural spot with unlimited possibilities that I have ever seen."

Dr. R. A. Kelly Recommends R. MacPherson

KINGSTON— (Special —Dr. R. A. Kelly, the medical officer of health, said today he would recommend to city council the appointment of Ronald Michael MacPherson, of the Peterborough Department of Health, as a Kingston Sanitary Inspector.

If the appointment is confirmed by council, Mr. MacPherson is expected to take over his duties here on or about June 15.

Dr. Kelly said Mr. MacPherson is one of the top sanitary inspectors in Ontario. He is a university graduate, and is the holder of a Public Health Certificate. The health officer said he understood that Mr. MacPherson was the only sanitary inspector in the province with this additional quaification. He has been with Peterborough Health Department for more than 15 years.

Dr. Kelly was formerly medical officer of health for Peterborough before coming to Kingston last year and Mr. MacPherson had previously served under his direction.

Contract Let To Build New Addition To Zeller's

Contract for the construction of the addition on Simcoe St. to the Zeller's Ltd. building at the northwest corner of George St. has been let to Bradford-Hoshal, eastern division, Port Hope. The architects on this work are W. and W. R. L. Blackwell & Craig of Peterborough.

St. Clair wrecking company of Toronto are proceeding with the demolishing of the old four-store building which is to be replaced by a two-storey enlargement of Zeller's Ltd.

Ten of the down-town stores that served three or four generations in this city, and were once the pride of its people, are being reduced to two.

Six have been torn down at the northwest corner of George and Charlotte Streets for F. W. Woolworth Co., and the four on Simcoe St. are now being tumbled down for clearance of the land.

A radical change has been made this year in the old hotel building at the northwest corner of Charlotte and Aylmer Streets, and on Charlotte the federal postal-customs structure has obliterated the row of roughcast stores that had become a blemish in the business section.

Records indicate that the Simcoe St. block, distinctly outlined between Zeller's and the King George Hotel, was owned for years by William and Joseph Dixon of the family represented today by Roy A. Dixon of the insurance firm of Dixon & Hurley.

William Dixon obtained part of the George St. corner lot as a Crown patent in 1836. Another part of it was acquired from the Crown by Alexander Henry in 1833. Several months later Henry sold his property to William and Joseph Dixon. The area extended from the lane on Simcoe St. to George, and half way up the block between Simcoe and Hunter Streets.

Ownership appears to have rested in the Dixon name until the early 80's when it was bought by George A. Cox who disposed of it to the Toronto Savings & Loan Company.

Annual Decoration Day Planned For June 28

Members of three I. O. O. F. lodges— Peterborough Lodge 111, Otonabee Lodge 13 and Golden Link Rebecca Lodge 81— will commemorate annual Decoration Day on June 28.

Led by the Salvation Army Silver Band, a parade will proceed to the War Memorial at Confederation Park where a wreath will be laid.

It will then march down George St., to Little Lake Cemetery and a memorial service held there.

A flower-bearing party will place a wreath on the Oddfellow plot and following the service, members will visit various parts of the cemetery and place wreaths on graves of former Oddfellow members.

Announcer Paul Reid Going To Hamilton

Paul Reid, CHEX announcer for 4½ years, is moving to Hamilton where he will do a midnight-to-dawn disc jockey show on Radio Station CHML. He begins next Monday.

At Hamilton he will join another former CHEX-er, announcer Rex Loring.

Mr. Reid was born and educated in Peterborough and has had practically all his radio experience on the local station. He is recognized as being one of the most popular announcers since CHEX was established.

His family—wife June and sons Gregory and Michael—will leave at the same time.

Rev. Wolfraim Called To Lakefield

A call has been extended to the Rev. H. C. Wolfraim of Almonte United Church in the Renfrew Presbytery by the congregation of Lakefield United Church.

The call was extended following a meeting of the Lakefield congregation Sunday, and it is expected the Peterborough Presbytery will moderate the call at a meeting this week.

Mr. Wolfraim, who succeeds the Rev. W. H. Tonge, will move to Lakefield July 1. Mr. Tonge has been appointed district representative of the British and Foreign Bible Society in the London, Ont., district.

BORN IN NORTHUMBERLAND

Born in Castleton, Northumberland County, Mr. Wolfraim attended Castleton Public School and Colborne High School. He is a graduate of Victoria College, University of Toronto, receiving his BA, BD and MA degrees there and was ordained by the Bay of Quinte Conference in 1922.

His charges have included Consecond, Wilfrid, Courtice, Janetville, King St. Lindsay and Almonte.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolfraim have four children, Harry, and Mrs. William Harris (Helen) both of Toronto and Anne and Ruth, at home.

Solving Dust Problem

A dust-collecting system is being installed at the Blue Mountain mill of American Nepheline Mines and will be in operation by the end of July, according to vice-president and general manager Ernest Craig. Aside from eliminating the fine white dust menace that covers the surrounding countryside, the by-product will be marketed and will be the highest-grade product that the mine produces. A fine-ore grinding unit is also being installed at the Lakefield final grinding plant and will be in operation this summer also.

Lions Club Plan To Build 3rd Wading Pool

Another step in the Peterborough Lions Club program for providing swimming facilities for city children will take place at 2:00 p.m. on Tuesday when Alderman Arthur Burrows will turn the first sod at Nicholls Oval. Geddes Harper, club president, said today that the club plans to build a wading pool for young children to be ready this summer.

The club, says Mr. Harper, has contracted George Heffernan for the construction work and he expects it to be started immediately. Providing there is good weather for the next six weeks, the wading pool will be officially opened by July 1.

A year ago, the Lions club built a wading pool on the McKellar tot-lot in the south-end. That venture was the second in a series of swimming projects planned by the club.

This third pool, (the first was at Riverside where the swimming and wading pools were built), will be identical to the McKellar pool which is just for non-swimmers. Mr. Harper explained that the pool will be 50 feet by 50 feet with a 10-foot cement walk about the pool.

TO COST $3,500

Mr. Harper estimated the cost of the pool at $3,500. Once the wading pool is completed, it will be turned over to the city which will provide the upkeep in the years to come.

The new pool will be located just north of the Rogers St. extension in to the Oval. It will be situated on a small plateau between four large maple trees which will shelter the pool.

"Mothers will be able to sit in the shelter, well out of the sun, while the children will be in the pool," said Mr. Harper. It's one of the best locations we could get."

Mr. Harper explained that the little children will be drawn away from Inverlea beach. The city, he pointed out, has slides, teeter-totters and swings close by for the children to play on.

Auto Theft, Assault Net Trio Three Months

BELLEVILLE (CP) — Robert Marshall, 35, and Michael Kavanaugh, 24, both of Nova Scotia, and Samuel Thompson, 22, a recent arrival from Ireland, were sentenced today to three months in jail for stealing an automobile and assaulting the owner.

The three, all railway workers, were convicted of stealing the car of Raymond Doyle, 35, of nearby Shannonville after assaulting him.

Assessment For 1954 County Aim

Question Marks, Gannon's Narrows And Buckhorn Road

The next session of the Peterborough County Council will be June 10, when the equalized assessment for county purposes in 1954 will be drawn up.

Meanwhile members of county council—still smarting from the $35,000 cut by the Department of Highways on their appropriation bylaw for county roads—are hoping for departmental approval of two other major projects: the $203,000 high level bridge and causeway at Gannon's Narrows, and the mulch paving of the 12½-mile Buckhorn Road which it is estimated will cost $70,000.

CAUSEWAY CLEAR

The likelihood is that the department will approve and sign the Gannon's Narrows agreement which provides for the provincial government paying 80 per cent of the $104,000 earmarked for rock fill. When the agreement is signed the county will then give third and final reading to their borrowing bylaw.

Unofficial indications are, however, that the department have turned down the scheme for the paving of the Buckhorn Road. Actual paving would have been a joint project of the city, county and suburban area roads commission. The department would have helped out by taking over and improving a development road in the county.

No official word from the department has yet been received on this project.

Tire Flattened In Crash

A car driven by John A. Smith, 27, 516 Lakeshore Rd., Port Credit, received a flat tire and $25 damage to the right front wheel when it was in collision with a car driven by Harold W. Sheridan, 62, 50 King St. E., Oshawa, at Park St. and Park Hill Rd. shortly after 10.30 p.m. Sunday. The right front fender of the Sheridan car was scraped.

Electric Lamp Kills Insects

An electric bulb now designed for the evaporation of a chemical product to be used for killing insects in closed rooms is now available. It is extremely easy to use; first tablets are inserted in the bulb through feeding holes; second, place bulb in electric socket; third, turn on the switch. It is very economical, consuming only 40 watts, does not present any danger of fire and can be used without supervision.

This bulb kills all insects such as flies, mosquitoes, moths, spiders, etc., and will help through regular usage to control cockroaches and other crawling insects by destroying the nymphs as well as the full-grown insects. It is particularly efficient against insects that resist DDT.

For further information call The Kingan Hardware Co. at 7963, where this lamp is available at surprisingly low cost.

Grove School Turns Nautical For Inspection

It may be that Canada's future naval battles are being won on the cricket field of the Lakefield Preparatory School.

Commodore K. F. Adams, CD, RCN, probably thought of this paraphase of the Iron Duke's reference to Eton as he stood in the warm sun Saturday and took the salute as the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "St. George" swung by. The occasion was the annual inspection at the school, better known as The Grove.

Though the nearest sea was 1,000 miles away there was a distinctly nautical air at the Grove Saturday. Commodore Adams, who is the Commanding Officer Naval Divisions, was more than pleased with the training and drill of the cadets.

He awarded the Sheddon Shield for platoon drill to No. 1 Platoon, commanded by PO Cadet Blair Whittemore. Then he said

"I have heard a great deal of Lakefield School's reputation, but I must say that I didn't expect to see the show I did see today. I was especially pleased with the juniors' rifle drill. We may expect the seniors to be drilled well but I really want to compliment the juniors on their showing.

SET EXAMPLE

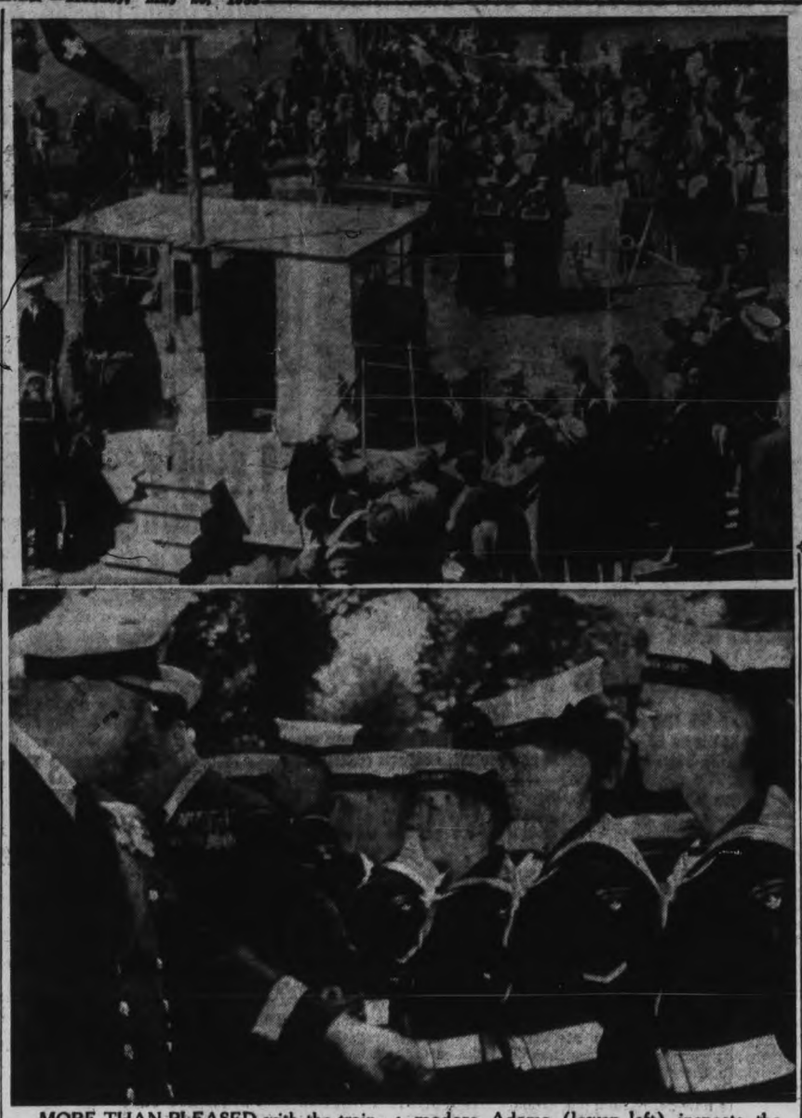
Commodore Adams said he had seen a large number of professional naval units but— addressing himself to the whole corps— "you can set an example to a whole lot of these." Eighty cadets were in the corps reviewed, divided into three plotoons, a five-man color party, and a 10-man band.

He also warned them that "the times are not settled" and they must be prepared "to take your place no matter what the cost."

"You've got to be prepared to defend this country against aggression. I'm glad to see you are going into the Navy, but if not you will be going into the Army or Air Force or industry. You all have a part to play."

Before dismissing the Cadet Corps he sounded another warning: in the Second World War the enemy began with an advantage because their youth was trained and prepared. We must not be caught napping again, he said.

Commodore Adams, who is a native of Hamilton, watched the ceremonial drill performed with professional precision on the cricket pitch. In his party as he took the salute were Commander E. B. Pearce, Toronto, area officer, Eastern Area; Lt.-Cmdr. George Manson, Ottawa, deputy director of Sea Cadets; and Lieut. J. Jefferiesg, Toronto, assistant area officer.



Also at the saluting base were Commanding Officer Lieut. W. E. Rashleigh; Sub.-Lieut. J. S. Derrick, 1st Lieut. and Training Officer; Sub-Lieut. J. Matthews; W./O. G. M. Lee, DSM, RN, (Retired), instructor; and G. Winder Smith, headmaster.

SHIP ON LAND

An innovation this year was the mockup of a moored ship, the RCSCC "St. George," Cadets saluted as they boarded the vessel and then showed their nautical training: navigations, semaphore, radio communication, first aid, knot tying, visual signalling, and moving heavy objects with the use of sheer leg power. Previously these demonstrations of seaman ship were carried out on the cricket pitch.

After the seamanship demonstrations the cadets marched to the dock and for half an hour showed their skill in a practical way manoeuvring the 16 sailing dinghies, the whaler, two cutters and 10 canoes in response to signals from shore. This year, for the first time, the cadets put on an exhibtion of intricate zigzag manoeuvres which tested their sailing ability.

After the sailing was over the 250 parents, relatives and friends of the cadets were invited to afternoon party on the lawn outside the Hall. A dance was held later, ending the day's activities.

MORE THAN PLEASED with the training and drill of the Lakefield Preparatory School Cadet Corps, Commodore K. F. Adams, CD, RCN, told the corps Saturday he had seen a large number of professional naval units, but "you can set an example to a whole lot of them." He was the inspecting officer at the annual corps inspection. Commodore Adams (lower left) inspects the ranks. Parents and friends (top left) gather around the Grove's improvised ship where they held training displays for Commodore Adams. After the displays the cadets switched from land to water when they sailed (top right) in dinghies and whalers, paddled canoes and rowed cutters.

Manitoba Election Drive Moves Into Home Stretch

WINNIPEG (CP)—The campaign for the June 8 Manitoba general election wheeled sharply into the home stretch during the week-end as the nomination total rose to 164. Nominations close today at 2 p.m. CDT.

Three of the five parties in the race had enough entries to elect a majority in the 57-seat House. The Liberal Progressives, currently in power, topped the list with 49, followed by Social Credit with 42 and Progressive Conservatives with 36.

The CCF had 26 candidates late Sunday with more promised before the polls close. There are 10 independents and one Labor-Progressive in the field.

The standing in the House at dissolution showed the government with 30 members, Progressive Conservatives nine, CCF seven, coalition 5, four vacant, one Labor-Progressive and one independent.

FIVE RETIRE

Five members of the last House retired, including three Liberal Progressives and two CCF. Mines Minister McDiarmid retired and has been mentioned as the next lieutenant-governor of the province.

The 42 Social Credit candidates could form a government—on paper—but veteran observers say its prospects appear doubtful. The party has little provincial organization and many of its candidates are unknowns. It has no leader.

There were no Social Credit members in the last House, but it has had as many as five in other Manitoba legislatures and boasted a coalition cabinet minister. This campaign was conducted mostly by Premier Manning of Alberta and Alberta Attorney-General Maynard, giving strength to the term "Social Credit invasion."

THREE ACCLAMATIONS

Three possible acclamations were listed, in sharp contrast to the 14 government acclamations recorded before the 1949 election. Two cabinet members, Public Works Minister Morton and Health Minister Bell, were without opposition. Chris Halldorson, Liberal Progressive candidate for St. George, also faced no opposition.

A veteran campaigner, W. D. Bayley, is the only withdrawal to date. Mr. Bayley attempted to stage a come-back with his Prosperity for Posterity Party, but withdrew Friday without explanation.

Eight women candidates were nominated, three each by the Social Credit and CCF and one each by the Progressive Conservatives and Liberal Progressives. Manitoba has only had two women members in its 79-year history.

The parties have not locked horns over a major issue in a dull campaign. The administration of Premier Campbell chose to stand on its record and the only statement of future plans covered projects already mentioned in the House.

The Progressive Conservatives, under Errick Willis, have been more aggressive. Their candidates include a number of men with wide municipal experience and a former federal member, J. A. Ross, whose seat at Souris was eliminated in the last redistribution

The CCF has based its campaign on a demand for comprehensive health and hospital services plus sharp criticism of the government for not effecting a redistribution of seats in the province. A minor feud developed between CCF leader Lloyd Stinson, a former United Church minister, and the Liberal Winnipeg Free Press.

Say Dulles Favors Plan For Middle East "NATO"

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters)—U.S. diplomatic circles here say the current Middle East and Asian tour by U.S. State Secretary J. Dulles is to sow the seeds for a new type of Middle East defense organization.

They say Dulles favors an organization springing directly out of the Middle East nations themselves, free from domination by other countries, including Britain and the U.S., associated with the Middle East defense organization proposal of October, 1951.

Dulles is understood to feel that the earlier proposal was somewhat artificial, and that a new type of organization, formed by the countries of this area, would have better prospects of support from nations that had little enthusiasm for the previous project.

Pakistan Foreign Minister Mohammed Zafrullah Khan is understood to have held this view since the inception of the MEDO plan, and observers believe this subject was one of the main topics discussed by the two statesmen at their meeting Saturday.

The observers say Dulles has been encouraged by what he has seen and heard on his tour, and by the apparent realization by the Middle Eastern countries that they cannot stand off any outside threat on the strength of their own power alone.

Dulles' visit is thought to have stimulated interest in the idea of an indigenous Middle East defense organization even if no concrete plan has yet taken shape.

Diplomats believe that Dulles gives top priority to the settlement of the Suez Canal Zone dispute between Britain and Egypt. He is said to feel that a satisfactory solution there will go a long way toward promoting the defense project and dispelling some of the Middle East's suspicion of Western aims.

In his two long talks with Pakistan Premier Mohammed Ali Saturday Dulles is also understood to have laid great emphasis on settlement of the Kashmir dispute with India—a subject which he also discussed in New Delhi with Prime Minister Nehru.

Reports here indicate that many misunderstandings between the U.S. and India were straightened out by the Secretary of State's talks in New Delhi.

Agricultural Products Keep Cash Registers Changing

By ART BRYDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—Belching industrial smoke stacks are competing with waving fields of wheat on Manitoba's economic horizon, but agricultural products keep the cash registers clanging.

The provincial gross industrial production tops agriculture by a steadily increasing margin but Dominion bureau of statistics figures show three of the top five industries are based on agriculture.

The gross value of manufactured products in 1952 was an estimated $596,000,000. The agricultural product was $351,294,000.

Heading the list is the slaughtering and meat packing industry followed in order by needle trades, railway rolling stock, butter and cheese and flour milling.

WINNIPEG THE HUB

The manufacturing centre of Manitoba is Winnipeg, where 85 per cent of the industry is concentrated. Greater Winnipeg is the fifth city in Canada in the number of employees engaged in manufacturing. It is also a financial centre with a higher value in cheques cashed a year than the next nine major cities combined.

Cinderella of the industrial group is the needle trades section. This bouncing baby, born 54 years ago, suffered a stunted growth until the 40s. An unprecedented expansion followed. Production figures jumped from just over $7,000,000 in 1937 to almost $50,000,000 in 1952. More men's work clothes are produced in Manitoba than anywhere else in Canada.

The Dominion government index lists 165 categories of industrial production of which metropolitan Winnipeg has entries in 121. Forty-per cent of the goods are sold within the province, 20 per cent go across Canada and a start is made on export trade.

The young petroleum industry is rapidly gaining strength as production rises. From just over $1,-800,000 in 1939, it has boosted production to almost $12,500,000 in 1950.

PACKING HOUSE CENTRE

Greater Winnipeg is the second largest packing house centre in Canada and is the principal home in Western Canada of the slaughtering and meat packing industries. An estimated 60 per cent of the cattle, sheep and hogs slaughtered in Manitoba are raised within the province.

The general industrial boom in the province shows in other ways. There were 55 new firms located in Greater Winnipeg in 1952 and another 16 in the first four months of 1953. Construction values jumped from just over $3,000,000 in 1942 to almost $46,000,000 in 1952.

Most of the new manufacturers are Manitobans backed by Manitoba capital, but large international corporations are turning Winnipeg into an important wholesale and distribution centre. Projects like the new General Motors Corporation parts and assembly plant are important to the employment picture.

Manitoba industry has its oddities. A firm at Portage La Prairie produces building siding from swamp reeds. The reeds are cut by a binder when the swamp is frozen and pressed into large slabs.

Senators Blame Shell Shortage For Lives Lost

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four of five Senators who investigated ammunition supplies in Korea reported Saturday that "there was a needless loss of American lives" because of shortages there.

While asserting "it is difficult to pinpoint the responsibility," they blamed policymakers of the recent administration, from former President Truman on down, for miscalculating the "aggressive designs of international communism."

"This is a tragic episode which has been extremely costly to the American people," the report said. "A repetition of this type of miscalculation and inability to plan for the defence and security of the United States could result in catastrophe for this nation."

KEFAUVER DISSENTS

The fifth member of the investigating subcommittee, Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.-Tenn.), disagreed with the finding that lives were lost because of ammunition shortages.

Declaring this was based "on conflicting testimony between various army generals," Kefauver said "American families which have sustained grief enough, without sustaining the added grief which this type of statement brings."

The majority report was signed by Senator Margaret Chase Smith (Rep.-Me.), chairman of the armed services sub-committee, and Senators Harry Byrd (Dem.Va.), Robert Hendrickson (Rep.-N.J.), and John Cooper (Rep.- Ky.).

Actress Ready To Fall Back On Law Career

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Mari Blanchard is one actress who doesn't worry about what will happen when fame passes her by. She plans to pursue a career in international law.

Mari was well on her way to a degree in international law a few years ago at the University of Southern California. She planned to pick up her sheepskin after a two-year course as an exchange student at the University of Panama. But something changed all that.

"During vacation I tried to get a job with an import-export firm," she commented. "I figured that would be a good background for my international law. They offered me $25 a week. I could make more than that in one afternoon by modelling.

"I figured there wasn't much sense in trying to get into diplomacy or international trade at my age. They just don't take anyone seriously in that line until he or she is 40 or more. So when an offer came from Harry Conover to come to New York, I left school."

One thing led to another. The first thing was a bubble bath ad which led to her being sought by Hollywood. She sat out a Paramount contract and is now at Universal-International.

CAN'T LAST FOREVER

"But I plan to go back to law," she vowed. "You can't expect to last forever in Hollywod; very few actresses can make the transition past 40. About that time I'll quit and go back to school to finish up."

But supposing she gets married?

"I'll still go ahead with my plans," she remarked. "I think it's very important for a wife to have a field of interest for herself. It makes her a more interesting person."

Mari said she is much too busy right now for international law or a family. After a slow start, her career is getting off the ground, thanks to the "sex and sand" epics. The latter are the oriental fantasies which are a standard commodity in Hollywood.

She recently appeared with Victor Mature in "Veils of Baghdad," in which she gets her first co-starring billing. Right now she is slinking through "Son of Sinbad" for Howard Hughes. Her studio has another Arabian Nights epic lined up for her.

40 Calves Turned Over To Young Farmers To Prepare For Fall Fair

One and forty Hereford cattle folk performed major parts in a community's demonstration of interest in its youth at Norwood Friday afternoon.

The 40 were boys and girls of East Peterborough, coming into ownership of their first calves. The one was Dave Kerr of the Empress Hotel and the 4th line of South whose helpful intervention secured the yearlings from the famed McIntyre Hereford Ranch of Alberta.

Prominent auxiliaries in this remarkable show were members of the Eastern Ontario Hereford Breeders Association, President Elmer Hawkey of Indian River, Past President Col. F. E. Birdsall, Archie Clysdale, M. W. Cornish of Asphodel, John and Francis Walsh, T. Toms of Havelock, Wm. Mood, secretary, Edgar A. Rosevear from the vicinity of Cobourg and others. Also Reeve James Humphries of Asphodel.

CONCEIVED IDEA

Foremost of all were directors of the Norwood Agricultural Society and its enterprising president, G. A. Brethen, who conceived the idea of the purchase of these Hereford heifers and their transport to Norwood. In the background were fathers of the 40 boys and girls whose encouragement of their sons and daughters involved an investment of approximately $5,000.

As for the calves in the event of dispersal, they looked like under-privileged relations of the two sleek and plump heifers of about the same age as the strangers which were shown by Milton Cornish. They have been fitted for the fifth annual Eastern Ontario Hereford sale at Morrow Park next Saturday afternoon, May 30.

This element of contrast was introduced to remind the boys and girls of the results of care and feeding which become their aim and responsibility through summer and until Thanksgiving Day when they are expected to enter their heifers at the Norwood Fair.

The western calves, as Mr. Brethen said, were looking their worst. They had wintered on the ranch, were fed and watered only three times on their long freight trip from Lethbridge, Alberta, to the stockyards at Norwood. They had been inoculated protectively for one disease or another until they appeared to suspect a further needling by anyone who touched them. Finally, they were doused for warble fly by the Asphodel township spraying outfit Friday morning. So, there they were, far from their home on the range in the strange and narrow space of the stockyard at the C.P.R. station.

WHY WESTERN?

"Some people might ask why we didn't buy calves for our Club members in our own part of Ontario," Mr. Brethen said to the attending spectators, quite a crowd, too. "The reason was that there was no place where we could get 40 calves of the uniformity of these animals. We made many enquiries, but we could not get what we needed, and that was calves of approximately the same age, weight and size, so that the boys and girls would start out on their project on even terms. That is why we had to look to the west for such a number as these and of their uniformity."

Mr. Brethen explained that at the McIntyre Ranch sale of surplus stock, the price Norwood Fair Board expected to pay was under the auction level.

"When it appeared that we would have to abandon the club idea, we thought of Dave Kerr of Peterborough because we understood he had McIntyre Herefords in his herd, and we asked him to see what he could do."

Mr. Kerr's long distance call to his friend Ralph Thrall, owner of the McIntyre Ranch since about 1940, reversed the prospects. Mr. Thrall bought the big cattle property after the death of William McIntyre. When he heard about the Norwood plans he was immediately impressed by its Hereford scope, and the Agricultural Society's desire to encourage the young folks of the Norwood area. He promised to select 40 heifers and send them as soon as they were prepared for the train trip.

DECIDED ON WHITE FACE

"We knew that there are other good breeds of beef cattle," Mr. Brethen said, "but when the project was being discussed by our Board we decided unanimously for the white faced cattle."

Mr. Brethen said the practical interest and help of the Hereford Association here and elsewhere was greatly appreciated, particularly in the final haltering of the calves and getting them numbered and ready to turn over to the Club members.

The 40 head are not registered, but the McIntyre herd has been developed through the years from purebred stock.

Mr. Hawkey said the Hereford breeders were glad to help the Fair Board and especially in their big undertaking to bring good cattle to Club members. "They have an opportunity now to look after them well, and we'll be repaid if the calves look like the two animals Mr. Cornish has shown here today."

Thanks to Mr. Kerr for his assistance was expressed by Mr. Hawkey, who freely acknowledged the value of other beef breeds and their place in the agriculture of this country.

Col. E. F. Birdsall said the 40 yearlings had come from "one of the grandest herds in North America". He recalled his acquaintance with the late William McIntyre who "built up a wonderful organization. People who have had McIntyre cattle have had great success with them."

Francis Walsh discussed the type features of the Cornish Herefords for the benefit of the 40 youngsters who gathered around him.

"Boys and girls growing up on the farm have to learn to do by doing," Mr. Walsh, a west Peterborough Club leader, said. "This is a fine chance for them to learn how to raise and handle and develop their calves. And we will all be looking forward to see the results on Thanksgiving Day. Their parents have already demonstrated their interest, and we hope they will continue to do so now that the calves are in the care and possession of the boys and girls."

Dave Kerr briefly told the group that they were fortunate in getting so many uniform calves of McIntyre breeding. "I just want to wish the young people lots of luck, and treat their calves well."

Man 31, Charged In Child's Death

LEICESTER, Eng. (Reuters)—Joseph Reynolds, 31, was charged today with the murder of Janet Warner, 12, who was found strangled Friday night in a woodland glade outside this Midlands town.

The girl was choked by a woman's stocking which had been twisted around her neck.

Chief Constable John Taylor said some wild flowers rested on the girl's body when it was found.

"It appeared as if they had been placed there with some reverence —rather as if intended as a wreath," he said.

"It seemed to us that the murderer may have had some remorse."

Police said Reynolds made a statement which would be given to the court later.

Roy Armstrong CCF Candidate Durham Riding

MILLBROOK (ENS)—At the nomination meeting of the CCF of Durham riding held Saturday evening in Orono town hall, Roy Armstrong of Janetville was chosen as the candidate in the next federal election. Mr. Armstrong is of the third generation of a family of farmers. His grandfather, a pioneer settler, came out from Ireland in 1825. They still have the crown deed in the family. Mr. Armstrong owns an adjoining farm. He is the youngest boy in a family of six boys and 3 girls. He does mixed farming and his special interest is Shorthorn cattle. His wife, formerly Mary Irwin, was a school teacher from Ocean Springs, Mississippi. They have one daughter, Marilyn. Mr. Armstrong has been interested in the CCF since this riding ran its first candidate, Dr. Lorna Cotton, in 1934. He has been on the riding executive since that time, serving for a time as vice-president. His father before him was an ardent socialist.

CLOSER CO-OPERATION

In his address Mr. Armstrong called for closer co-operation between labor and the farm. He said that many who were opposed to socialism did not understand its aims. Rather than trying to take people's homes, socialism as practiced by the CCF meant strengthening their ownership. In the services such as hydro, the post office, the highway department and schools, which are now handled by the government, few people would want to go back to private enterprise.

The speaker called for courage and common sense to go forward to establish a co-operative society. "We must listen," he said, "to the idealist if we are to save the world from another world war. Socialism believes in supplying food rather than guns. There is constant danger of international war while one-half of the world's population is hungry."

Tommy Thomas of Oshawa, member of the provincial House, was the special speaker of the evening. He was introduced by Spencer Cheshire, riding president.

He said that while everyone knew where funds for CCF election campaigns came from, from the contributions of the rank and file of people who believed in the movement, where Liberal and Conservative funds came from was a well guarded secret. Occasionally information does leak out and people were able to surmise its source. Insurance companies, he felt, were responsible for inducing the government to reduce interest on government annuities from 4% to 3%. In Saskatchewan where they had a compulsory auto insurance plan which he said was the best on the continent, the CCF government had been elected in '44, '48 and with a bigger majority than ever in '52. When they wanted to establish a branch office in Toronto and applied for a license they were refused.

Premier Frost said "it was not proper for one province to operate a business in another." The speaker surmised that the pressure from insurance companies was too great.

In 1948 the federal government set up a committee to probe the prices of commodities. One of these was steel, and when Mr. Hilton of the Stelco company was questioned regarding an item of $650,000 in a financial statement, he said that it was a donation of $325,000 to the campaign of the Liberals, and a similar amount to the Conservatives, because "we weren't quite sure which was going to win." At the same time the government was paying a subsidy of $4.00 a ton on steel from taxpayers' money.

Mr. Thomas said that the Liberals had been promising a national health scheme for 30 years. Prime Minister St. Laurent says that he is all in favor of the plan, but not at the present time on account of the lack of hospital accommodation. The speaker pointed out that in Saskatchewan when the CCF was first elected there were only 3.5 hospital beds for 1,000 population. They instituted a health plan in 1947. Now they have 7.5 hospital beds for 1,000 population, the best record of any province in Canada.

Mr. Frost agrees with Mr. St. Laurent and since Ontario has half of the national revenue his word carries weight. The hospital situation remains acute with people who need hospitalization having to wait sometimes two months or longer. Mr. Frost says it is unfair to take money for services they cannot give, but Blue Cross and other such groups do. The speaker asked if they were unfair. He said the federal and provincial governments were not encouraging hospital construction. Mr. Thomas said he thought the cost of education should be borne by the provincial and dominion governments instead of the present system where 40% to 50% of taxes in municipailties went for education. When he stated this in the House he was asked where the money was to come from. It could have been covered by the money given to corporations in reduction of excess profit tax by 3%, by the federal government and by an additional 2½ to 3%, in the provincial government leasing taxing field to the federal government in 1952.

The secretary, Lucas Nicholls, of Bowmanville, reported the largest membership in the riding. He said that he had requested that Tommy Douglas, Saskatchewan premier, should address the riding during the election campaign, and a report was read of the citation given Mr. Douglas last month by the League for Industrial Democracy of U.S.A. Awarded annually to "a distinguished leader from abroad", the citation read in part: Under your dynamic, creative and socially-visioned leadership, the C.C.F. government assured to the people a clean and honest administration; enacted the most advanced legislation on the American continent in the fields of natural resources, human rights, health and social insurance; worked out a harmonious relationship between the strong co-operative movement and expanding public enterprise; steadily improved the cultural and recreational services; and gave to the world an example of social and economic planning with freedom that has placed every democratic country in its debt."

Among those who spoke briefly were James Lownie, president of Ontario riding association, and James Kenny of Port Hope, previous federal candidate who was prevented by reserve army duties from contesting the nomination. Mr. Frank McLellan, Mrs. Joseph McKenzie, Mr. Lucas Nicholls and Mr. Ernest Dent also declined due to pressure of private business. John M. James, Liberal, now represents the riding in the House of Commons.

Local Athletes Win In 2 Groups As Leaders Meet

Harold Henry of Kingston, Jack Pulkinghorn and Thomas Krogh, both of Peterborough, won the senior, junior and intermediate gymnasium competition Saturday at the annual YMCA leader corps conference for Eastern Ontario.

More than 50 delegates from Kingston, Belleville and Peterborough were welcomed Saturday noon by Stanley Jones, vice-president of the Peterborough leader corps, and by James McClenaghan, YMCA general secretary.

During Saturday afternoon the delegates competed at a gymnasium tournament. The junior boys from 12 to 14 years, worked on the mats and low horizontal bar. Pulkinghorn edged Ross Reid of Peterborough 388 to 385 for first place honors. Other high juniors were David Ross, also of Peterborough, with 315 points and Larry Regensburg of Belleville with 295 points.

SWEPT INTERMEDIATE

Peterborough boys swept the intermediate competition, for boys 15 to 18 years, as they competed on the parallel bars, the mats and the rings. Thomas Krogh was high with 573 points, followed up by Wilton Tranter with 538. Garry Finn with 531 and Jim Heffernan with 493.

The senior competition on the parallel bars, mats and high horizontal bar was the afternoon's closest. It finished with Harold Henry of Kingston in first with 584 points, John Rose of Peterborough second with 572 points, Stan Creegan of Belleville third with 548 points and Jim Edwards of Kingston fourth with 523 points.

The winners were presented with ribbons and trophies. To the high Peterborough winners went the Peterborough YMCA physical competition trophies, the Earl Spencley memorial trophy to junior Jack Pulkinghorn, the Rollie Rennie memorial trophy to intermediate Tommie Krogh and the Fred Williams memorial trophy to senior John Rose.

A leader in the YMCA for the past 23 years, Jack Wolstenholme, past president of the leader corps, spoke Saturday at the banquet on Leadership and the Values to the YMCA and the Individual. Stanley Payne, president of the Peterborough YMCA board of directors, welcomed the delegates.

On Sunday after a devotional service conducted by the Rev. Charles Muxworthy, the delegates were divided into three discussion groups. There they dicussed (i) How Leaders can help in the physical department of the YMCA, led by Di Diamantides of Belleville; (ii) What training is required to turn out a leader, led by Clarence Porter of Peterborough; (iii) What is expected from a leader, regarding character, personality, ability, personal appearance, service, physical fitness, led by Mr. McClenaghan.

Later at a dinner, chaired by Charles Bain, president of the Peterborough leaders corps, Kenneth Kingston, chairman of the YMCA physical committee, summarized the reports of the discussion groups.

Saturday evening the delegates were entertained at dances, movies and house parties. Sunday they were taken on a tour of Peterborough.

The next leader corps conference will be held in Belleville in April, 1954.

All Parties Said Organizing Last Minute Meeting In Nova Scotia Elections

HALIFAX (CP)—Nova Scotia's three political parties, in an election campaign which started slowly but has since hit a blazing pace, are carrying their appeal to the voters right down to the wire.

On the eve of Tuesday's balloting, all groups are organizing last-minute meetings. It's considered an unusually high pitch of activity for a provincial contest.

Liberal and Progressive Conservative leaders fired their parting shots Saturday, but CCF leader Michael McDonald kept up a busy round of activity Sunday in Cape Breton's industrial areas.

Mr. McDonald, head of the two-man CCF delegation in the legislature, accused the Liberal government of lack of interest in the welfare of the working classes.

He told meetings in the mining towns of Glace Bay and New Waterford that a Liberal-sponsored amendment to the Workmen's Compensation Act, requiring compulsory examination of an ailing worker by a company doctor, was "vicious and reactionary."

Liberal policies on co-operatives and housing also came under fire from the CCF leader.

Premier Macdonald, in a final radio broadcast, called the Progressive Conservative campaign "petty criticism. . .final proof that the party, as led today in this province, is not only bankrupt of constructive ideas, but has lost all sense of proportion and balance as well."

Mr. Macdonald defended the government's 20-year record, which both major parties agree is the chief election issue. He promised extension and expansion of industry, rural electrification, welfare services and public works, and pledged sound financing "in the future as we have practised in the past."

SCORES LIBERALS

Robert L. (Bob) Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, repeated his party's charges that the government has failed to stimulate provincial industry. He promised to take over the job personally if elected to head a new government.

Also high on the Progressive Conservative platform are repeal of cabinet ministers' pensions and a probe into the alleged operations of liquor agents.

Mr. Stanfield accused the government of "extravagance and waste."

Liberals held 27 seats in the 37-member legislature at dissolution and the Progressive Conservatives formed an eight-man opposition. Both are entering a full slate of candidates.

The CCF, which held two seats, is contesting 16 seats and there is one independent.

Preliminary forecasts indicated favorable weather on polling day. About 375,000 persons are eligible to vote.

Christianity Should Be Key Teaching Youth

The emphasis in teaching youth should be on the Christian approach was the principal idea that Bill McFarlane, boys' work secretary at the YMCA brought back with him from the Tenth North American Assembly of Boys Work Secretaries held last week in East Lansing, Mich.

Four-hundred and seventy-five delegates from Canada and the United States crowded the Kellog Centre of Continuing Education in Lansing, Mich., for one week to study the trend in boys' work and to map out various programs for the coming three years.

FROM OTHER NATIONS

There were also two delegates present from Japan, a layman from Germany and a representative from the International YMCA Committee in Geneva, Switzerland.

C. L. Brown, general secretary of Hamilton WMCA was the keynote speaker at the conference, and Eugene Barnett, president of the World Committee of YMCA's and Allan Andrews, World Boys' Work Secretary, wer also main speakers on the program.

"Known By Service and Quality"

"Jehosophat! Will the kid be okay?"

• You might have witnessed this scene with your own eyes. And you, too, might have reacted in the same way — "Jehosophat! Will the kid be okay?"

But even though you were right at the spot, chances are that you had to turn to a newspaper to get the whole story.

Then, for the first time, you'd learn that the child's leg was caught in a water pipe... that firemen cut the pipe first, and then removed it after greasing the child's leg. You'd know that the kid did come out okay.

Being on the spot is not much better than seeing a photograph of the action, or a headline about it, or hearing a brief announcement.

All of these can whet your appetite for news, but they cannot satisfy your hunger for the whole story.

That's what the newspaper is for. Newspapers bring news—pictures and sufficient words.

This goes for advertising, too. The brief message that hangs in the air... or brief headlines here or there... may indeed have a momentary interest.

But the newspaper ad carries the brass-tacks quality, the urgency of the newspaper itself.

Like a news item, the ad can be examined and re-examined. Can be read any time. Anywhere. Can be clipped and carried in a pocketbook.

And just as the newspaper speaks the special language of the town it mirrors, the ads themselves have the same important local quality.

Add to all this the fact that the newspaper reaches just about everybody in town, not just fractions of audiences, and you know why the newspaper is the nation's most effective advertising medium.

No wonder advertisers—both retail and national—invest more money in newspapers than in any other form of advertising.

The newspaper is always "first with the most"

This message prepared by BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, and published in the interests of fuller understanding of newspapers by The Peterborough Examiner.

Membership Of 31,656 Reported By IODE; National Chapter Meets

EDMONTON (CP)—The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire reports receipts of $861,346.97 and disbursements of $869,575.98 during 1952-53.

In a report prepared for delivery at the opening business sessions of the 53rd annual meeting of the national chapter here today, Mrs. Peter Robinson, Toronto, national treasurer, said these amounts represented 929 chapters (one national eight provincial, 32 municipal, 875 primary and 13 junior chapters.)

Cash and investments on hand Jan. 15, 1952 amounted to $1,336,-236.42, the bulk of which is held in trust for First and Second World War memorial scholarships and bursaries.

Mrs. Robinson reported that two study bedrooms, costing $1,500 each were endowed in London House, a residence in London, England, for British, Commonwealth and Empire students.

IMPORTANT YEAR

Mrs. R. M. Walkey, Toronto, national organizing secretary, said that the order's total membership for 1952 was 31,656.

"Coronation year should have special meaning to those interested in the objectives and expansion of the IODE," she said.

In the report of the national publicity committee, Mrs. O. L. Robb, Toronto, said that provincial annual reports showed an increase in publicity during the past year.

"The value of publicity to an organization such as the IODE can never be overestimated. If we are to develop its many undertakings and increase membership we must keep the public informed as to our principles and accomplishments," she said.

Reporting for the national hospitality committee, national convener Mrs. Hugh L. Allward, Toronto, said the order now has representatives in the Victoria League (a British Commonwealth women's organization) in Africa in Johannesburg, Durban, Southern Rhodesia, Pietermaritzburg and in Adelaide, Australia.

"They have expressed their eagerness to extend hospitality to Canadians," she said.

FROM DOWN UNDER

Official welcomes were extended during the year by various chapters to such persons and groups as:

Governor-General Viscount Massey; Prime Minister St. Laurent; Lady Baden-Powell, world chief guide; the Countess of Limerick, vice-president of the United Kingdom Red Cross; students from abroad and new Canadians.

National secretary Mrs. G. G. Sinclair, Toronto, said in her report on the national executive committee that Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, has consented to be honorary president of the IODE and to continue as the order's representative in Great Britain.

WA Blossom Tea Successful Event

FAIRVIEW (ENS)—The Women's Association held a successful blossom tea at the home of Mrs. Wesley Bell. Ideal weather prevailed and tables were arranged on the verandah.

The home cooking table was in charge of Mrs. Walter Heard and Mrs. Cephas Heard. The bazaar table was in charge of Mrs. Everett Cockburn and Mrs. Ernest Mahood. Mrs. Ross Harrison looked after the parcel post sale and the fish pond was in charge of Mrs. Albert Bulmer and Mrs. Neil Jewell.

The ladies were received by Mrs. Wesley Bell, Mrs. Stanley Boyce and Mrs. Harold Lewis. Mrs. Carman Bell was treasurer.

The tea table was lovely with a lace cloth, centred by a silver bowl filled with tulips and blossome with silver candles at either end.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Gordon Mann from Gilmour Baptist church, Mrs. George McIlmoyll of Selwyn WA, Mrs. Carl Blewett of Bridgenorth WA, and Mrs. Wilbert Rosborough of Fairview.

Serving in the tea room were Mrs. Leo Allen, Mrs. Bruce Heard, Mrs. Nelson Trude, Mrs. Bob Cockburn, Mrs. Milton Kidd and Mrs. Harold Heard. Replenishing plates were Mrs. Robert Fowler, Mrs. Milton Graham and Mrs. Fred Brown. Mrs. Frank Trude made tea. Mrs. W. D. Wilson was general convener.

The house was beautifully decorated with a profusion of spring flowers. Proceeds amounted to over $80, which will go towards the parsonage fund.

A BEAUTIFUL LOOK for the beach is achieved by these girls with use of imaginative new jewellery and scarves. Girl (left) wears heavy-looking "gold" metal massed at wrists and throat with earrings to match. This new jewellery is actually almost weightless and a girl can wear it in swimming if she likes, since it can't tarnish. She has more fragile look with another set of jewellery (centre). It's made of white straw, woven into flower forms, and weighs almost nothing. At right, different type of girl chooses different type of beach jewellery—tiny clam shells, gaily painted and strung on coral beads. White terry cloth cape-stole with huge pockets protects shoulders from excessive sun. Such jewellery is foil for a golden tan.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Chicken And Potato Salads In Demand Summer Dishes

Reluctant as I am to admit it there are two salads that Canadian hostesses find almost indispensable to their summer entertaining. They are chicken salad and potato salad.

Some of the glue-y masses I have tasted that masquerade as a potato salad are an abomination and a disgrace to Canadian womanhood.

Potato salad cannot be made from mashed potatoes. Yes, Ma'am, I've tasted potato salad made from cold mashed potatoes, sloshed around in boiled dressing with some onion tops that would turn a visiting Frenchman back to his native land of good cookery, never to return.

Realiaye, my dear sister-Canadians, that we have a tradition to build and to maintain.

We cannot afford to be careless even for one mealsworth, if we are going to put Canada on the Good Cookery Map.

Either one of these salads would be ideal for your Coronation Day supper in the garden. The potato salad will suit Eileen T. to a "t" too for she asked for my "favorite potato salad recipe" for hers is dry, has no zip and is altogether uninspiring, says she.

EMEM'S POTATO SALAD

To make 6 cups finished potato salad (that is 1 cup more than a quart) which will serve anywhere from 6 to 9 potato salad lovers, you need 3 lbs, wax-y type potatoes. Naturally I can't tell you the number of potatoes because they vary so much in size. Red boiling potatoes are the wax-y type. If you have to use meal-y type potatoes cook them only until you can barely pierce them with a fork. Wash the potatoes thoroughly and cook gently with skins on in covered saucepan in small amount of unsalted water until barely tender. Drain, rinse with cold water, drain at once and allow to cool. Peel and slice and dice in to ½-inch cubes. Now add ¼ cup French dressing, drizzling, it over all of them, 1 tablespoon very finely chopped green onion and top OR your own chives, ¼ cup fresh green pepper, ¼ cup chopped canned pimiento, ½ cup finely chopped inner celery stalks, about 2 teaspoons salt, and IF DESIRED, 2 or 4 sliced hard-cooked eggs, ½ cup diced cucumber. The next is a "must" but added just before serving—¾ cup genuine mayonnaise, not salad dressing. Mix all ingredients but the mayonnaise and chill. Carefully stir in the mayonnaise. Serve on delicate lettuce leaves in large bowl or on cold supper plates. Chopped parsley and a few fresh clooked green peas are pretty and tasty additions. My sister adds thin slices of raw tender asparagus.

✧ ✧ ✧

CHICKEN SALAD SUPREME
(serves 6)

Two cups diced chicken, ½ cup well-drained small pineapple cubes (canned), ½ cup finely chopped inner celery stalks, ½ cup shredded blanched almonds, ½ teaspoon salt, shake of white pepper, ½ cup genuine mayonnaise, ¼ cup heavy cream. Whip the cream until very stiff and fold it into the mayonnaise. Then mix all salad ingredients and keep very cold for 2 hours. Just before serving fold the cold salad into the cold mayonnaise-cream mixture and serve on tender lettuce. A delicious accompaniment is a spiced pear.

✧ ✧ ✧

VARIATION: You may make a beautiful main course of this chicken salad by serving it in a tomato jelly ring for a cold buffet supper. To make the Tomato Jelly mix together 2 cups tomato juice, 1 small onion chopped, 1 chopped celery stalks, 1 teaspoon lemon rind, and ½ teaspoon salt. Simmer for 5 minutes. Then dissolve it and 2 teaspoons suger in the hot mixture, stirring removed from heat, until dissolved. Pour this into an 8-inch ring mould, and chill until firm. Unmould on large round chop plate, fill centre with chilled chicken salad. Garnish outside edge with scored slices of cucumber, stuffed olives and sprigs of parsley.

Millbrook Pupils Visit Capitals

MILLBROOK (ENS).—Two bus loads of high school students visited Toronto, and one of senior pupils went to Ottawa Friday.

The senior high school students went through Ryerson Institute and juniors through Simpson's store. The whole party saw through Casa Loma, were shown through the Star building and spent some time in the Ontario Museum.

After dinner the group divided, some to go to a baseball game in Maple Leaf stadium and the others to visit Sunnyside. The juniors were accompanied by Harry Williams, and the seniors by Bruce Ingham Miss Helen Black, principal, and Miss Bernice Mintha met the group in Toronto.

The public school students reached Ottawa just after lunch. The party divided into four groups and while one visited the Mint, others saw through the War Museum and the Archives building. Next, they were shown through the Parliament buildings where they went to the top of the Peace Tower.

After a recess for shopping they went to Government House. The Governor-General was entertaining the Prime Minister of New Zealand and could not receive the children, but they were shown through the grounds and saw the Prime Minister of New Zealand leaving with a motorcycle escort.

The children were taken on sight-seeing tours of Hull, Que., and Ottawa before their evening meal and starting for home. The tulip displays, while past their best, were still magnificent.

Accompanying the students, as well as Principal Percy Hamilton and Mrs. Hamilton, were Mrs. Manley, Mrs. Ed. Richards, Mrs. Walter Challice, Mrs. M. E. Hobbs, Mrs. Homer Ouelette, Mrs. Robert Guthrie, Mrs. Allan Earle and Mrs. Bruce Ingham.

Of Interest to Women

Jewellery Good On Tan

On the beach this summer you can emphasize your beauty with accessories every bit as fetching as those worn for the most festive evenings.

Girls will be wearing exotic jewelry on the beach, made from tarnish-proof materials, feather-light in weight. Unlike the pieces you're accustomed to in winter, this jewellery won't make you feel like removing it because of the heat.

You won't wear the jewellery, of course, while you're acquiring a tan. Once well toasted, however, you can wear it without fear of white marks.

Your choice is wide. There's a new "gold" metal that is worn in great masses and looks huge and bulky, but you'll scarcely feel it. It comes in earrings, bracelets and necklaces or adorns a bathing cap. This metal can't tarnish, so wear it in swimming and in your shower, if you like.

You can have exotic mother-of-pearl jewellery imported from the Mediterranean. It's cut to resemble the shining animal teeth charms worn by African natives.

White enamel decorates expansion bracelets and earrings two inches in diameter.

Straw is woven into flower wreaths for neck and wrists and single flowers for the ears.

Shells of oysters, clams and snails are brightly enameled and strung on coral or gold chains.

You'll need something at the beach for occasional cover-up, so why not investigate the new cotton jersey stoles and squares and terry cloth stoles and bolero shrugs? One terry cloth stole is

Parents! what do you mean by "PROTECTION"?

... from HARM?
... from FEAR?
... from WANT?

THERE IS ANOTHER VITAL PROTECTION
... IT IS FINANCIAL

Parents give their utmost to see that their children are protected from unhappiness in all its forms. But they often overlook the fact that someday children will no longer be little tots, but will be grown up and have to fend for themselves.

Wise parents know that Financial support is necessary for first-class education—or a start in business. That is why so many parents make sure of the later-year needs by investing in a Junior Security Policy with Dominion Life—while their children are little tots.

The "Baby" Premium is approximately a Dollar a Week. When "Junior" reaches college age there is a fund ready for his education. When he reaches "21" he will have the Financial backing of a substantial sum in Life Insurance ($5000)—and he can carry on the Policy at the same amazingly low Premium rate.

You can't go ALL-OUT

If you feel 'ALL-IN'

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, lowered resistance, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" heavy-headed feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter. 53

Mrs. Andy Murphy was matron of honor for her sister, and bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Hewitt, sister of the bride, and Miss Marie Healey. They wore identically styled strapless gowns of nylon net and lace, in yellow, powder blue and orchid, made with full skirts and ruffled peplums, and the jackets had cap sleeves and stand-up collars. DOROTHY DIX:

Couple Find Social Adjustments Difficult

DEAR MISS DIX: There's nothing I want more than to be a good wife and mother, and I try in every way to achieve that goal. We have been married four years and have one son. My husband is devoted to us, our home is nice, but our problem is social adjustment. Our home is isolated, and most of the people around are 15 or more years older than we are. My little boy has no other child as a companion. Consequently he is becoming so bashful he won't speak to the few people who do visit us, and appears actually backward. I work from daybreak until night keeping our six rooms clean and have little time to visit. We are developing into a family of hermits. We go to church every seven or eight months, but never twice to the same one.—SALLY.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You need a budget—for time and for yourself. Though your house takes up a great deal of your day, there must be some time that you could spend developing new friends and interests. You realize how important this aspect of your life is, yet cannot see your way clear to dropping housework for a few hours a day to adjust yourself to new surroundings. You are becoming a martyr to the house. Don't put all the blame on people who won't make the climb to visit your isolated hilltop. If they won't come up, why can't you go to them?

CHURCH CONNNECTION HELPFUL

As a starter—make a definite church connection. Since you seem to have a wide choice of churches, choose one that has a Sunday school class for very young children. This will be a big help in overcoming your son's shyness, and if you can teach a class (but not his), it will give you an opportunity to make new associations.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a widow of 50 with a household including a grown daughter and a dependent father. For several months I have been going with a man 55, who says he wants to marry me, but keeps putting off a definite decision on the wedding whenever the subject comes up. He pleads business or money difficulties—anything to avoid setting a date. I'm getting disgusted.—M. J.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: And well you should be! The man quite evidently wants pleasant company, home-cooked dinners when you can provide them, and all the comforts of a pleasant companionship without commitment. If you can accept him on those terms, continue the friendship. If you have your heart set on a second trip to the altar, send him on his way to a more patient lady.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been dating several boys for the past few months, since I don't want to go steady. I think I'm too young, being 16. My mother and older sisters approve of my idea, but my girl friend's mother won't let me double-date with her daughter because I'm going with several boys rather than one. I have chances to go steady, but don't want to be tied down. I am a nice girl, know my place with boys, and have never had one word of criticism about my conduct. My girl friend is 17, and going steady. Whenever she breaks with a boy, she has to go steady with the next one since that's the only way her mother will let her date.—CONNIE.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You are a sensible girl. The approbation of your mother and sisters is evidence of that. The mother of your girl friend apparently fears the effects of promiscuity if her daughter dates more than one boy; perhaps her understanding of the girl's temperament indicates that one-boy dating is best for the girl. However, she is wrong to condemn you for following sensible dictates.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Although I'm sufficiently attractvie to have boy friends. I don't keep them. I'm 22 and still have no staedy beau. I admit I'm jealous and can't stand to see the boy I'm with look at another girl.—NAN K.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You know your fundamental fault, and it's up to you to do something about it. Only you can change your disposition. Remember, a boy is looking for good company when he selects a girl friend, and if you nag, sulk and argue, you won't hold your boy friends. Face the truth and do something about it.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a widow of 26 with a five-year-old son. For the past two years I have been going with a fine man, but there are a few things holding up my decision to be married to him. He has been in this country ten years, and still speaks with a slight accent. He's the quiet type, and doesn't have much style in his dress. Since I am considered good looking, and dress smartly, his shortcoming bothers me. Last, and most important, he refuses to change his name to please me and, since his surname is foreign, I could never marry him unless he shortens or simplifies it. I wouldn't like to bear the name myself, and I believe it would be a definite handicap to our children.

F. C.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

ANSWER: Judging from your description of the man, certain details of which I have had to omit for space consideration, I'd say he would make a fine husband. However, since you seem disposed to let minor details overrule major virtues, we'll now deal with your objections. While I understand the advisability of shortening some foreign names, your friend's is definitely not so cumbersome that it would be a handicap. It is a short, pleasant sounding name, and the fact that it clearly identifies his nationality is no drawback. Any country that can produce such an excellent man should be worthy of advertisement. Don't belittle a European background. And if you do decide to marry the man, don't, under any circumstances, ever apologize for the land of his origin. That's snobbery. Let your children carry his name as a fine heritage.

As for the other "faults" you deplore — a slight accent is certainly preferable to the sloppy Ennglish we hear too often in this country, also a devoted husband and father would be preferred by any sensible woman to a flashy dresser.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: When a minister is asked to perform a wedding ceremony, is it proper for his wife to attend the wedding? There have been occasions when I didn't go to weddings because I hadn't received an invitation, but later I learned that I was expected to be present.

MINISTER'S WIFE.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Properly, an invitation should be sent to both the minister and his wife, if they are expected to attend the reception following the ceremony. Without such an invitation, you could scarcely be expected to take your welcome for granted.

6—In Memoriam

HUNTER—In loving memory of baby Ann Hunter, who passed away one year ago today.
Time speeds on, one year has passed
Since death its gloom, its shadows cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
Her vacant place there's none to fill:
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.
—Ever remembered by mother and father.

McINTYRE
Loving remembering a dear husband and father, Charles L. McIntyre, who was called to Higher Service, May 25th, 1950.
When early voices, once so dear, have died in silence one by one,
Yet have I peace, and can rejoice if I can hear The Master's voice.
"A little while; wait patiently,
A little while, and thou shalt be
With thy beloved, and with Me."
—Wife Marjorie Jean and daughter Linda.

PETERS—In loving memory of a sister, Mrs. Frank Peters, who passed away May 25, 1944.
You are not forgotten, sister,
Nor ever will you be
As long as life and memory lasts
We will remember thee.
—Ever remembered by her sisters, Mrs. Louis Thompson and Mrs. Philip Russell.

PETERS—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. Frank Peters, who passed away May 25, 1944.
Sweet memories will linger forever,
Time cannot change them that's true,
Years that will come cannot sever
Our loving remembrance of you.
—Ever remembered by husband and family.

Finish Road

NORTH BAY (CP)—About 100 reserve force engineers of the army's 8th field squadron Sunday put finishing touches on a 600-foot road into a proposed playground area for its housing development. RoKs Fight Off Bitter Attack By Reds On Korean Eastern Front

SEOUL (AP)—South Korean infantry fought off a bitter three-hour attack early today by almost 200 Chinese who stormed to the crest of an Allied outpost on the eastern front.

Standing off the raiders with hand grenades and close range rifle and machine-gun fire, the South Koreans reported killing or wounding some 60 Red raiders southeast of Outpost Texas.

United Nations raiding and reconnaissance patrols hit Red lines at 25 points across the 155-mile front.

He said intelligence reports showed there are slightly more than 1,000,000 Red troops spread over North Korea with seven Chinese armies (about 29,000 fighting troops each) and two North Korean corps (about 30,000 each) on the battle line.

At sea, the U. S. battleship New Jersey steamed far up the Yellow Sea on Korea's west coast and blasted Red coastal defences at the river approaches to the key port of Chinnampo. The British heavy cruiser Newcastle and carrier Ocean and U. S. destroyer Chauncey also took part.

This was the New Jersey's first appearance on the west coast since November, 1951. British naval units usually man this side of the peninsula.

8-Months' Bride Dies In Crash, Five Injured

OSHAWA (CP)—A 17-year-old Oshawa bride of eight months, Mrs. Arthur Moreau, was killed and four others including her husband were injured when the small truck in which they were riding went out of control and crashed into a culvert on Highway 401 shortly before dawn today.

The truck flipped in the air, tossing its occupants to the ground, and ended up on its four wheels in the centre boulevard.

Coroner Dr. H. M. MacDonald said the young woman's left leg was nearly cut off below the hip. She died en route to hospital.

Mrs. Stanley Dwire, 29, suffered cuts and bruises and Mrs. Reginald Seymour, 23, a fractured pelvis. Both were admitted to Oshawa General Hospital.

Treated at the hospital for cuts and bruises were Reginald Seymour, 24, and Arthur Moreau, 23, husband of the dead woman.

DRIVER UNHURT

Provincial police said the driver of the truck was Stanley Dwire, who escaped unhurt. He told police he was nearing Oshawa when one of the tires blew, causing him to lose control of the truck.

The vehicle then careened wildly off the pavement and into the centre boulevard.

The accident occurred at Thornton's Road intersection as the six were returning home after attending a house party in Toronto.

Police believe Mrs. Moreau was asleep on a mattress in the rear of the open truck at the time. Her husband and Seymour were with her.

"I can't really say what happened—it all occurred so fast," said Moreau.

A passing motorist, Jim Carmichael of Oshawa, said he found one of the injured women lying in a ditch filled with about a foot of water when he arrived on the scene, seconds after the accident. Ed Jones of Whitby administered first aid to the injured.

Vast South American Forests May Solve World's Serious Shortage Of Newsprint

But before that goal can be achieved, the continent's pulp and paper industry will have to undergo a $700,000,000 expansion program.

That's the gist of a report made public by the economic commission for Latin America which has completed an extensive survey of the region's pulp and paper resources.

"Latin America in general and most of the individual countries have sufficient fibrous resources not only to meet their domestic requirements but also to contribute, through exports, to the reduction of the world shortage of paper and raw materials for paper," the commission found.

PINE SUFFICIENT

The pine forests of Latin America alone are capable of meeting the entire needs of the region although they cover only five per cent of its total forest area, the survey says.

And besides the pine woods there are tropical and semi-tropical forests of hard woods, huge supplies of wheat straw and sugar cane bagasse—a waste product of the sugar cane mills. All of these can be used in making paper.

The commission agrees with other analysts who have warned that the world shortage of newsprint, paperboard and other pulp and paper products is becoming more serious all the time. It cites figures compiled by the United Nations food and agriculture organization pointing to a probable world demand of 49,000,000 tons of pulp by 1960—including the Latin-American countries. That would be an increase of 19,000,000 tons over current pulp consumption.

SEE 1960 SHORTAGE

Joint production of Canada, the United States and Europe will fall short of the 1960 demand, the commission believes. But, it says, Latin America could develop a surplus supply that would make up the difference.

At present the Latin-American paper industry comprises 190 mills, most of them in Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Mexico.

They produce 989,000 tons of paper and paperboard a year, including 48,000 tons of newsprint. This supplies only a small part of the area's present needs.

The commission report speaks of an expansion program that would include the building of more than 50 "large" pulp and paper mills during the next 12 years. Output of fibrous material would be increased to 8,500,000 tons annually. This would meet Latin America's anticipated requirements and leave a surplus of 1,500,000 million tons available for export.

This construction program would cost an estimated $700,000,000. But many other new facilities would be needed.

Latin America's electric power capacity would have to be increased by about 3,500,000 kilowatts. It would also be necessary, the survey points out, to ensure an abundant water supply for the industry and to build many miles of new highway and rail facilities.

These cover-ups are more than decorative. They have an extremely important function at the beach of hiding your skin from the sun before it's too late.

Experts say that even the best sunburn preventive creams and lotions mustn't be entirely relied on. It's up to the users of these creams to take their sun gradually, beginning with a few minutes at a time. The fairer you are, the more cautious you must be.

Your complexion, especially, may be ruined forever by continual incautious sunning, if you aren't naturally dark. On a fair girl, a tan may be actually only a few degrees removed from a burn. Conspicuous capillaries, freckles and white spots, coarse pores, crows-feet and deep lines and wrinkles may result over a number of summers.

So, tan if you can, but be very cautious for the sake of complexion beauty.

Britain And United States Headed For Showdown On Recognition Of China

By FRANCIS CARPENTER

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States and Britain are slowly but inevitably heading for a showdown on Red China.

This explosive question must be settled as soon as there is an armistice in Korea.

Britain is opposed to a complete embargo on Red China, such as Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.) and others in Washington have suggested. But Britain asserts it is loyally living up to a limited UN embargo on strategic materials.

CONDITION OF PEACE?

The United States is opposed to admitting Red China to the UN but Chester Bowles, former U.S. ambassador to India, said on his return home in mid - May he thought the U.S. would have to go along with pressure to seat Red China if such a move were made a condition of peace in Asia.

Former prime minister Clement Attlee who headed Britain's government when it recognized Mao Tze-Tung Jan. 6, 1950, touched off a trans-Atlantic furore with a demand in the House of Commons May 12 for Peiping to be given China's seat with the big five and that the British start "heart-to-heart" talks with the Americans immediately on how such matters as the UN representation, trade and related topics are to be handled after the armistice.

Prime Minister Churchill did not answer Attlee except to comment that Attlee did not mean admission while the actual fighting is going on.

Attlee answered: "No, soon after the armistice."

EISENHOWER'S ANSWER

President Eisenhower announced May 14 he would not say at that moment that admission of Peiping to the UN should follow an armistice.

The British have been ignored by the red Chinese since they recognized the Peiping regime. They have seen their investments confiscated by the Reds and so many restrictions slapped upon them that they finally closed shop and abandoned investments totalling $840,000,000.

March 17, Attlee inquired what the Churchill government was doing about the Red China. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden replied in the House that Britain will oppose UN membership in Peiping as long as the Chinese Reds are "in full aggression against the United Nations and shooting down our troops."

Forty countries — two-thirds of the UN membership of 60—must vote to accept the credentials of a Peiping delegation and reject those of Chiang Kai-shek's delegates before Peiping can legally enter the UN.

Only 17 of the UN members have recognized Red China.

WHAT IS RECOGNITION?

The trouble between Britain and the United States on the recognition question basically involves a differing conception of the meaning of recognition.

Britain explained that its recognition merely took a note of the reality that Communist China was the governing power in China, and that recognition certainly did not imply approval or disapproval of any regime.

The United States, in deciding not to recognize Peiping, based its position on the belief that recognition also means tacit approval.

Britain went along with the majority in the UN assembly in a historic vote Feb. 1, 1951, to describe Communist China an aggressor in Korea.

This was the first time the UN had called such a big power such a bad name.

ROOM WITH A VIEW — Under Los Angeles' starlit sky, Miss Doughty Anne Bond, 63, retires for the night across the street from her former home. She was evicted for non-payment of what she calls "robbery rent." Her troubles started last February when the frail little old lady tossed her landlord out as he allegedly "invaded" her house. Her rent was then increased from $45 to $75 a month.

TRAVEL: with Jean Stenton

Find Food No Problem Except In Visitor's Mind

Since my return to Peterborough the two things I have been asked most frequently are: "Didn't you have trouble with the food and wasn't it awfully hot?" The answer to both queries is NO.

For the average traveller there is no food problem in Mexico. Nine-tenths of it is a state of mind. But I have seen tourists come into a hotel dining room and hardly touch the attractively prepared food, thereby spoiling part of their visit and highly insulting their Mexican hosts. The only place you might encounter any difficulty would be from some market goods or food in some small village where cleanliness is not stressed as much.

First the water. Wherever there are hotels of any standing where tourists stay, water is purified by a special company and delivered daily to the hotel. Each room has a jug of fresh water and glasses which are perfectly safe to use. This water is used in the hotel dining rooms and in any restaurant or cafe of any reputable place.

Meat and everything else that is cooked is perfectly all right and in a good hotel salads and unpeeled fruits are thoroughly scrubbed. I saw tourists who just worried themselves into being sick with their fussing.

It is wise to do as Mexicans do. Eat your heavy meal around 2-4 p.m. and a light supper at night. Because of the altitude that aids digestion. I followed that rule and had no difficulty. The two or three people I talked to who had a little disturbance ate heavily at night which I believe was the cause of their trouble. Hotel kitchens that I inspected were as carefully scrubbed as an operating room.

As for heat—the temperature hit a high of 72-74, unusually warm for that time of year. Because of the mountains it never gets really hot except in the tropics. You can wander comfortably in the daytime without a coat after about 9:15 a.m., but early in the evening it becomes much cooler.

Many people are finding that summer is a good time to visit Mexico. That is the rainy season. But though it rains every day it doesn't rain all day. In Taxco for example, the sun shines brightly till 4 in the afternoon. Then it rains till about 4 o'clock in the morning. People can still enjoy their sightseeing; everything is pretty because it is green and they don't have the dust which they encounter in the winter season. The majority of states have their rainy season from June until the end of October. But in Patzcuaro it usually finishes in September.

Language is no barrier. In every hotel of any size all or most of the staff speak English. The waiters in the dining room can speak English too and the menus are printed in both Spanish and English. Only taxi drivers can't speak English and you have only to watch their metres in Mexico City.

Costs in Mexico City are the same as they would be in Toronto or Montreal. But the further you are from Mexico City the cheaper your holiday is. Most of the smaller places have meals included with your hotel rate and tipping, taxis, guides etc., have lower rates.

In concluding the series there is one thing I would like to mention to The Examiner readers. Some of you may recall the little Taxco school I wrote about, high on the mountain where 300 children are hoping for their new school. The rainy season will soon begin and I have been able to send a few donations which have been given me since my return for the fund. If anyone is interested in contributing something for these youngsters, I will be pleased to forward it in their name as a gesture of good will from Canadians to the citizens of Taxco.

Youngster, 4 Drowns Near Nassau

Falls Into Lock Unnoticed, Playing Near Edge

Stephen Thirnbeck, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thirnbeck, 638 Stormont St., drowned Monday night at Lock 22, Otonabee, just north of Nassau. He was playing along the canal and unnoticed, toppled or slipped into the lock, sinking out of sight. He was found about a half hour later, but it was too late to save the boy's life.

The blond-haired boy had been with his parents and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fisher of Detroit, Mich., and Douglas MacPhail, 140 Hunter St. East, on a picnic-fishing trip to the lock.

AFRAID OF WATER

Although he was afraid of water, Stephen, prior to his disappearance, was seen playing close to the lock which was full of water at the time, the water was about 23 feet deep. One eye-witness said the boy was sitting on the cement edge of the lock. About 6 p.m. he disappeared only to be found 35 minutes later in the water.

Mr. MacPhail, who had just walked north of the locks house to the car, returned to lock and asked, "Where's Stevie??" Then the search began around the water and through the bushes, his parents hoping that the four-year-old had wandered away.

MacPhail said, "He was gone. That was the first time he was missed. Why he was with us not more than 45 seconds before. We didn't hear a splash or anything."

JOINS SEARCH

Lockmaster Edward Parberry, was in the house nearby eating supper when he heard the boy's mother frantically calling for the lost boy.

With his wife, Evelyn, Mr. Parberry joined the search throughout the lock area.

"It was only a couple of minutes before that that they missed the lad," said Mr. Parberry. "Someone said he had been sitting on the edge of the cement, along the edge of the lock."

Mr. Parberry was the first to find traces of the boy.

WALL WET

"I noticed the wall near the south lock gate was wet," the lockmaster explained. "It looked as though the water had been splashed up on it."

Working as fast as he could, Mr. Parberry gradually opened the outlet valve, allowing the water inside the lock to flow out. He had to be careful that the child would not be sucked through and into the river.

Eventually after seemingly endless minutes, Mr. Parberry opened the lock gates. On a small log raft, he and Mr. MacPhail edged into the lock, found Stephen and pulled him out with a pike-pole.

"The boy was in the water about 35 minutes," said Mr. Parberry.

Battling To Peak

NEW DELHI (AP)—British Mount Everest climbers were presumed to be engaged today in a decisive battle for the final few hundred feet to plant the Union Jack atop the world's tallest peak. The Indian government's radio warned that they faced two snow-showers Wednesday if their assault does not succeed today. There still was no reliable word as to the progress of the climbers, who were last reported operating from an advance camp 2,000 feet below the 29,000-foot summit.

Ford Giving Union Best Pension Plan

DETROIT (AP)—The Ford Motor Company did General Motors one better in voluntarily revising its five-year contract with the United Auto Workers (CIO) early today by giving the union the best major pension plan in the industry —a maximum of $137.50 a month.

Before it did so, however, Ford demanded and was given assurance that the crippling strike of UAW workers at its Canton, O., forge plant would be halted immediately. That five-week-long tie-up has made idle 85,000 of Ford's 135,000 production workers and virtually shut down the vast Ford production system.

Ford and the UAW wound up two long days of secret, top-level negotiations by formally announcing the contract changes shortly after midnight. Ford president Henry Ford II and UAW and CIO president Walter P. Reuther led the talks.

The big boosts in pension payments—$12.50 to $35 a month—came as somewhat of a bombshell after General Motors, the industry's biggest producer and traditional labor pattern-setter, had signed a supplemental agreement with the UAW only Friday without any pension improvements.

COMPARATIVE PENSIONS

Contracts with GM, Chrysler and virtually all the other automative firms provide maximum pensions of $125 a month. Both this and the new $137.50 Ford figure include federal social security benefits. All apply at age 65 after 30 years of service. The $35 boost at Ford will apply to 20-year men who now will get $115 a month instead of $80.

The revised Ford contract also provides other benefits not found elsewhere in the industry:

One group of skilled workers—500 die sinkers and pattern makers—will get 20-cent-hourly wage boosts.

The 6,000 retired Ford workers will have the option of buying hospital-medical insurance at Ford's group rate.

Otherwise the new benefits in the Ford and GM contracts are identical:

GOES UP JUNE 1

Nineteen of the 24 cents net gain picked up under cost-of-living wage increases since the contracts were signed in 1950 will be put into base pay, to be untouched by any future price declines.

The so-called "annual improvement factor"—a guaranteed raise to cover improved production techniques—will go up from four to five cents an hour June 1.

About 21,000 skilled workers will get a 10-cent hourly pay increase.

Reuther said the union would insist that Chrysler meet the Ford benefits in negotiations opening this afternoon. He also said the UAW would go back to GM and try to "pick up the pension end of this package."

S. Koreans Denounce Truce Offer

Hint Tempting Bait To Red China; Rhee Not Consulted

SEOUL (AP)—Authoritative South Korean sources today revealed that the secret new Allied truce plan would give the United Nations general assembly the final say in determining the fate of war prisoners who refuse to return to their Red homelands.

The informants said the proposal handed the Communists Monday at Panmunjom was clearly unacceptable to South Korea. One government official called it "nothing but an Allied defeat by the Communists."

The proposal also incorporates some features of previous plans offered by both the Reds and Allies, said the sources, who would not allow use of their names.

NO COMMENT

The UN command — reported to have requested the news blackout on Monday's truce session—would not comment on the plan. It even refused to acknowledge the offer was made.

Some observers in Tokyo said the Allied proposal possibly is being used as tempting bait to Red China, which has long wanted to get into the United Nations.

By accepting the plan, they said, it would give Red China a toehold in the general assembly—through the back door.

The truce talks were recessed after Monday's session until June 1 —apparently at Allied request so Red negotiators can send the plan to Peiping, or even to Moscow.

REVERSES PROPOSAL

The South Korean sources said the new plan reverses the Allies' May 13 proposal under which 34,000 balky North Korean prisoners would be released as civilians immediately after an armistice.

The final disposition of these and 14,500 Chinese captives who refuse to return to Red rule is the last major roadblock to a truce in the nearly three-year-long Korean war.

The Republic of Korea sources said South Korean President Syngman Rhee—who insists his government will not accept any armistice that would leave Korea divided—was not consulted before the plan was drafted.

Hog Producers Order Virtual Strike In Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario hog producers have been asked to hold their hogs on the farms unless they get a minimum of 34 cents a pound from the packers. The move follows a packers' announcement that they have dropped their prices to 31 cents. Farm groups Monday night accused the packers of taking advantage of the situation created by the outbreak of hog cholera in parts of south-western Ontario.

A federal embargo bans the movement of hogs out of the province from 29 counties and, if hog producers refuse to ship them to packers in the province, it will amount to a virtual strike on the part of the 40,000 producers.

The Ontario Hog Producers' Association called on its members to insist on the higher prices or withhold their pigs.

SEEKS LEVEL PRICE

Charles McInnis of Iroquois, president of the producers' organization, is in Ottawa trying to obtain a level price for producers. Checking with the headquarters here of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, he was offered federation support in the move to hold back hogs from the market.

V. L. Milburn, secretary-manager of the federation, said:

"The packers are just taking advantage of the farmers, who are in a position that is no fault of their own. The unfortunate thing is that we are not able to ship to the United States. If we could move a few carload lots, it would be all that is needed to bring the packers to their senses."

FEAR COMPETITION

In Montreal Monday the price was 36 cents. Ontario producers expressed fear their pigs would be bought for 31 cents a pound in Ontario and then sold in carcass form in Quebec in competition with Quebec packers who were willing to pay 36 cents a pound.

Young Farmer Electrocuted Near Colborne

COBOURG—(ENS)—A young Colborne farmer, Edgar James Finley, 19, was electrocuted Monday evening by a wire that had been knocked free when his team ran into a hydro pole and cracked it a few minutes before.

Police pieced together this story from neighbors: Finley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Finley, R.R. 3, Colborne, was spraying apple trees in an orchard on his father's farm where he works.

He left his team for a few minutes with the gasoline motor-driven spraying machine still running on the wagon. He heard the horses start up and head for the barn. Near Highway 2 the wagon struck a hydro pole, cracking it and upsetting the spraying machine.

NEIGHBORS ARRIVE

W. Vandermeulen, a neighbor who lived a short distance west of the Finley farm arrived with another neighbor, James Knight. The three men unhitched the horses while Vandermeulen told his wife to stand back because the wires might have been broken when the pole was cracked.

Finley and Knight started to walk the horses back to the farm along in the north ditch. Knight said it didn't seem to be a very safe place to walk and he climbed up onto the shoulder of the highway.

Just at that point the wires apparently burned themselves clear of a tree in which they were caught and fell. They lashed across Finley's back and arms and electrocuted him.

Two hydro men, James Crossen and George Weller, sent out when the break was recorded at the Colborne hydro station arrived and applied artificial respiration. They were assisted by Dr. F. R. Pember of Colborne and Dr. John Fleming, coroner. But after an hour of trying, they gave up and Finley was pronounced dead.

OPP Constable Cy Meadows investigated.

Rain And Hail Batter Western Ontario

by THE CANADIAN PRESS

A severe electrical storm accompanied by hail stones and torrential rain swept over central and western Ontario Monday night, flooding basements and playing havoc with hydro services.

Hamilton residents reported flooded highways and basements in some of the newer sections of the city. City workmen were sent to clear blocked sewers in the east end and mountain sections. Some streets were impassable.

A record total of 3.18 inches fell in Hamilton during a 24-hour period.

At Strathroy, most of the main streets were reported flooded, up to two feet in some places. Hail stones more than half an inch were reported. Hydro service was knocked out for a short time in one section.

KNOCKED TO GROUND

A bolt of lightning knocked two men to the ground in London. Jack Goodham and Robert Millelhoft were working on a car in a garage when lightning struck. Both suffered burns but neither required hospital treatment.

The lightning was reported to have travelled from the house nearby, along an extension cord to the light in the garage by which the pair were working.

Hail stones the size of marbles covered the ground at Wingham. The hail storm lasted nearly five minutes and was preceded by thunder and a rumbling roar for several minutes. No damage was reported.

Atomic Cannon Reality After Tests In Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The atomic cannon is an established reality today in United States defence plants. Nuclear scientists have compressed the virtual equivalent of a standard A-bomb into a shell only 11 inches in diameter. These appear to be the principal results of Monday's successful first firing of a nuclear shell from the U.S. Army's 280-millimetre gun.

But scientists of the atomic energy commission are not relaxing. They are discussing plans for another undisclosed test within the next month at Nevada proving grounds.

There is hardly anything short of the hydrogen bomb, however, which could impress observers more than this historic cannon shot which whistled seven miles across Frenchman Flat and exploded with A-bomb brilliancy at 500-foot elevation.

SNAPPED OFF TREES

The blast snapped off 50-foot trees and flipped railroad boxcars and army tanks like toys, reports from viewers indicated. The full effects on various types of army construction, materiel and clothing will be the subject of study for weeks.

Spanish Envoy Reaches Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—Spain's first ambassador to Canada presented his letter of credence to the governor-general today.

Mariano de Yturralde y Orbegoso, a 49-year-old lawyer was presented to Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey by H. F. Feaver, protocol chief of the external affairs department.

Canada announced some months ago she has decided to exchange ambassadors with Spain but has made no move since to name the ambassador.

May Recognize Reds

EUGENE, Ore. (CP) —Canada will consider recognition of Red China if the Korean war is settled honorably, L.B. Pearson of Canada, president of the United Nations general assembly, said here Monday.

Three Lions, Elephant Surrender Meekly

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Police and circus staff today rounded up three circus lions and an elephant which had roamed Coff's Harbor, 400 miles north of Sydney, for 48 hours.

The only casualties were 32 farmyard fowls, which two of the lions shared as a breakfast snack. The beasts had just been fed before they were released from the mobile cage in a grade crossing collisions with a train.

The crash turned loose five lions and the elephant which pulled the cage. Two lions were re-captured almost at once.

Another two were netted on the sand dunes of the coast this morning, the third was driven against the sea and chose to walk into a cage rather than jump into the water.

The elephant was found wandering on the beach and surrendered without an argument.

Smiling Queen Appears To Enjoy 4th Rehearsal

LONDON (CP) — Smiling happily, the Queen went to Westminster Abbey today for a rehearsal of her crowning. She looked more at ease than the stage managers for Coronation only a week away.

Extra police were called to hold back the cheering crowd of 2,000 as they pressed forward to get a closer view of the royal party.

The Queen seemed to enjoy her own preview of what to expect June 2 and waved graciously, casting twinkling knowing glances at the Duke of Edinburgh, who rode with her.

Elizabeth looked dainty and cool despite the hot sun. She wore a trim dove-grey, white spotted taffeta two-piece suit with a full-flared skirt, elbow-length white gloves and a close-fitting white hat trimmed with white flowers.

The duke was in a navy blue lounge suit and carried a bowler hat.

They were met at the annex entrance to the abbey by the Duke of Norfolk, who is directing the Coronation.

For the Queen, who knows her role letter perfect already, it was her fourth rehearsal in the church and devoted to the climactic part of the ceremony, the crowning.

It was a private tryout. Doors of the abbey were closed to the public.

The Queen looked as fresh and as relaxed as ever leaving the abbey, smiling and waving to the by-standers who almost pressed against the windows of her car.

The crowd had grown to several thousand and mounted police were forced to clear the way. The car moved only at walking pace on the way back to Buckingham Palace.

Order Diplomat To Leave U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States ordered today the "immediate departure" of a Romanian diplomat. It said he tried to blackmail an American citizen into spying for the Communist Romanian government.

The state department said the diplomat, Christache Zambeti, legation first secretary, "attempted to subvert" V. C. Georgescu, a naturalized American citizen of Romanian descent, May 20 in New York.

"The price offered for this collaboration was to be the welfare of Mr. Georgescu's minor sons and their possible restoration to their parents," the department said.

Georgescu's sons, Constantin, 19, and Peter, 14, are in Romania and have been refused permission to join their parents in the United States.

Georgescu, who was former general manager of Romano Americano, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey in Romania, reported Zambeti's proposition to the federal bureau of investigation and the state department.

St. Laurent Arrives At London Station

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent of Canada arrived today from Southampton and was greeted at Euston station by Norman Robertson, Canadian high commissioner.

Mr. and Mrs. St. Laurent left for their hotel shortly after arriving on the boat train. A member of the prime minister's party said nothing official is planned today.

The prime minister will participate in a Westminster Abbey rehearsal Wednesday when many of the guests will be shown where they are to sit. His first official appearance will be at the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association luncheon Wednesday in Westminster Hall, at which the Queen will be principal guest.

Find 6% Drop In Immigrants

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's immigrant population dropped off six per cent during the 1941-51 period, the bureau of statistics reported today.

There were fewer persons of British and French origin in 1951, but an increase in German, Italian, Dutch, Polish and Ukrainian peoples. In 1941 the nine-province immigrant total was 2,175,000; in 1951 the 10-province total was 2,059,000. Total Canadian population rose 22 per cent during this decade.

Persons of British Isles origin accounted for more than half of all immigrants in Canada in 1951, but their proportion was down almost five per cent compared with 1941. Immigrants of British origin in 1951 totalled 1,077,300.

French origin group tumbled from second to seventh largest, accounting for 67,800 or 3.3 per cent of the total 1951 immigrant figure compared with six per cent in 1941.

UAW International Cracks Down On Local

DETROIT (AP)—Eight thousand Budd Co. workers were back on the job today in the aftermath of a crackdown by the United Auto Workers international (CIO).

As a result, Chrysler Corp. planned an early call-back of 44,000 men laid off because of a lack of equipment from Budd, a supplier. Virtually all Chrysler car production had been halted four days.

UAW president Walter Reuther ordered the strikers back to work and Local 306 was told that the international "will not tolerate such irresponsible action." The strike involved a jurisdictional dispute within the local.

Reuther said he would recommend that the local be placed under an administrator. This would take the local out of the hands of its officers.

Ottawa May Buy 5,000,000 Lbs. Cheese

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government may buy 5,000,000 pounds of cheese from Ontario producers to stabilize the market, it was learned today.

The cabinet, meeting later today, may take up the problem and make a final decision.

The plan is to offer Ontario producers 37 cents a pound for the [illegible] pounds they [illegible] last year's production. The federal government would hold the stocks, selling them later when the market appeared favorable for disposal of the supplies.

Reynaud Trying To Form Gov't

PARIS (CP)—Paul Reynaud, premier up to the fall of France in 1940, agreed today to try to form France's 19th post-war government.

The right-of-centre leader, still spry despite his 74 years, said he would go before the National Assembly Wednesday to ask for confirmation.

Parliamentary observers were cautious about predicting success for Reynaud's efforts. An independent, he is recognized as a financial expert, but his conservative approach to the problems may not find favor with the predominantly left-wing National Assembly.

President [illegible] opposed to the Gaullists and Socialists, who helped bring down the government of Rene Meyer last week, to "make possible the formation and action of tomorrow's government."

Don't Expect Further Actior

Discuss Rejection Of Austrian Talks

LONDON (CP)—Deputies of Britain, France and the United States met at the foreign office today to consider Russia's refusal of a Western offer to reopen four-power talks Wednesday on an Austrian independence treaty.

Reuters news agency said diplomatic quarters thought it unlikely that a further move would be made at present to resume negotiations on the treaty.

They said the question of tackling the problem is likely to come up next at the Big Three talks planned for Bermuda next month.

Some diplomats expressed belief that the Russians are convinced some sort of East-West parley eventually will be arranged and have decided to stall for still more time on Austria to see if the Western powers will come up with concessions for the Soviet Union.

INVITATION ACCEPTED

The British invitation to four-power talks was accepted last week by France and the United States but was rejected Monday by the Soviet government on the ground that it was unlikely to lead to a solution of the treaty deadlock. Russia suggested the matter be handled "in a diplomatic manner. . .by correspondence."

The treaty would end the four-power occupation and restore full independence to Austria. It is not called a peace treaty because Austria was not a sovereign belligerent in the last war.

Under agreements already reached, Russia on conclusion of the treaty would withdraw her "supply forces" from the satellite countries separating her from Soviet occupation troops in Austria. Most Western authorities consider this the chief reason for Russian reluctance to complete the treaty. The West also believes Russia wants to keep taking the "reparations," especially oil, which her troops draw from the Austrian economy.

12 Red Planes Shot Down In Busy Day

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

SEOUL (AP)—United States Sabre jets shot down 12 Communist MiGs and damaged another today, boosting their MiG kills this month to 51—12 less than the war's one-month record set last September.

Two sharpshooting pilots bagged two MiGs each in savage sky battles high over North Korea.

Maj. James Jabara of Wichita, Kas., the world's first jet ace now serving his second combat tour in Korea, got two and boosted his total kills to nine.

The war's one-day record is 13 kills, one probable and seven damaged July 4, 1952. Today's bag was the biggest since May 18 when 12 Red jets were destroyed.

Five MiGs were shot down this morning and seven this afternoon, the air force said.

DESTROY 90 TRUCKS

Night-flying B-26 bombers wiped out 90 Communist trucks, destroyed a locomotive, seven box-cars and a railroad bridge in pre-dawn strikes, the air force said.

B-29 superforts smashed a 130-acre troop and supply area north of Hamhung on Korea's east coast and bombed smaller supply dumps in the same area.

Ground fighting dwindled to patrol clashes.

The sky duels flared while Sabres were flying cover for 23 Sabre fighter - bombers which streaked deep into North Korea and blasted a troop concentration area on the west coast, 10 miles southeast of Namsi. The air force said 22 buildings were destroyed.

Other Sabre fighter - bombers slammed 1,000-pound bombs into Red anti-aircraft guns northeast of Kumsong, attacked rail lines and supply areas, the air force said.

Search Bush For Bank Bandit

PORTLAND (CP)—Police with searchlights Monday night searched the bush near this eastern Ontario village for an armed bandit who escaped Monday with about $5,000 from a bank branch here.

The bandit, wearing a mask, entered the bank two minutes before closing time.

He ordered two customers to lie on the floor and then shoved a paper shopping bag through the teller's window to John Coulter of Montreal, acting manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch.

Mr. Coulter said the bandit ordered him at gunpoint to fill the bag with money. He then walked out the door with the money-filled bag and disappeared on the street of this village about 60 miles southwest of Ottawa.

Hon. William Morton, minister of public works, won acclamation in rural Gladstone. Mr. Morton is en route to the Coronation as Manitoba's representative.

The other candidates will seek 55 of the 57 legislature seats. Nominations for the northern riding of Rupert's Land have been deferred until June 27 voting July 6.

At dissolution, the House standing was: Liberal Progressive 30, Coalition 5, Progressive Conservative 9, CCF 7, Independent 1, Labor Progressive 1, vanace four; Total 57. The five coalition members supported the government.

Wheat Producers Elect Milburn Secretary

TORONTO (CP)—The price of Ontario winter wheat is more likely to decline than advance, Cecil Belyear, economist of the Ontario federation of agriculture, told the Ontario Wheat Producers Association Monday.

The association elected Robert Heatherington of Milton as president. Other officers: First vice-president, Edgar Martin, Paincourt; second vice-president, E. F. Metcalfe, Lambton county; secretary-treasurer, V. S. Milburn, Toronto.

U.K. Troops Flatten Deserted Village

FAYID, Egypt (Reuters)—British troops today flattened an uninhabited Egyptian village adjoining a British water purifying plant 10 miles south of this Suez canal zone community.

The operation was designed to wipe out a position from which Egyptians could threaten the security of the plant.

It was the biggest such precautionary action taken in the canal zone for months. It followed an outbreak of anti-British incidents which have occurred since Egypt suspended discussions with the British over evacuation of the zone.

Ottawa Ready To Guarantee 30-Cent Price

FINCH, Ont. (CP)—The federal government is again prepared to guarantee Ontario producers 24 cents a pound for cheese, Transport Minister Chevrier said Monday night.

But he added that the federal guarantee should be accompanied by a further guarantee of six cents a pound by the Ontario government.

"We are prepared to guarantee the 24-cent price this year," Mr. Chevrier told a meeting of district farmers. "This should lead to a 30-cent price for cheese."

30-CENT SUPPORT

The federal government, under the co-operative marketing scheme, last year provided the 24-cent guarantee, to which the Ontario government added six cents, giving the producers a virtual 30-cent support price.

However, this year, the Ontario government was reported to have balked at renewing the six-cent guarantee. As a result producers have been selling cheese without government support.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, who accompanied Mr. Chevrier to the meeting, advised the producers to market their own cheese and promised federal support to these efforts.

$600,000 Damage Done To Farms

TORONTO (CP)—Acting Premier George Doucett announced Monday that tornado damage in the Western Ontario townships of East Nissouri and West Zorra amounted to approximately $600,000.

Mr. Doucett said agricultural representatives in the two townships, located about 20 miles northeast of London, report the chief losses are in farm buildings. Some livestock was killed. An Embro East district farmer reported losing three horses, five steers and a number of hogs.

The tornado last Thursday hit the townships after cutting a swath of destruction through Sarnia. The Kintore and Embro districts of the townships were badly damaged.

London residents are being asked to volunteer for work in the damaged areas of London township and East Nissouri township.

The volunteers will be asked to clear rubble away from fields within the next few days. Car and truck owners have also been called upon to assist.

Find Stock Market Weak In Afternoon

TORONTO (CP)—The stock market continued weak in early afternoon trading Tuesday. Industrials were the only group to gain.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 1,823,000 shares, highest since May 7. Interest in the low-priced mining issues was partly responsible.

Industrials added more than half a point on the exchange's index and traded firm. Golds traded lower as interest continued in junior issues. Base metals and western oils were also weak.

Quebec Nickel was strong in large turnover of 138,000 shares.

Albermont, Central-Leduc, National Petroleum and Vulcan led a parade of small losers in western oils. Gridoil picked up 60 cents.

Uraniums, led by Bonville and Gaitwin posted fair gains. New Brunswick base metals were also firm.

MORE ABOUT—Hog Producers

If producers refuse to ship within the province, it could mean a shortage of pork and resultant high prices to consumers, Mr. Gardiner said. There is not now enough pork on hand to supply domestic needs.

No hogs will be shipped today unless farmers get 34 cents a pound the association said.

WILL LOSE MONEY

OTTAWA (CP)—Hog producers cannot hold hogs off the market indefinitely without losing money, a federal agricultural official said today.

He was commenting on a Toronto report that Ontario hog producers were asked by their producers' organization to hold their hogs off the market in order to keep prices from dropping.

Normally, a hog is ready for market when it reaches between 200 and 220 pounds, the federal official said. After that it gets too heavy for normal marketing, and the producer must accept a discounted price. The reason is that the hog cuts are too large for the housewife's tastes. She prefers smaller cuts.

"A producers' strike in hogs is simply impossible," the official said.

Peterborough firemen, Bud Cruikshank, Ed Close, Fred Murphy and Cliff Perry, answered the call and worked on Stephen for approximately another 30 minutes. Dr. H. S. Dunham, 509 Homewood Ave., stood by, testing time after time for signs of life. Meanwhile OPP Constable George Louth sketched together details of the boy's disappearance.

Nesbitt's ambulance waited nearby ready to rush the child to hospital, but at 7:35 Dr. Dunham pronounced Stephen dead. Later Dr. Herbert Young, coroner, officially pronounced the boy dead and he was taken to the Nesbitt funeral home.

Stephen is survived by his father and mother, the former Barbara Westran, a two-year-old brother, Gregory, and a grandfather, Wilbert T. Westran.

The funeral service will be held Wednesday at the Nesbitt funeral home at 2p.m., the Rev. A. A. Mathews of George Street United Church officiating. Burial will be in Little Lake cemetery.

Unveiling Of Cornerstone At Centennial

STIRLING (ENS) — Some 300 people gathered on the lawn of St. Paul's United Church at noon on Sunday for the unveiling ceremony of the 1853 cornerstone by the Rev. G. Telford, MA, BD, DD, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference. This service marked the beginning of the Centennial Celebration which continues throughout the year.

A platform on the lawn was decorated with baskets of lilacs and a silk Union Jack covered the corner stone. The Hammond organ, belonging to Mrs. E. A. Baker, was placed at the church entrance and Mrs. Baker presided over the music.

A silver trowel was presented to Dr. Telford by Mrs. W. T. Elliott, a general Council Commissioner. In her short address she said she hoped this trowel could serve to remind Dr. Telford of his official visit to Stirling.

The corner stone unveiled by Dr. Telford is the original cornerstone of the first St. Pauls Church- then a Wesleyan Methodist Church. This stone was found by Rev. A. E. Baker in the church parsonage.

British Kill Mau Mau Leader

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—British-led security forces have killed a dreaded Mau Mau terrorist leader known as Brigadier Simba (The Lion).

He was shot down in a cave where he and members of his gang had fled with the head of a Somali native they cut off in a raid on a European-owned farm.

Two other Mau Mau raiders were killed in the same battle.

Ten additional killings were reported today.

The Kikuyu home guards clashed with another Mau Mau gang in the Fort Hall area, killing seven men and capturing 31.

The King's African Rifles killed two Mau Mau men and captured two others south of the Nyeri reserve. A Kikuyu was shot dead in the market area of Nairobi when he attempted to snatch a policeman's rifle.

No More Pay Raises For Civic Workers

KITCHENER (CP) —Kitchener council decided today it will not grant pay raises to civic workers this year above those provided for in the job evaluation.

Alderman Donald Weber, finance committee chairman, said the decision was unanimous.

At a meeting with council last week, union president Jack Rutherford said the union would ask the Ontario labor board to send a conciliator if council refused to allow raises above the job evaluation report.

The union, he said, had in mind the present basic wage of $1.15 an hour. The job evaluation report does not allow any increase in this rate, which means that about 50 non-skilled workers will receive no increment this year.

Some 2,500 troops came through manoeuvres without reported injury following the blast.

The blast's radio-active cloud, scooting northeast with a high wind, played hob with air traffic in parts of Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho for five hours.

PLANES GROUNDED

Pilots were asked to ground their planes or take routes to avoid the cloud area. The request was withdrawn shortly before 3 p. m. MST Monday when all areas were certified safe.

The nuclear shell, described as less than three-feet long and weighing about 1,000 pounds, caused no damage to the giant cannon, it was indicated. The projectile, which takes its place in the stockpile of atomic weapons, was termed "a concentrated capsule of what once filled an entire bomb bay."

Nor was Maj. - Gen. Choi Duk Shin, South Korean delegate to the truce talks, the sources said. Choi boycotted Monday's truce session—probably on orders from Rhee.

South Korea's cabinet met today, but government spokesman Dr. Karl Hong Kee said there was no discussion of an open break between South Korea and the United Nations over truce negotiations. He said the cabinet did not discuss any phase of the talks. The RoK informants said the new Allied plan:

1. Drops the Allied May 13 proposal that North Korean PoWs be freed in South Korea after an armistice.

2. Retains the Red-proposed five-country commission to take over the 48,500 reluctant prisoners after a truce.

3. Turns over to a post-war political conference all prisoners who still refuse to go back to communism. Finally the remaining PoWs in custody would be handed to the UN general assembly.

4. All decisions would be made by amjority vote.

Nova Scotia Goes To Polls

HALIFAX (CP)—Nova Scotia voters turned out in large numbers today under sunny skies to vote in the provincial general election. Party and polling officials agreed on the possibility of a record poll.

About 375,000 are eligible to vote, and the weatherman has forecast sunny weather over mainland Nova Scotia and cloudy on Cape Breton Island.

Voting is from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. ADT.

The three parties agree that the voters' decision rests on whether Premier Macdonald's government has done enough during its 20 years in power.

Fear Further Douk Violence

VICTORIA (CP)—The long-standing problem of how to deal with radical Doukhobors has cropped up again in British Columbia politics as new developments indicate further violence may be in the offing.

With a general provincial election only two weeks away, Premier Bennett started the ball rolling Monday with a charge that the Liberals have "sabotaged" the government's efforts at controlling the lawless Sons of Freedom sect.

The premier's remarks coincided with reports from the troubled West Kootenays, home of the province's 50,000 Doukhobors, that a fanatic fringe of the Sons has voted to throw out all the leaders of their sect.

The Freedomites, numbering about 2,000, are blamed for home-burnings and dynamitings that have terrorized the Kootenays off and on for 50 years.

A meeting of some 250 Sons at Krestova voted to throw out the 35-man executive committee of reformed Doukhobors which has looked after their affairs since their spiritual leader, Stefan Sorokin, left for South America in search of a new home for his people.

One non-Doukhobor source said the decision means the Freedomites "are back to mob rule similar to 1949 and 1950, when burnings and nude parades reached unprecedented heights."

One of the seven plaintiffs, five of whom were striking miners, testified he was arrested by provincial police and beaten in an effort to make him sign a statement implicating himself in a violent flare-up which had occurred a day previous.

Following this alleged beating the plaintiff, George Chamberland, said he required hospital treatment. He said some persons arrested by the police were in an almost unrecognizable condition following "questioning."

The cases are expected to last several weeks.

Two Men Guilty Of False Pretences

COBOURG (ENS) — Kenneth Clarke of Cobourg, former Warkworth resident, was found guilty Monday on a charge of obtaining $10 by false pretences from a local business man, W. E. Tucker. Mr. Tucker said that he cashed a cheque for Clarke on April 4 but that it "bounced." Carter promised to make it good but didn't and his wife sent down a note saying that the money had been drawn out of the bank and there was none to back the cheque. The accused testified that he gave his wife some money before the cheque was issued, to put in the bank but that she spent it on clothes. Clarke was remanded for sentence.

John Pratt, 72, railway pensioner of Cobourg, pleaded guilty to passing a bad cheque for $10. He told the court that he had been drinking and wanted to make restitution. He was remanded out of custody until called upon.

Removed Cloth On Last Day Plant Operated

COBOURG (ENS) — Stanley Bracci, 42; Fred Campbell, 29 and Edward Bell, 37, employees of Bradford Dyers, Cobourg, pleaded guilty in police court Monday to theft of suitings from the plant on May 14. Bracci was charged with stealing 63 yards, Campbell with theft of 45 yards and Bell with stealing 37 yards. They were remanded out of custody to appear next week for sentence. Defence counsel said that it was definitely a case for suspended sentence and Crown Attorney Harry Deyman observed that he was inclined to agree with the defence counsel, Harold Richardson.

Ross McArthur, plant superintendent, identified the cloth exhibited in court as having come from the dye works. He valued it at $2 a yard. To defence counsel, witness said that all three had been with the company for a considerable number of years and that there had been no trouble before with them. May 13 was the last official day for the plant's operation in Cobourg, as the future work was to be done at the Montreal plant. There had been a certain amount of drinking that day at the Cobourg plant. The company was anxious that leniency be shown to the men. The closing of the plant had mentally disturbed the men and the drinking had not helped matters, he said.

Chief H. Pearce said that he was advised of the theft on May 21 and it was obviously an inside job. On May 23 he learned that cloth was being sold around town at a dollar a yard. He arrested Campbell on May 24 at one a.m. and recovered 20 yards of the cloth but as Campbell had been drinking he had no recollection where the rest of it was. The arrest of the other two followed shortly afterward and all the cloth taken by them was recovered.

Stan Zealand, engineer at the dye works said that all three had been working there a long time and were good workers with no complaints prior to the present affair.

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman said that he was not concerned with making restitution to those who bought the cloth and had to give it up, but he felt that the company should be paid for the missing cloth. Mr. Richardson replied that restitution would be made.

Safety Contest For Young Drivers

We are impressed by the idea of the Safe-Driving Rodeo which was held in Toronto recently. Drivers under twenty-one were invited to compete in several tests of skill, driving over complicated zig-zag courses, driving through arrangements of barriers, and parking. Apparently it was a big success, plenty of skill was shown, and the contestants enjoyed it.

* * *

The reason we like the idea so much is not simply because it encourages good driving but because it encourages it among the very people who are most often accused of flouting the rules of speed and safety. Teen-agers are a much-abused class, and they are deeply impressionable. Tell them that they are a lot of dare-devils who care nothing for traffic rules and they will do everything in their power to justify that reputation: tell them, on the contrary, that they drive better than their elders, and give them a chance to prove it, and they will respond to the challenge.

* * *

Would it be a good plan to have such a Safe-Driving Rodeo as this at the next Peterborough Exhibition? We think that lots of young people would compete, and there is no reason why there should not be a class for drivers over twenty-one, as well. Rodeos of this sort for truck-drivers are no novelty, and the skill of some truck-drivers in managing their vehicles is well known. But such a contest for the drivers of ordinary passenger vehicles would, we feel, promote the kind of skilled driving and driving courtesy which would reduce the number of accidents on our streets and highways.

"Let Us Not Make Ourselves Too Odious"

The five hundredth anniversary of a famous date occurs next Friday. Five hundred years ago, on May 29th, 1453, Constantinople fell to the Turks. Historians long taught that this celebrated occasion marked the end of the old Roman Empire of the East, centre and home of orthodox Christianity and surviving classical culture; and that it severed the Middle East from the West and initiated the Renaissance in Europe proper. Thus, the Fall of Constantinople was the turning-point between the old world and the modern world.

This view has been subjected to modern scholarship and found faulty. Constantinople was not the great watershed of western history; the Renaissance was in full flood before 1453 in the city states of Italy; the Venetian and Genoese trade empires already in the fourteenth century were enriching with culture as well as goods the home capitals. After Constantinople fell there was no abrupt or complete severance of the links with the Ionian seas and Byzantine centres.

Yet the date remains important, for reasons which Professor Toynbee advances in his special anniversary article which the Examiner is proud to be able to present to its readers today on this page. The famed historian's view of civilization is as long as human society on this earth. He argues that Constantinople fell, and a division between eastern and western Europe was created, because of two reasons astonishingly applicable to today's cleavage between The West and the Communist East.

The Ottoman Turks were highly efficient as an administrative and military organization, and drew recruits from Western Christian prisoners of war as well as from the Ottoman Emperor's own Orthodox Christian subjects. Professor Toynbee reasons that Orthodox Christendom (centred in Constantinople) had for two centuries been doomed to lose its independence anyway—either to western Christendom centred on Rome or to the Ottoman Turkish Muslims. Constantinople "fell" because Orthodox Christendom was tottering in any case. Its adherents were ready and willing to fall to the Muslims: "Better the turban of the Prophet than the tiara of the Pope."

History's parallels are never exact, and fresh tangents suddenly cut across them, as Professor Toynbee's own monumental A Study of History shows. Yet history moves in waves never exactly the same but with similar undercurrents. "Perhaps for us today, the moral of the fall of Constantinople to the Turks, five hundred years ago, is 'Make peace with thine enemy whiles thou art in the way with him'." He says the lesson for us in the West today is the importance of not making ourselves too odious to the non-Western majority of mankind.

Can we learn from history?

New Head For The Film Board

The National Film Board is fortunate to secure the services of Dr. A. W. Trueman as its Commissioner; the University of New Brunswick will lose an able president. Yet we think that Dr. Trueman may do a greater public service in his new position. He brings to it great talents as an administrator, and the balance and perspective of a scholar. The Film Board is itself a great educational agency, and one of the principal means by which Canada is made known to other countries. It is important that a man of distinguished quality should be at its head, and we think that Dr. Trueman is an admirable choice.

We do not understand the necessity for moving the headquarters of the Film Board from Ottawa to Montreal, unless it is to get it from under the eye of Parliament. The Film Board has long been a thorn in the flesh to a number of parliamentarians, and undeniably it is open to attack if its methods of work, rather than its results, are considered. Movies are not made by conventional civil servants; they are made by men and women of strong individuality, who work in their own sweet way. A movie studio cannot be operated on the same principle as a business office, and its methods often appear wasteful and eccentric. Movies can only be judged as results, not as processes.

The results of the work of the National Film Board are highly creditable. They have won many awards and much favourable notice in many parts of the world where the business of producing documentary films is understood. The Film Board is one of our most effective agencies for spreading information about ourselves, of the most favourable kind, to all parts of the world. We are confident that under Dr. Trueman the present high standard will be maintained, and if we are not mistaken in him, new advances will be made in due time.

De Gaulle Tactics

Gaullism in France is not dead merely because General de Gaulle decided that his way to power is not along electoral and parliamentary paths. He has disbanded his party ("Rally of the French People") as a political entity, yet he and his supporters are still strong. It is not without significance that one of the candidates for the vacant Premiership whom President Auriol summoned was the chief of the de Gaulle forces in the French Chamber of Deputies, even though a third of the Gaullist deputies deserted last year to join governmental groups.

At the last general elections in France (June 1951) the Gaullist R.P.F. won four million votes and obtained more seats in the Chamber than any other single party. When de Gaulle disbanded the party as a parliamentary instrument he issued a pronouncement in which he pointed out in hard and bitter language the confusion into which the present regime has plunged France. He concluded that France cannot be restored to health by precarious coalition governments. He visualized a return to power either as a result of elections "in a profoundly different atmosphere" or an "upheaval of opinion", once France recognized the gravity of her condition. One hopes that in the present governmental crisis, de Gaulle's bet on disaster does not pay off. The regime which he has constantly wanted for France is so tinged with authoritarianism that the individual Frenchmen might well tremble for his freedom. Dilapidated as the present Fourth Republic's system may be, worse could supersede it.

The Pigs Have Cholera

Peterborough County, like all others west of it in southern Ontario, has been put under quarantine: that is, its hog population has. Cholera, the human scourge of the East, has struck the animal west. There is no danger to humans, however, since the virus which is affecting hogs in Ontario is not the same as bacillus which affects the ileum of the small intestine in humans. Hog cholera, the kind now worrying Ontario farmers and livestock authorities, cannot be communicated to other animals, not even to the human animal. It is infectious only among hogs.

The quarantine will not be especially hurtful. Pigs may be shipped into the area, but not sent out; and they may be transported freely within the quarantined counties. The cost of the infection will, we hope, not be heavy, for only a few cases have thus far been reported. However, any infected animal must be slaughtered and buried immediately the disease is noticed. No cases have been reported in this county or Victoria. The inclusion of Peterborough in the quarantined area is preventative and protective.

NOTES AND COMMENT

Ornithologists cannot determine why the whooping crane is not reproducing its kind, we read. Could it be that the philosophical bird simply doesn't give a whoop?

A statistician points out that every Canadian owns 45 acres of forest. Well, for that matter every Canadian owns one of the slaves in Ottawa, or a piece of one, but what good does it do him?

Diplomatic Commentary

Momentous Turn In British Policy

By SEBASTIAN HAFFNER

THE GREAT EVENT of the last turbulent week can be accurately summarized in two sentences:

1. Britain has resumed her full diplomatic independence in the conduct of world policy.
2. In so doing, she has restored a complete bipartisan and national unity on foreign policy unmatched since the summer of 1940.

It will naturally take the world some little time to adjust itself to the impact of this event, which completely changes the diplomatic world balance of forces.

It would be wrong to say that Britain has broken away from the American alliance. Britain's alliance with America (and with twelve other nations) is embodied in the North Atlantic Treaty, which has still to run for another sixteen years and which nobody in Britain dreams of denouncing.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE NORTH ATLANTIC, TREATY, however, which bears re-reading at this time, is a very exactly-worded diplomatic document. It lays down clearly-defined military obligations in the case of aggression against the contracting parties in Europe or North America. It further lays down, in more general terms, obligations for mutual aid in strengthening the contracting parties' defensive capacity to resist such aggression if it should occur. That is all. Beyond that, it does not stipulate any coordination in foreign policy or diplomacy, let alone an abstention from individual foreign political initatives where such coordination fails.

QUITE outside any written treaty of alliance, Britain had, for the last twelve years, pursued a policy of coordinating her major diplomacy —on a voluntary and informal basis— with America, or, in certain fields, with America and France, and of not undertaking major diplomatic initiatives and steps of her own except in concert with these two Powers. This coordination, and the attempt to pursue a "Western" rather than a British foreign policy, has been under stress for several years. It has been visibly breaking down since the accession of the Republican Administration in Washington four months ago.

In both its diplomatic foreign policy— its encouragement of General Chiang Kai-shek, its conduct of the Korean truce negotiations, its response to the Russian peace overtures—and its economic foreign policy, the new American Administration has been consistently practising "unilateralism," a practice which left Britain no choice except between something undistinguishable from satellite status and a resumption of her diplomatic freedom of action. The choice has now been made.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT HAS NOT BEEN made, of course, in a spirit of mere hurt pride. Britain might have been content to be patient longer if there had not arisen deep disagreements on major political questions with America, which could not be indefinitely shelved without pre-judging the issue. In the British opinion, there exists at this moment an opportuntly to move towards a liquidation of the so-called "cold war" and a peace settlement in Europe and Asia. Such opportunties, if disregarded, do not usually remain forever. Since agreement with America on the use to be made of the present opportunity for a truce or peace could not be reached, Britain has now struck out on a political line of her own in the attempt to bring about, first an easement of tension, and later, if possible, a general pacification of the world.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE CHIEF POINTS of British foreign policy which made a diplomatic separation from America inevitable, for the time being at least, are the following:

1. In the British opinion, the Communist eight-point plan for the disposal of prisoners-of-war provides an acceptable basis for an armistice in Korea.
2. In the British opinion, the general Far Eastern peace settlement must include recognition of the Communist Government of China by all Powers concerned in the negotiations, and its admission to China's seat in the United Nations.
3. In the British opinion, the declarations made by the new Russian Government provide sufficient ground for an attempt to be made to resume negotiations with Russia for a settlement of some or all of the outstanding questions.
4. In the British opinion, this attempt should initially take the form of private and informal high-level talks, carried out without publicity, and undertaken without too long delay.
5. In the British opinion, any European settlement to be aimed at must provide security for Russia as well as security from Russia.

Since agreement with America has not been reached on any of these points, Britain has now publicly formulated her policy by herself.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT IS NATURAL that this has produced something of a shock in America. There have been angry speeches in the Senate. There has been a more careful reaction from the White House. More important than this is the reaction of Russia, which is not yet known. For the Power that alone can torpedo a British policy of detente and pacification is not America; it is Russia.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT HAS BEEN quite inaccurately reported that Sir Winston Churchill (the British Premier) in his historic speech of May 11, called for a Big Three meeting. He did nothing of the kind. He suggested that the high-level meeting he proposed should be confined "to the smallest possible number of Powers and persons." The smallest possible number is two.

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE is very little reason to doubt that if Russia is ready to enter into "serious and businesslike discussions" about a settlement of outstanding issues with Britain, Britain is likewise ready to entertain such discussions. If a basis of agreement should some into sight during the proceedings, it would be necessary, of course, to widen the basis of negotiations and seek the agreement of other interested Powers, including America, but including also the Powers most closely concerned in Europe and Asia. Among the latter, at least, there exists a considerable measure of underlying agreement with the British position and a peace without victors and vanquished. It is perhaps not an exaggeration to say that Britain, with her new independent and bipartisan foreign policy, has seized the leadership of a political feeling which dominates the whole of non-Communist Europe and Asia, with the exception of the Governments of Mr. Syngman Rhee (South Korea), Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, (Formosa) and, possibly, General Franco, (Spain), and which seems, on the face of it, to be shared also by the new Government of Russia.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN the latter respect, it is true, Britain has taken what in American parlance would be called a calculated risk. It is still possible that Russia may rebuff the British offer to talk. In that case, the pessimistic school of thought in America will have been proved right and a new situation will have arisen, to which Britain will have to re-adjust herself in one way or another. On the other hand, it is also possible that Anglo-Russian talks may lead to an agreement to which Europe and Asia might be glad to accede. In that case, it is America who will have to do the adjusting. The next move, in the meantime, lies with the Government in Moscow.

Constantinople, May 29, 1453

By PROFESSOR ARNOLD TOYNBEE

(Ed. Note: Professor Toynbee is author of "A Study of History," Director of Studies in the Royal Institute of International Affairs since 1925 and Research Professor of International History in the University of London.)

THE capture of Constantinople by the Ottoman Turks on May 29, 1453, has often been taken as marking the end of the East Roman Empire and the beginning of the renaissance of the Ancient Greek language, literature and art in the West; but neither of these two traditional accounts of the significance of the fall of Constantinople in 1453 will bear examination.

For practical purposes the East Roman Empire had come to an end 250 years earlier. The true date of its overthrow is not 1453, when Constantinople fell to the Turks, but 1204, when the city was captured and sacked by Western Christian adventurers on the so-called "Fourth Crusade." The remnant of the East Roman Empire that lingered on after that great catastrophe in 1204 was only a shadow; and, though the Greeks managed to expel the Western usurpers from Constantinople in 1261 the liberated imperial city was encircled by the rising Ottoman Empire from 1361 onwards, when the Turks captured Adrianople.

As for the renaissance in the West, it was in full swing in Italy already in the fourteenth century and Italian scholars would have recovered a knowledge of Greek for the benefit of the Western world whatever had happened to Constantinople—whether the Turks had taken it in 1403 (as they would have but for the sudden intervention of Tamerlane), or whether it had held out till 1503, as it might have done. The Italians had direct links of their own with the modern Greek carriers of the relics of the ancient Greek culture. Venice and Genoa each had a colonial empire in Greek waters, and the Venetian empire lasted till 1669 in Crete, and till 1797 in the Ionian Islands.

EVEN, though, if the traditional reasons for treating May 29, 1453, as an important date are questionable, this is a date that we Westerners ought, nevertheless, to remember and take to heart on its five-hundredth anniversary. The lesson of it for us in the West to-day is the importance of not making ourselves too odious to the non-Western majority of mankind.

Why was it that, in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, the whole of Orthodox Christendom except Russia came to be united under the Muslim rule of the Ottoman Turks —a tiny community of "displaced persons," blown out of Central Asia by the eruption of the Mongols, who had happened to alight on the north-western edge of the Anatolian plateau? One cause of the Osmanlis' immense success was the efficiency of their administrative and military organization. The medieval Western world had nothing to compare with the Ottoman Emperor's slave-household, in which recruits drawn from Western Christian prisoners of war and deserters, as well as from the Ottoman Emperor's own Orthodox Christian subjects were trained for the public service by an intensive education that was the nearest thing in real life to what Plato had imagined in his "Republic." There was, however, a second reason for the astonishing ease and speed of the Ottoman-Turkish-Muslim conquest of the Orthodox Christian world; and this was the attitude of the Orthodox Christians.

SINCE the Western conquest of Constantinople in 1204, Orthodox Christendom had been doomed to lose its independence sooner or later, but the Orthodox Christians still had the power to choose between two alternative masters. Should they opt for subjection to the Western Christians or for subjection to the Ottoman Turkish Muslims? "Better the turban of the Prophet than the tiara of the Pope" was the answer given, on the eve of the fall of Constantinople to the Turks in 1453, by one of the grandees of the remnant of the East Roman Empire, and there can be no doubt that he was expressing the contemporary feelings of Orthodox Christendom as a whole.

After all, Western Christendom was demanding from the Orthodox Christians a recognition of the ecclesiastical supremacy of the Pope, whereas the Ottoman Imperial Government left its Orthodox Christian subjects their religious independence in consideration of the payment of a surtax in accordance with the prescriptions of the Qur'an. More than that, the Ottoman Emperor Mehmed the Conqueror invested the Oecumenical Patriarch of Constantinople, Gennadios, in 1453 with civil jurisdiction, not only over the Patriarch's own ecclesiastical flock, but also over all other Orthodox Christian subjects of the Ottoman Empire. The Patriarchate was given its own law-courts and its own revenues in the form of a surcharge on the taxes levied by the Ottoman Government from all its Orthodox Christian subjects. It is not surprising that, in the fifteenth century, Ottoman Muslim rule should have seemed less odious than Genoese or Venetian Western Christian rule to Orthodox Christian Greeks.

ORTHODOX Christendom's fifteenth-century choice of Ottoman in preference to Western domination exposed the West to the domination of being encircled by the Ottoman Empire after 1453, as Constantinople had been encircled by its since 1361. In the fifteenth century the West eluded this danger by conquering the ocean through the invention of a new type of ship that had no contemporary rival. Before the Turks had won seaboards on the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf by conquering Egypt and Iraq, the Portuguese in the sixteenth century in a competition for the control of Gujarat and of Abyssinia.

Thus, at the beginning of the Modern Age of the world's history, the West was able to offend Orthodox Christendom with impurity because it was able to compensate itself for the consequent Turkish Muslim conquest of the Levant by discovering a vast New World. But, today, 500 years later, we Westerners have no such easy way out for, in the post-Modern age in which we are now living, the world is full up. There are now no great open spaces waiting for us to occupy them in order to right the balance in our favour supposing the Arabs, say, were to follow the example of the Chinese in opting for association with the Russian Communist in preference to opting for us.

So perhaps, for us today, the moral of the fall of Constantinople to the Turks, 500 years ago, is "Make peace with thine enemy whiles thou art in the way with him."

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven .... Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

How think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which has gone astray? And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray. Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish. (Matt. 18-1-3, 10-14.)

John Diefenbaker, MP, will stand for the Progressive Conservative nomination in the federal riding of Prince Albert, following what The Canadian Press euphemistically calls "drastic alterations" in his former constituency of Lake Centre, Saskatchewan. Prince Albert is not unknown to the Conservative second-in-command. He was defeated there once. The late Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King represented it for 20 years until he was defeated by E. L. Bowerman of the CCF. Incidentally, the latter will again be among those seeking nomination. Prince Albert is by way of becoming an important and historically interesting riding.

U.S. Trade Policy

(New York Times)

The President has repeatedly indicated his understanding of a liberal trade policy. Only last week he went so far as to say that "the very security of our country is involved in trade," as indeed it is. But from the general impression one has of the sentiment in Congress, particularly in the House, a good deal more than benevolent expressions of hope will be needed to prevent the destruction of our reciprocal trade program. If a measure anything like the protectionist Simpson bill is passed no pious platitudes will undo the damage done to this country's standing in the community of the free world. If the broader interests of the nation and the world are to take precedence over the specific interests of single industries the United States really has no choice in this matter. The only practical alternative to subsidizing the rest of the free world is to encourage trade, and the best way to encourage trade is to keep our own barriers down.

"THERE MUST BE A THIRD WAY"

Visit By Her Uncle David Big Day Life Of Princess

A week from today Queen Elizabeth II will be crowned. Millions who glory in the grandeur of the first Elizabethan age, 400 years ago, see in the new Elizabeth a symbol of a better era. This story, second of a series of five on her life, tells of the turning point in the Royal Family that placed Elizabeth one step from the throne.

By JAMES F. KING

LONDON (AP)—Little Princess Elizabeth and her uncle David were pals.

It was an exciting event for Lilibet when the dashing Prince of Wales dropped around to her house in Piccadilly, as he frequently did in those carefree days.

Such visits were a welcome escape from the regime of her grandmother, Queen Mary, who believed Elizabeth's training should begin early even though the possibility she ever would be Queen seemed remote at the time.

Just before Elizabeth's 10th birthday came the first real turning point, both in her education and in the outlook of those guiding her.

King George V died.

The little princess broke into fits of weeping on encountering this first crisis of her life. Then other changes came fast—too fast for a little girl not yet 10 to understand.

The casual visits of uncle David, now King Edward VIII, became less and less frequent, and finally stopped altogether. There was a tenseness around Buckingham Palace which was noticeable even to a child.

Finally, Dec. 10, 1936, not quite a year after George V's death, she and her sister, Princess Margaret, were told they were moving from the Piccadilly house into the Palace.

"What, forever and ever?" exclaimed Lilibet in wonderment.

Edward had abdicated. His blue-eyed niece was now next in the direct line of succession, and destined to be England's fifth reigning Queen.

The princesses were given an explanation of how their uncle was going away for a long time, perhaps forever. Lilibet was not to see her uncle David until she was a poised, grown-up girl.

She has never lost her affection for him. The Duke of Windsor on his rare visits to England usually calls at Buckingham Palace. But the Duke will not be at the Coronation. It would be against constitutional usage for a former sovereign to attend.

Elizabeth was only 10 at the abdication.

Already the shadows of war were shortening. It was the year that Hitler reoccupied the Rhineland, Mussolini triumphantly annexed Ethiopia and the Spanish civil war dragged on.

The Coronation of Elizabeth's father as George VI saw her and her sister Margaret taking a full part in purple robes and coronets. Lilibet behaved with amazing dignity during the long ceremony in Westminster Abbey, and even took it upon herself to see that Margaret behaved too.

The education of Lilibet went on under private tutors with a new sense of direction now. Sir Henry Marten, vice-provost of Eton, the chief tutor, reported his royal protege was systematic rather than brilliant, but "considerate, responsive, ready to be interested or amused."

The war brought important changes in the life of the princess. She was 13 when the war broke out, old enough to get a lasting impression of the bombings and hurried scamperings to a bomb shelter.

Many British families sent their children to Canada or the United States to escape the blitz. There were suggestions the Royal Family do likewise. Their mother would not hear of it, explaining emphatically:

"They could not go without me, and I would not go without the King."

But the princesses were evacuated to Birkhall, near Balmoral Castle in Scotland, and then to Windsor Castle where the danger from bombs was not so great.

Elizabeth's growing responsibility was manifested before her 14th birthday in a broadcast to the children of the Dominions and the Empire:

"I can truthfully say to you that we children at home are full of cheerfulness and courage. We are trying to do all we can to help our sailors, soldiers and airmen and we are trying to bear our share of the danger and sadness of war.

Reaching 16, Lilibet registered for national service and was officially introduced to the armed forces with an honorary appointment as Colonel of the Grenadier Guards. For months she pestered her parents about joining the ATS.

There was here a spark of the first Queen Elizabeth who 2 centuries before rode bareheaded among her soldiers at Tilbury and rallied them to face the impending invasion by the Spanish armada with the cry: "I myself will take up arms. I myself will be your general."

King George and the cabinet felt that Lilibet's training for Queen should not be interrupted by such service and even issued an official announcement to that effect. But in the end the princess had her way.

The ATS transportation corps carries this entry: "No. 230873—second subaltern (lieutenant) Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor; age 18; eyes blue; hair, brown; height, 5 feet, 7 inches."

In the ATS Elizabeth underwent rough training in overalls, and learned to tear down and grease a motor and drive a truck.

One week there were spit-and-polish preparations for an inspection by distinguished visitors, who turned out to be the King and Queen.

"I have never seen a royal visit from the inside before," she told her parents. "I didn't know so much preparation went into it."

Perhaps Lilibet was thinking of another royal visit she made with her parents to the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth. There a young cadet had caught the eye of the 14-year-old princess. He corresponded with her through the war.

It was the beginning of a romance that blossomed into the marriage of the princess and the dashing naval officer, Prince Philip of Greece.

Carrying 41 passengers and 11 crew members, the DC-6B touched down at 11 p. m. after a 12-hour flight from Shemya Island at the end of the Aleutians.

The plane was in the air 37 hours on its flight from Oslo, Norway. It left Oslo at 10 a. m. Saturday and stopped in Anchorage, Alaska, overnight.

The polar route covered 6,683 miles, about 3,000 less than conventional routes.

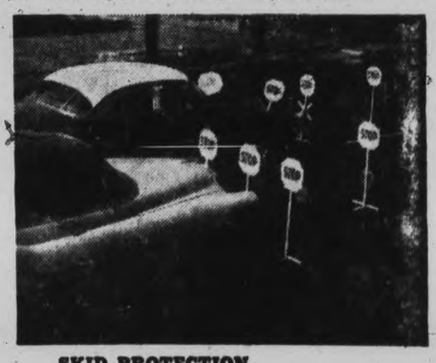
The B. F. Goodrich Life-Saver Tubeless Tire provides greater safety than any tire and tube, yet it costs less than the conventional safety tire-tube combination.



Automobile accidents caused by tire blowouts account for the loss of many lives, and an even greater number of serious injuries. Blowouts are caused when the inner tube explodes through weakened or broken tire cords. Because it has no inner tube, a B. F. Goodrich Life-Saver Tubeless Tire changes a sudden, dangerous blowout to a safe s-s-s-slowout — allowing you time to stop your car safely, with perfect control.

PUNCTURE PROTECTION
A gummy rubber compound under the tread immediately seals around puncturing objects, and permanently seals the hole when the object is removed. Inconvenience and delays are eliminated.

BLOWOUT PROTECTION
Instead of a tube, the Life-Saver has a patented inner lining that's part of the tire. In event of damage there's no sudden blowout, only a small break in the liner, a s-s-s-s-slowout that lets you stop safely.

SKID PROTECTION
The Life-Saver tread is cross-cut into thousands of tiny rubber grip-blocks, spaced 16 to the inch. At 30 miles per hour on wet roads, it stops you a car length quicker than regular tires . . . and gives you longer mileage too!

Cobourg dropped out so it looks like Port Hope, Lindsay, Bowmanville and the two Peterborough clubs, Quakers and Kawarthas, will round out the circuit. An attempt also is being made to form a junior tennis loop comprising teams from Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville and one other. Peterborough clubs might be wise in sponsoring a junior team from here for future senior material.

The Orchid Man has never performed here, though efforts have been made to have him wrestle at the Brock where the French Angel, Man Mountian Dean, the midgets and many other colorful chaps have entertained the fans. George drives an orchid-colored Cadillac, has 128 fancy dressing gowns (including a "coronation gown,") primps about in long powdered curls, has a ring valet, and earns close to $100,000 a year. Petes Play For Lindsay

A number of ex-senior Petes' baseballers are with Lindsay this year in the Lakeshore League. Joe Lowrey, Joe Stewart, Al Menzies, Bill Edgar and possibly Fred Garvey and Bill Huntley, are expected to play regularly with the Scugog squad. As well as Junior West and Doug Loucks, locals who played there last summer. This team tackles our junior Liflocs in Riverside tomorrow eve in a loop fixture, and it should be a right interesting diamond duel. Howie Dalton and Shockey Mein have a smart band of young hustlers in the Peterborough pack for their intermediate campaign. Lindsay hasn't done so well to date, while Liflocs have broken even in two starts. It might be a hot tussle.

Weekend standing of the senior OLA group had Petes, Toronto and St. Kitts tied for first spot with three wins and a loss each. Fergus was close behind with two victories and one reverse, while Hamilton, Brampton and Mimico had yet to win a game. St. Kitts scored most goals, 77, and the Petes of the top three had least scored against them, just 33, which shows the Moon is still shining high. We note a St. Catharines item where they are continuing to build and getting out injured players like Bill Nelson and Doug Favelle. Don Frick is in harness again and Emil Uhrynuk is ready for the gutted-stick wars once more. In fact, the A's have more players than they need at the moment and can't dress 'em all for games. A healthy sigh, and we still think they're one of the two teams the Petes have to beat to annex another OLA title.

Cash In On Early Lead

The stock car races at the Ex. cut in on the senior lacrosse crowd here last gloaming as the Petes pulled out a 16-10 OLA win o'er Fergus Thistles. That boosts the Thorpe team back ahead of Toronto Yorks in a tie for first slot with St. Catharines. An early lead did it for the local gutted-stick crew as Fergus came on to outscore the tiring Petes in the last quarter. Three gruelling games in four nights take a toll, but the winners had that extra punch to pile up the count earlier. Showed dandy passing plays but were off in their shooting. Thistles were without Kazarian, and they had several aces arrived late, but they finished strong. Ike Hildebrand starred again for Petes, with Harry Wipper, Bob Thorpe, Curly Mason, Dootch Vitarelli and Moon Wootton other stellar performers. Dobbie and Don Gear were tops for Fergus.

* * * * * *

Local lacrossers can take it easy for a few days now, next joust being here Friday 'gainst Brampton Excelsiors, with a trip to St. Catharines the next night. Coronation Day sees 'em off to Fergus, while St. Kitts show here a week from Friday. We're told by Petes' officials that Don Holden of Toronto West Yorks is financing Brampton up to $2,000 this season and taking the gate receipts meantime there. Seems to have a finger in the Mimico pie, also, whilst his Yorks play "home" games in Orillia. Has strings out for more players yet, including Denny Peterson and Nick Ferri. 'Tis reported he paid up to $700 to get Merv McKenzie's signature. We've no argument with him importing— as the Petes did that several years ago—but doesn't the Holden holdings indicate an OLA senior monopoly?

Petes Stay Atop OLA Group With 16-10 Win Over Fergus Hildebrand Pacing Attack

Piling up an early lead and then staving off a late drive by Fergus Thistles here last night, the tired Petes walked off the pitch at Miller Bowl hugging the hefty side of a 16-10 OLA senior score. It was their third stiff struggle in four nights and they were fading in the fourth frame when Thistles outscored them 5-2. But the Trallermen led 4-3 in the initial inning and had a clear-cut 5-0 margin next heat for a 9-3 halftime lead. They outscored their rivals 5-2 in the third. It was a fairly clean contest with the winners drawing six of the 10 minor penalties.

UP ON TOP

The victory kept the McGinness squad on top of the pile with St. Catharines, a step in front of Toronto Yorks who were idle last evening. While they looked sharp on passing plays most of the way, they missed a lot of shots on goal, and Moon Wootton had to be good in the late stages to keep Fergus trailing as they staged their belated drive. Thistles were minus Harry Kazarian, and several of their better players arrived late and failed to see early action. The Petes can now rest till Friday when Brampton comes here.

The game was slow in spots and played before a rather slim Monday night crowd, but it had some exciting flashes, too. Some of the locals' passing plays were brilliant efforts and at times they passed the Thistles dizzy, but frequently missed the open side of a net to end the play. Referees Lou Vipond and Mickey McDonald checked them up when they started roughing it in the second spasm and it was generally clean the rest of the route.

IKE BRILLIANT

Tricky Ike Hildebrand was in fine form again to pace the Petes' attack, scoring four goals and aiding on five more. He even changed hands on scoring shots to beat a check. Tall Harry Wipper was solid performer, also, to whip in three markers and assist on three more. Coach Bobby Thorpe stepped fast and banged in a brace of tallies as well as helping on a couple more. Other effective players were Dootch Vitarelli and Curly Mason with a goal and two assists each. Single counters went to Russ Slater, Roger Smith, Nip O'Hearn, Ross Powless and Jerry Fitzgerald. The Petes' checking generally was good. An assist each was garnered by Fitzgerald, O'Hearn, Powless, Bev Groves and Slater.

Don Gear shone for Fergus with three goals and three assists, while Bob Dobbie led the snipers with four markers. Ron Landoni, Bob Gear and Jack Matheson had a counter each, Don Campbell helping on two and Bill Killingbeck (Peterborough boy playing for Fergus) aided on one. Teamst

Prize Money Totals $18,000 In Two Golf Tournaments

By W. R. WHEATLEY

MONTREAL (CP)—Total guaranteed prize money of $18,000—all gravy and on a win-or-lose basis—will be handed out next week to 25 golfers competing in two international tournaments.

Expectations today were that nine countries will be represented in the inaugural of the Canada Cup invitation twosomes. These matches will be followed by the second annual test between seven-man teams representing the Professional Golfers' Associations of the United States and Canada, won last year by the American pros.

Expenses of all players are guaranteed. These expenses, plus prize money and cost of operating the tournaments, figure to put the combined golf shows in the $50,000 bracket or higher.

Both tournaments will be played over the Montreal Beaconsfield course and are sponsored by John Jay Hopkins, Canadian and American industrialist.

The Canada Cup invitation twosomes will be played June 2 and 3—18 holes of medal play daily. The winner will be the twosome with the lowest combined score for 72 holes.

PGA TEAM MATCHES

The PGA team matches will be played June 5, 6 and 7, with 18 holes each day. Six-man teams will be in actual competition but, under the regulations, alternates must be used. Four men will play 54 holes and three will play 36.

Scoring will be on the Nassau system—one point for each nine holes, one for each 18, a total of 18 a day at stake for the six matches and 54 for the entire tournament.

Prize money of $1,000 is guaranteed each player competing in both the twosomes and the PGA matches; $750 for each in the PGA play alone and $500 for each in playing in only the twosomes.

Present line-up for the Canada Cup matches is:

Argentina, Alberto de Vincenzo and Antonio Cerda; Australia, Peter Thomson and Ossie Pickworth; combination team of England-South Africa, Harry Weetman and Bobby Locke; United States, Julius Boros and Jim Turnesa; Mexico, Al Escalante and Juan Negri; France, to be named; Brazil, to be named; Germany, Georg Bessner and Hans Goertner; Canada, Bill Kerr, Montreal, and Stan Leonard, Vancouver.

WITH CANADIAN TEAM

Locke and Thomson will play with the Canadian team in the PGA matches, along with Kerr and Leonard and Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon, Canadian PGA champion; Jules Huot, Montreal, and Dick Borthwick, Hamilton.

In addition to Boros and Turnesa, U. S. open and U. S. PGA champions, respectively the American team will be made up of Jackie Burke, Jr., Ted Kroll, Doug Ford, Ed (Porky) Oliver and Tommy Bolt.

Bolt, the wild man who heaves and breaks clubs when his game goes wrong replaces Sammy Snead, who had to withdraw because of an injured hand. Oliver replaces Dr. Cary Middlecoff, who has conflicting exhibition-game commitments.

Storm Delays Golf Tourney

HOYLAKE, England (CP)—A cloudburst, with screaming winds and crackling flashes of lightning, struck the British amateur golf tournament Monday and caused a delay of two hours.

There were no major upsets but one rhubarb resulted from the storm.

The championship committee ruled that H. A. Haxton of Scotland had defaulted to Ernest Arend of Deal, N.J., one of the Americans in the tournament.

The pair had picked up on the second hole and Haxton went to his hotel for dry clothing. When he returned, he learned that play had been resumed and that the match had been awarded to Arend. He protested but the committee told him he had not been given permission to leave the course.

Prominent British players who advanced Monday included Joe Carr, the Irish member of the Walker Cup team, and Sir John Hartopp of Scotland, non-playing captain of the British Walker Cup team.

Bob Smith Discusses Offer From Argos

TORONTO (CP)—Bob Smith of Detroit Lions met with coach Frank Clair of Toronto Argonauts Monday to discuss the possibility of playing Canadian football this fall but reports after the meeting indicated that no deal had been reached.

Smith, an ace defensive halfback and punter with the Lions, 1952 champions of the National Football League, announced that he is going back to Detroit today, presumably to think over an Argonaut proposition.

Earlier, Clair, commenting on a Detroit report that the Toronto Big Four Football League club had offered Smith a $10,000 contract and an opportunity in television and radio, said:

"We haven't that kind of money and didn't offer him anything near $10,000."

LAWN BOWLING

The 1953 lawn bowling season got away to a good start on Monday evening; all rinks scheduled to play came out and, judging by the scores handed in, it would seem as if most of the bowlers are picking up from where they left off last fall. The schedule continues this evening in both sections.

Wednesday night and Friday night are off-nights for this week only.

Notices for out-of-town tournaments are beginning to appear on the notice board.

Just a couple of dates to keep in mind: Wednesday, June 10, ladies' rinks tournament (open); Wednesday, June 17, men's rinks (open), Stratton Trophy.

Nearula Recovering May Run June 6

LONDON (AP)—Nearula, betting favorite for the Epsom Derby until he went lame again, is doing well under treatment and may yet run in the June 6 classic, trainer Charles Elsey said today.

Elsey announced Monday that the Two Thousand Guineas winner was lame for the second time in a week. He said the colt was a doubtful Derby starter.

Bookmakers stand to win more than £250,000 if Nearula is scratched.

The colt was 2 to 1 Derby favorite after his Guineas win and was still favorite at 7 to 2 after his first lameness. Today one London bookie was offering 10 to 1 against him.

The new favorite is the Queen's Aureole, down to 3 to 1 in some handbooks.

Hockey Row Flares Once More In Quebec

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will not recognize the right of any team to take over the franchise of Quebec Citadelles in the Quebec Junior Hockey Association.

A new team was admitted to the QJHA May 18 to take the place of the Citadelles. The league announced that as far as it was concerned, the new club will have the right to all Citadelles players.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

The greatest horse-race in the world will be run next week. It is, of course, known and appreciated throughout the world as the ancestor of all Derbies everywhere. It is the English Derby, the 174th running of which will take place Wednesday at Epsom Downs race track, in Surrey County, England.

Crowds estimated in the hundreds of thousands have viewed this colourful race annually, and as many probably will witness the 1953 revival of this event, inaugurated in 1780.

The Derby, weak imitations of which are raced all over the world, was a famous race when Canada was a tiny colony, and the United States government was in its infancy. And American thoroughbred racing owes practically all that it is to British racing stock, of which two of the most famous winners of the Epsom Derby are now on breeding farms in this continent—Blenheim II and Mahmoud. Whirlaway, winner of the Kentucky Derby of 1941, was sired by the former.

As far back as the very first Derby, American eyes were cast on the winner, Diomed, and he was brought to a Virginia farm, proving a foundation sire of American breeding. Rock Sand, winner of the Derby of 1903, came to America and left his mark on the equine blood-lines of this continent.

Two world wars failed to halt the Derby. In World War I the ancient race was renewed at Newmarket as the New Derby Stakes and this process was repeated in the Second World War.

Contrary to prevailing belief, the English Derby contenders run as in America with their left sides to the rail, throughout the mile and 881 yards distance — and on the turf.

The Epsom course starts upgrade; then slopes the other way slightly and finally the field finishes on a gentle uphill grade. That takes real stamina, after a mile and one-half heart-breaker.

The race usually is open and three 100-to-1 shots have scored in the Epsom classic and plenty of other long shots, one at 1,000 to 15. On the other hand, in all the long history of the event only nine horses quoted at less than even money have won.

One winner was Iroquois, 2 to 1, the only American-bred and owned horse ever to win the British event. Iroquois was raced by Pierre Lorillard, onetime American tobacco magnate.

Probably everything that could happen on a race course has occurred during the life of the Epsom Derby, extending into three centuries.

But the last one you'd think likely to happen would be for a "ringer" to finish first!

In 1843, Running Rein, a four-year-old, was slipped in as a three-year-old and he finished first! The deceit was discovered, however, and the winner disqualified. Orlando, 20 to 1, was winner of the $21,750 purse.

Milwaukee Braves Take Twin Bill; Red Sox Trip Yanks

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

Night games turned into nightmares in the major leagues Monday night. It was one of the wildest programs since they first brought artificial daylight to the big time. Included in the action were: 1. A modern major lead record for consecutive strikeouts. 2. The longest nine-inning game in the history of baseball. 3. The season's high in hits for an American League team. 4. A run scored on a "three-base walk," plus a balk.

Also, one club using 23 players, equalling the American League record.

Max Surkont of Milwaukee Braves struck out seven Cincinnati batters in a row, waited 38 minutes for a rainstorm to subside, then fanned one more for the modern record. He won the game, the second half of a twilight-night doubleheader, 10-3, for his sixth in a row. He hasn't been beaten.

A Milwaukee crowd of 24,445 watched their new pets win both games. Rookie Don Liddle hurled a three-hitter to take the opener 5-1.

MARATHON GAME

The marathon game was at Yankee Stadium, where Boston Red Sox needed three hours and 52 minutes to whip New York at home for the first time since last August. The score was 14-10, and the Red Sox pounded six New York pitchers for 20 hits, high in the American League this season.

Down by as much as eight runs the Yankees rallied in the late innings and in the ninth Joe Collins went all the way around for free. He walked, advanced to second and third unmolested and scored on a balk by Ellis Kinder.

Maury McDermott, the starting Boston pitcher, turned slugger for a double and three singles in four times at bat. He wore himself out running and had to be replaced on the mound in the sixth.

The Yankee loss cut their first place margin to 2½ games over Chicago White Sox who edged St. Louis 7-5 although the Browns threw 23 men into the fray. This tied an American League record for men used.

SENATORS WIN

In the only other American League action Washington Senators scored five runs in the first inning and downed Philadelphia Athletics 6-1.

In the National League the twin Milwaukee triumph gave the Braves a full game lead over St. Louis Cardinals, who went on an 18-hit rampage against six Chicago pitchers in pounding out a 14-3 decision. This game and New York's 6-3 verdict over Pittsburgh were played in daylight. Brooklyn rallied to hand Philadelphia its fifth straight loss 11-9 at night after a delay of an hour and 21 minutes because of rain.

Stan Musial and Red Schoendienst starred in the Cardinal victory. Musial drove in six runs with a pair of homers, his third and fourth of the year, plus a single while Schoendienst got four hits.

Ralph Kiner hit his 300th major league home run at Pittsburgh. The blast produced all three of the Pirates' runs. Only 11 other players, headed by Babe Ruth, have hit that many homers.

Philadelphia skidded into fourth place by losing to Brooklyn. The Dodgers decided things in the eighth when Jackie Robinson homered with two on and Roy Campanella followed with his 14th circuit drive of the season.

Court To Decide Reserve Clause Legality

By HERB ALTSCHULL

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court decided Monday that it will look into the legality of baseball's long-disputed reserve clause. The future of professional sports rests on the outcome.

The nearing will be held some time in the fall. It will mark the first time since 1922 that the Supreme Court has examined the legality of the national sport. Baseball won the last time.

If it loses this case the game as it is played now will be destroyed. Here's why:

Baseball contracts—and those in other professional sports—contain a clause which puts the player under control of the club that owns him. This is the reserve clause.

Under it, a player may not quit his club and sign with another one willing to pay him more money. His services may be disposed of only by the club that owns him—either by trading, selling or releasing him.

BIG DIFFERENCE

If this clause is thrown out, a player would be permitted to sell his services to the highest bidder. He could resign from the club that owns him whenever he decided to make the move.

The challenge to the reserve clause comes under the country's anti-trust laws, which prohibit illegal monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade.

NOT BUSINESS

Baseball never has contended it is not a monopoly, but it argues it is a sport, not an interstate business and thus does not come under the anti-trust laws.

The present case involves two minor league players and a minor league club. They are George Toolson, a former player in the New York Yankees farm system; Walter Kowalski, property of Brooklyn Dodgers, and the El Paso (Tex.) team.

All contend that professional baseball violates the anti-trust laws.

Airmen Disappointed In New Officer

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (CP)—Sport-minded Canadian airmen stationed at this Allied base were elated when they heard Flt. Lt. P. O. (Lefty) MacDonell had been assigned here from Ottawa.

The Canadians trail nine American teams in a local softball league, and they know Lefty MacDonell as the sharpest pitcher in the RCAF.

The new officer turned out to be P. K. (Red) MacDonnell, Lefty's twin brother but hardly his match as a ball player.

"They're hiding their disappointment in me, though," says Red, "owing to my peculiar position."

Cubs Wallop Ottawa In 7-5 Upset

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The booming bat of second baseman Gene Hooks was too much for Ottawa Athletics Monday night and they lost a 7-5 International Baseball League decision to the tail-end Springfield Cubs.

Hooks' two-run double in the bottom of the eighth inning decided the contest and smashed a six-hit Ottawa winning streak. The A's are in fifth spot, 1½ games behind Montreal Royals and Toronto Maple Leafs.

Hooks put Springfield ahead in the third with a two-run triple. He also got a single.

LOSE 5-4 DECISION

The Leafs lost a 5-4 decision to the seventh-place Syracuse Chiefs in the only other game played. Montreal at Baltimore and Rochester at Buffalo were postponed because of wet grounds.

Syracuse committed four errors to Toronto's one, but outhit the Leafs 11-7.

The Chiefs' big inning was in the seventh, when they scored four runs. Art Hartley posted his second victory against one defeat, but he needed help from three reliefers in the eighth. Duke Markell kept the Leafs at bay in the ninth.

Plan 11 Bands Will Give Massed Coronation Concerts

OTTAWA (CP)—Eleven bands comprising 350 navy, army, air force and RCMP musicians will take part in massed concerts here June 1 and 2 celebrating Queen Elizabeth's Coronation.

Highland pipe bands, bugle, trumpet and military bands will be heard in front of the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill. First concert is set for Monday, June 1, between 8:30 and 10:30 p.m. and the following day between 8 and 9 p.m.

Conductor of the massed musicians will be the supervisor of music for the RCMP, inspector E. J. Lydall, 38, formerly of Edmonton and Vancouver.

FLARING TRUMPETS

Trumpet fanfares will start each program, and in addition a fanfare will be sounded the afternoon of June 2 during the official observances when the royal standard is raised on the Peace Tower.

Participating in the mammoth event will be the RCN band from HMCS Cornwallis, Halifax; Royal Canadian Corps of Signals military band, Kingston; 2nd Royal Canadian Signals regiment trumpet band, Toronto; Royal Canadian Regiment military band, Petawawa; Black Watch pipe band, Montreal; Argyll and Sutherland pipe band, Hamilton; Cameron Highlanders pipe band, Ottawa; 26 Central Ordnance Depot bugle band, Ottawa; RCAF central band, Ottawa; RCAF pipe band, Rockcliffe, and the RCMP band, Ottawa.

Program for June 1 follows:

Massed bands will play "O Canada" after a one-minute trumpet fanfare by a combined 15-man RCAF and RCCS group which will play facing south from atop the east section of the Parliament Buildings centre block. Then bands will play "Passing of the Regiments," followed by a trumpet band display by the 2nd Royal Canadian Signals. All bands then combine to play "Waltz Bal Masque" from Parisienne Sketches, and Vaughan Williams' "Folk Song Suite."

A bugle band display follows by the 26 Central Ordnance Depot group, then the bands again take over with the "Post Horn Galop" featuring soloists from the RCR and RCCS.

CARILLON MUSIC

Ten minutes of music by the Dominion carilloneur, Robert Donnell, breaks the program at this point, bands again picking up to play "March Imperial Echoes." Then comes a massed pipe band offering followed by military bands the march fantasia "Col. Bogey on Parade," and "Road to the Isles."

Program for June 2:

The trumpet fanfare is followed by massed bands playing "O Canada" and the "Knightsbridge March" from London Suite by Coates. RCCS then present a trumpet band display followed by all bands playing the "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel.

Bugle band of 26 C.O.D. plays before military bands offer "Marche Patriotique," "Canadienne-Francaise Carillon" and "Pomp and Circumstance No. 1" by Elgar. Again the pipe bands play, then massed pipe and military bands render "Road to the Isles." The military bands will play on a newly built stand in front of the Peace Tower.

The trumpets being used for the fanfare are believed to be the only two sets of fanfare trumpets in Canada.

Coronation Day Babies To Receive Spoons

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian babies born Coronation Day, June 2, will receive a personal souvenir from Governor-General Vincent Massey.

The souvenir will be a small silver spoon bearing an appropriate inscription.

An announcement from Government House Monday said this would be a personal gift from His Excellency "in commemoration of the Coronation of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth."

It will not be necessary to apply for the souvenir. Names and addresses will be obtained from the family allowance board records, and the spoons will go forward automatically in gift boxes.

Last Straw Department

DALLAS (AP)—After burglars had entered his "Busy Bee Cafe" 25 times in the last four years, G. H. Ford decided there was a good chance they'd come again. He rigged up his prize 12-gauge shotgun with a string from the trigger to a window. Monday police said Ford reported burglary No 26 had occurred. Loss: One shotgun.

Find Body In Lane

GODERICH (CP)—The body of J. E. Brown, 32, of Ashfield township, was discovered in a laneway near his home Monday. Authorities believe Brown took his own life sometime late Sunday or early Monday. Provincial police are investigating.

Jordan Roused By Speech Of Churchill

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters)—The Arab kingdom of Jordan turned sharply on a traditional friend Monday when its Parliament protested against the "anti-Arab" policies of Prime Minister Churchill.

A statement approved unanimously by the Parliament rapped Churchill for "praising" Israel in his foreign policy speech of May 11. It said the tone of his speech was anti-Arab, and went on to condemn the Churchill government for its "aggressive attitude to just Arab problems."

(The Churchill speech, in addition to assuring the Israeli of "fair play," said the supplies of British aircraft to Arab countries would not be allowed to place Israel "at an unfair disadvantage")

MEANT BRITAIN

In a speech at Monday's session, Prime Minister Fawzi Mulki said Jordan joins with the other countries in fighting for "freedom against colonization and foreign influence." He left no doubt he was referring to Britain in his remarks.

Mulki, who was Jordan's ambassador in London for two years before assuming the premiership May 5, called for Arab unity in opposing the "Zionist peril," and said the dispute with Israel is the joint concern of all the Arab countries.

He said no outside power could force a solution to the differences with Israel that failed to preserve Arab rights.

2 Boys' Horseplay Results In Burns

KITCHENER (CP)—It was just a little horseplay between two boys...

Douglas Brown and William Sherk were assisting neighbors in the cleanup of the Ayr district farm of D. H. Brown which was badly wrecked in last week's tornado. In a jovial mood, each grabbed the other's cap and set them afire with gasoline.

While jumping on the caps to extinguish a blaze their trousers caught fire. The boys rolled around on the ground but not before Sherk was burned to the hips and Brown to the knees.

Plan To Lay Keel For Largest Freighter

LORAIN, O. (AP)—The American Ship Building Co. yards here will start laying the keel next September for the biggest freighter ever built on the Great Lakes.

This was announced Monday by National Steel Corp. of Pittsburgh, Pa., which will own the new ship and plans to put it in service with its eight other vessels late next year. Cost of the ship is estimated at more than $7,000,000.

The ship, to be operated by M. A. Hanna Co. of Cleveland, will have the biggest capacity of any ship on the lakes, 23,200 tons at a summer load line of 25½ feet.

Her 710-foot length will make her 20 feet longer than the Ernest T. Weir, now the largest boat built on the lakes.

Less Pay, More Gain

TORONTO (CP)—City councillors today cut their salaries by one-third—to be better off financially.

They will receive the lopped-off third as an expense allowance which, under recent federal legislation, will be tax exempt.

Salaries of members of the board of control will be $5,500 plus $2,000 expense allowance. Aldermen will get $1,200 plus $600. The mayor's salary will be $6,500 in addition to the $5,500 plus $2,000 expenses he receives as a member of board of control.

Correct Way To Fly A Union Jack

Unbeknownst to the many thousands who will be flying Union Jacks come June 2 there are certain "do's" and "don't's" connected with displaying the emblem.

Of first importance is making sure the broad white stripe of the flag is uppermost next to the staff. Only in times of distress should the flag be flown upside down.

The Union Jack should be flown only on the land. If you plan to equip your summer boat with a flag, the Red Ensign should be used.

A flag should never be allowed to trail or fall on the ground or floor. It should not be used as a covering for anything on any object where something else may be placed on top. It should never be draped on a car, nor should any lettering be placed on the flag or staff.

ON THE LEFT

When there are two flagstaffs on a building, the Union Jack should be flown on the observers' left. When there are three staffs, the centre should be higher and support the Union Jack.

In any group of flags, the Union Jack should be in the centre, be displayed first, most prominent and taken down last. In no case shall another flag exceed it in size.

A flag to be displayed over a street may be suspended from a line running vertical to buildings. On a north-south street, the Union Jack should be to the east of any other flag which may be suspended on the same line and the broad white of the St. Andrew's cross to the north.

If the flag is suspended vertically across a hall, the top should be on the right of the audience facing it. It should be on the left if crossed with a second flag and its staff should be in front.

If hung horizontally, the top of a Union Jack should be on the observers' right.

Out Of Reach

LONDON (CP)—Sapphire mink, the newest thing in high-priced furs here, will be offered in bolero jackets costing about £2,700. Manufacturers figured there would be no market for a full-length coat costing around £10,000.

Jailed Four Months For Unprovoked Attack

GUELPH (CP)—For what magistrate F. G. Watt termed a "cowardly and unprovoked attack" on Arnold Deckert of Kitchener, one of the occupants of an automobile parked near the outskirts of the city early Saturday, James Giovanditto, 20, was sentenced Monday to four months in reformatory. The youth pleaded guilty to an assault charge.

Donald Campbell, 19, and Joseph Morrison, 19, who pleaded guilty to charges of causing a disturbance in connection with the same incident, were each fined $20 and costs. All three accused are from Guelph.

RCAF Pilot Breaks Sonic Sound Barrier

TORONTO (CP) — Sqdn. Ldr. Paul Hartman claims to be the first RCAF pilot to break the sound barrier in a Canadian-built CF-100 Avro jet fighter.

Avro test pilots have flown through the sonic barrier several times in the CF-100. However, Hartman is the first RCAF man to duplicate the feat.

Testing a mark IV model of the Avro machine Saturday, Hartman climbed to 45,000 feet over suburban Malton and nosed down in a dive reported officially to have passed the 700-mile-an-hour mark.

Trainer Drops Dead

TILLSONBURG (CP) — Lloyd Crossett, well-known Tillsonburg harness horse owner and trainer, dropped dead at the Yonkers Raceway in New York state Saturday night. He was acting as trainer for Garnet Rowntree of Toronto He owned and trained such well-known harness horses as Elastic Grattan, Bertha Abdell and Teddy Henley.

Portable Voting Booths

VICTORIA (CP)—Travelling polling booths will be used in British Columbia's hospitals on June 9, election day. The provincial cabinet has passed an order-in-council approving the new system. The new law permits deputy returning officers to circulate through hospital wards with a polling booth to enable bed-ridden patients to cast ballots.

U.S. Stores Make Good Profits On Coronation

NEW YORK (AP)—The British Coronation theme is thumping a merry tune on United States cash registers from coast to coast.

Nearly 400 stores, in some 270 cities, in every state, are participating in Coronation promotions—featuring British merchandise as a tie-in with the crowning of Queen Elizabeth June 2. And a number have already reported royal profits from the royal theme.

"It's the biggest campaign to sell British goods ever launched in America," said Duncan Mowat, chief executive of the British trade promotion centre in New York. "And we are confident that it will prove highly successful for both British manufacturers and American merchants."

The centre and the British Commonwealth Chamber of Commerce in the United States are sponsors of the promotion. Both are private business organizations. Mowat, a Scot, formerly served as joint general manager of the dollar export board in London.

EXPECTS BIG SALES

President Owen Letcher of the chamber said he expects a "great surge" of sales as a result of the promotion. "Purchases of British products by department and specialty stores throughout the country have been particularly heavy in recent months," he added.

Imports of British goods are currently running about 10 per cent ahead of last year, Mowat said. British exports of goods to the United States in the first four months of this year totalled $146,000,000, compared with $128,000,000 in the same period last year.

Fine Union Men $50 If Work June 2.

TORONTO (CP)—The Carpenters' Union (AFL-TLC) said Monday any member working Coronation Day will be fined $50.

This was announced after the 3,500 members decided not to work that day.

Alfred Ward, union business manager, said the Toronto builders exchange, representing most of the big contractors in the area, will be notified.

Norman Fraser, manager of the exchange, said that although he has not had any official notice, most of the major contractors planned to close down Coronation Day.

3 Toronto Youths Held For Robbery

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Three Toronto youths picked up by police Monday will be returned to Woodstock and Hamilton where they are wanted on three charges of robbery, police said.

At least one warrant has been issued for their arrest.

They are: William Seep, 22, John Martin, 24, William MacKeegan, 19, and Roger Roy, 22.

An unidentified 17-year-old girl was with them at the time of their arrest but police said she apparently was not involved in any of the charges.

Dr. A. E. Armstrong Appeals For Clothes For Koreans

"The Korean situation might be summed up as the greatest number of people in the smallest area suffering the most in all the world, even in history," the Rev. Dr. A. E. Armstrong said during an address at the Rotary luncheon meeting.

Dr. Armstrong, who is now in Toronto, was an interim preacher at Trinity United Church during December and January, and for 42 years was secretary of the Overseas Mission Board of first the Presbyterian Church and then the United Church. His speech Monday was an appeal for help for Korea.

"This conflict is not theirs, but ours," Dr. Armstrong continued. "We can do little now but send clothing to the refugees who have come by millions from North to South Korea."

The speaker estimated that there were now nearly 10 million refugees in South Korea. The majority of these refugees have only "cardboard hovels" for shelter.

HAVE TO REBUILD

"We can only send relief now, but when the war is over we will have to rebuild Korea."

As well as sending clothing to Korea, Dr. Armstrong asked for the shipping of Canada's wheat surplus to India and help for the illiteracy problem in all of Asia. In this way the Asiatic countries will adopt Democracy, not Communism, their greatest hope and help.

"It is the mission of the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States to spread democracy. Otherwise there is no hope of world peace."

Dr. Armstrong was introduced by Bob Allen and thanked by the Rev. Ivan Morgan, of Murray St. Baptist Church.

Miss Yung Chung Kim, of Korea, who is taking a post-graduate course at the University of Toronto, also spoke briefly at the luncheon. She congratulated the Rotarians on the "good work you are doing."

"I give the best greetings of the Korean people to you," she said.

Tornado Relief Fund Set Up For London

TORONTO (CP)—Crops and buildings on about 100 farms in the London area were flattened or damaged in Thursday's tornado, H. Robarts, London Red Cross president, said Monday, and loss is estimated at $1,500,000.

Mr. Robarts, speaking at the quarterly meeting of the Ontario division of the Red Cross, appealed for further relief for the farms. He said no rehabilitation aid is being sought from the Red Cross because he assumes this will be the responsibility of the provincial and federal governments.

He said a money grant will meet the emergency. He also asked that a member of the disaster services committee be sent to London to provide leadership and give advice at a series of farmers' meetings.

WILL ATTEND

Ontario president F. F. Hull said he will arrange for a member to attend the meetings. Concerning the grant, a report will be made on the situation.

C. B. Routley, Junior Red Cross committee chairman, reported there are 463,063 members of the junior Red Cross in Ontario, an increase of 52,688 members over a year ago.

Twenty-two firemen from the Peterborough district enrolled Monday in the five-day regional fire school being held in this city for the first time. It is being sponsored by the Ontario Fire Marshal's office. Volunteers and regular firemen were divided into three classes for lectures and practical training at the armouries and at the Fire Hall.

The syllabus calls for training in ladder raising, forcible entry, knots, operation of two-way radio, gas mask drill, care of hose, operation of inhalators and resuscitators, and use of fire extinguishers. The garage at the rear of the Fire Hall is being used as a smoke house so the trainees can test their efficiency while working in gas masks.

Drunk While On Crutches Say Police Just Out Of Hospital, Man Goes Hitch-Hiking

Sixty-two-year-old Charles Hughes of no fixed address hobbled into police court on a pair of crutches today to face a charge of being drunk.

When Magistrate W. R. Philp gave Hughes the alternative of paying a $10 fine and $2.50 costs or spending 10 days in jail, Hughes said he had no money and was expected back in hospital on Friday for further treatment of injuries he had suffered in an automobile accident.

"What were you doing in Peterborough?" His Worship asked.

"I hitch-hiked here," said Hughes, who appeared barely able to stand in the prisoner's box.

"What were you doing hitch-hiking in that condition?"

"They let me out of the hospital for a few days, Your Worship and now I'm anxious to get back."

"Have you any relatives or friends in Peterborough?"

"No, Sir."

"Well, what were you doing here?"

"Just passing through, Your Worship."

The magistrate adjourned the hearing until June 29.

Train Hits Car Level Crossing Family Escapes

LINDSAY (ENS)—A Hamilton man and his family had a miraculous escape from injury or death Monday when their car was struck by a CNR train at a crossing just west of Manila on Highway 7 and the occupants thrown clear as the car was completely wrecked.

Dr. Charles Morrow of 317 Dundurn St., Hamilton, was on his way with his wife Helen, and their two children, Brian, 8 months, and Ronald, four years, to Eagle Lake in Haliburton county. Crossing the level tracks just west of Manila, their car was struck by the train, bound for Sunderland. The vehicle was hurled into the ditch, clearing the track and all four occupants were thrown clear.

Dr. R. Stephenson of Sunderland answered the call for help and removed Mrs. Morrow and two boys to the Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay. Ronald, the older child, was released soon after being treated for cuts to his arms, while Mrs. Morrow who suffered a fractured knee cap and the younger child were detained overnight for observation. This morning their condition was reported to be "good".

Advise Accept Resignation R. MacPherson

The resignation of Ronald M. MacPherson, Sanitary Inspector was recommended to the council for acceptance by the board of works Monday night.

His request that his service with the city end on June 15, preceded by three weeks' holidays with pay, was referred to the Board of Health.

Mr. MacPherson's letter, which was received Monday by City Clerk Outram, was placed on the board of works file primarily because his appointment was embodied in a bylaw of the council, and was thereby its business. Another reason, Mr. Outram explained, was that an element of immediacy in Mr. MacPherson's engagement as Sanitary Inspector in Kingston, suggested the earliest opportunity to submit the resignation to the council in committee.

Appreciation of the support and co-operation he had received from the city council was expressed in Mr. MacPherson's letter, with the information that a more favorable position had been offered him. In Kingston he will be responsible to Dr. R. A. Kelly, M.O.H., formerly Medical Officer of Health in Peterborough.

APPRECIATION IN MOTION

A motion by Aldermen Burrows and Farquharson, accepting the resignation, expressed appreciation of his years of service to the city in its health department.

The request for three weeks holidays with pay, to which Mr. MacPherson would have been entitled by established schedule, injected several questions. One was the proportion of the vacation period to be allowed any civic employee resigning prior to the usual beginning of the holiday season. The other, raised by Ald. J. A. Dewart, was the position of the Department of Health and its possible embarrassment by the outgoing of the Sanitary Inspector without provision for his replacement on the staff.

The first matter pertained to policy. Ald. Farquharson presumed that the year affecting holidays extended from July to the following July. On that basis, an employee should be granted holidays with pay for 1-12th of his holiday time for each month he worked. That proposal was recommended for adoption in general practice.

Mr. MacPherson had asked that his engagement with the city terminate on June 15, and that he be relieved now of his duties in consideration of his holidays with pay he expected. In the immediate particular of the recommended policy, his holiday period would be 11-12th of three weeks.

However, the board did not proceed into any fractional extent of vacation in this case.

LEFT WITHOUT INSPECTOR

Ald. Dewart spoke of the city's Health Department being suddenly left without a Sanitary Inspector.

"We wouldn't do that as a council, and an employee has no right to do it," he said.

City Clerk Outram said that in his converation Monday, Mr. MacPherson said he had been

Fuel Yard Gets Permission To Erect Tanks

Permission to Jones Brothers—Bernard and William — to install oil storage tanks at their fuel yard on Ware St. was recommended to the council Monday night by the board of works. The only pertaining condition was that the tanks be placed under ground, and the brothers had previously told the council they would submerge the tanks if that was the official wish.

Moving that the request be granted, Ald. Norman Graham said that William Jones had been a prisoner of war and had invested his gratuity money in the local business, and personally he wasn't going to put anything in the young man's way to get along.

Ald. Gordon Farquharson seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

"The situation won't be any worse than it was," Ald. Syd Black commented.

PLANTED NEW HEDGE

The Jones fuel yard on Ware St. is alongside the C. N. R. tracks. Bernard Jones said, in reference to a recent petition from people in the neighbourhood, "you can't do very much to make a fuel yard look presentable."

He said the roof of the coal shed was falling in when "we moved in." "We planted a hedge across the front and have a new lawn. We are spending money on the place every year. The fence was fixed some time ago."

"We'll do our best to prevent any odor from oil," Mr. Jones said. "The pumps will be contained in a house. We have to go into oil because the fuel business has been changing so rapidly. So far we don't think we have lost any goodwill down there by going into oil, because neighbors along the street have been sending in their fuel fill-up orders."

The business had been there 20 years, Mr. Jones said, and quite a number of the residents had built knowing there was a fuel yard nearby.

William Jones told the committee some of the people who signed the opposition petition lived on Princess St., others on Crescent St." and altogether away from the yard. Others had heard their insurance rates would go up if oil tanks were installed. "And, that certainly was not true."

Ex-Governor Father Installs J. Brown Lions President

Lions Club history in Canada was made Monday night when a president was installed by his father who had passed through the degrees of Lionism to become an international counsellor. Joseph Brown is the 1953-54 president of the Peterborough Lions Club and, along with a slate of 11 other officers, he was formally inducted by his father, Dr. Al. Brown of Renfrew, international counsellor and past district governor. The ceremony was at the regular meeting of the Lions in the Kawartha Club.

Mr. Brown, Jr., was 1st vice president of the Peterborough club last year and altogether he has been a Lion for five years.

His father, Dr. Brown, has been a Lion for 12 years. In that time he has been president of the Renfrew club, deputy district governor in 1949-50, and district governor in 1951-52. Dr. Brown's record includes 11 years of perfect attendance at meetings.

NEW OFFICERS

Following is the complete 1953-54 slate of officers: Joseph Brown, president; Gordon Powell, 1st vice-pres.; Walter Mortlock, 2nd vice-pres.; Lynn Morrison, 3rd vice-pres.; Ron MacGee (beginning his 7th successive year,) secretary; Harvey Weidner, treasurer; Clarence Harloff, George Hutchinson, Carmen Foster and Harold Freeman—all directors; Jack Smythe, lion tamer, and George Murray tail twister.

Another father-son combination made history at the Monday night meeting. Robert F. Murray has been accepted as a member of the Peterborough club. His father, Floyd Murray, has been a Lion for eight years and the two of them made the first father-son combination in the Peterborough Lions Club.

Highlight of the evening was when Dr. Brown, who had been through all Lion Club offices up to international counsellor, inducted the 12 new officers— last of all handing over the gavel to his son.

Jeep Overturns Two Injured

Two Havelock men were thrown from a jeep and injured Monday night after it ran off the road, crashed into a cedar tree and turned over.

In Civic Hospital are:

Both men are being treated by Dr. Russell Magee.

Watson and MacMillan and three others were riding north in the jeep along the Cordova Road, late Thursday night, and when four miles north of Havelock the steering rod broke. The vehicle bumped along the south side of the road for 85 feet and crashed into a cedar tree. The impact caused it to be turned on its left side and the five occupants were thrown out.

Watson and MacMillan were taken to Peterborough by ambulance. The other occupants, though shaken up, did not require medical attention.

OPP Constable Archie Eady of Campbelofrd investigated.

One Turning, Cars Hit

An estimated total of $175 damage resulted when two cars collided at Charlotte St. and Monaghan Ed. shortly after 1:00 a.m. today. Damage to the left front of a car driven by W. W. Gregg was estimated at $100 and to the right front of one driven by Norman Beggs, RR 1, Campbellford, $75.

Hog Price Settles At $34 In Toronto

After the flurry of headlines this morning purporting the possibility of a "hog producers' strike," the market in Toronto settled down at $34 a cwt. for top grade offerings.

The marketing agency of the producer association in the province alleged that packers were trying to restrict the price to $31. The advice they sent out to farmers was to keep their pigs in the home pens unless the price was $34.

The hog market has been upset by the cholera outbreak and resulting quarantine in 29 counties of western Ontario which includes Peterborough, Northumberland and Victoria.

Scarcity of pigs in Montreal boosted the price there to $36 as the week opened. Top quotations in Toronto last week reached $34, and that was the price established this morning. General opinion is that the market will likely be steady into summer, but it may be there is some packer apprehension of being caught with pork bought at the high prices.

To Plant 6,500 Trees On Coronation Day

At a well-attended meeting of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association on Monday evening plans were made for the planting of 6,500 seedling trees on Coronation Day. The planting area is to be at Max Archer's farm, five miles north of the city on the Lindsay Highway at 9.30 a.m.

Ninety-three new members swelled the attendance at the meeting and spinning rod outfits were won by lucky-draw newcomer Ed Cross and his brother (sponsor) Joseph.

All members who are interested in taking part in the tree-planting ceremony are requested to get in touch with president Hugh Ploughman in order to secure some of the seedling trees that are now available.

Court Case Dispute Over Lumber

Lumberman, Company Disagree About 14,000 Board Feet

What happened to 14,000 board feet of lumber that John Payne of Warsaw claims was trucked to the Moldaver Bros. lumber yard?

That mystery is the crux of a civil action being heard today in county court before Judge John de N. Kennedy.

Payne is suing the Moldaver Bros. Lumber Co. for $2,833—$1,885 of it constituting a final payment that he wouldn't accept from Samuel Moldaver, and the balance being the selling price of the lumber which he says he delivered.

COUNTER CLAIM

Moldaver Bros. say that 76,000 not 90,000 board feet of lumber was trucked into their yard between June 9 and July 3, 1952. They paid Payne— whom they claim didn't live up to his contract so far as grading to species and widths is concerned— a total of $3,550. As final payment, for the remainder of the lumber, they offered $1,885.

Payne refused to accept the cheque saying it wasn't enough. He wanted payment for the extra 14,000 board feet. When he didn't get it he began the civil action.

In the witness box today Payne said that Moldaver Bros. received 11,180 board feet of his lumber that was milled at the Charles Wood sawmill. And 36 truckloads of lumber were brought from a cutting operation near Roseneath where the logs were milled by John Thompson who has a portable sawmill. He estimated that the 36 truckloads averaged 2,500 board feet a load.

The case is continuing.

STEAM STARTS ALARM

Hot steam from a laundering unit in the Anson House basement is believed to have raised the temperature sufficiently to set off an automatic fire alarm at 11.44 a.m. today. The alarm rang in the Fire Hall and all trucks were immediately dispatched. Investigation proved it was a false alarm.

Violence Breaks Out On U.S. Labor Front

NEW YORK (AP)—Violence broke out Monday on the United States labor scene, where strikes have made more than 100,000 workers idle.

Three pickets and a sheriff's deputy were injured at Syracuse, N.Y., when white collar workers passed through picket lines at two strikebound General Electric Company plants. Four members of the International Union of Electrical Workers (CIO) were held for questioning.

GE, which had invited its 4,000 salaried employees to return, said 670 white collar workers passed through lines of 500 to 1,000 pickets. There were reports that pickets turned back hundreds of others.

Some 7,000 GE production workers represented by IUE struck seven weeks ago over local grievances.

The first break in a series of supplier strikes that have crippled a large segment of the auto industry came Sunday when a United Auto Workers (CIO) local in Detroit ended a walkout at the Budd Co., caused by a jurisdictional dispute between its units.

The end of the walkout, called off on orders from the UAW international, is expected to permit some 44,000 Chrysler workers to return to their jobs in a day or two.

However, a strike at the Ford Motor Company's forging plant in Canton, O., has kept 85,000 workers in the Ford system idle Another strike in the Warner Gear Co. in Muncie, Ind., has affected auto production at Studebaker, Willys, Nash and some General Motors plants

The St. Louis building industry, nearly paralyzed by a truck drivers strike, suffered a new blow today when about 500 AFL ironworkers went out, demanding a 25-cent hourly pay boost.

Grafton Company Marks Century Of Merchandising

Celebrating its 100th anniversary is the Grafton Company Ltd., one of Ontario's leading chain organizations. Founded in Dundas as a country store, it has grown into a vast business with many branches and its own manufacturing plant.

Grafton's second branch was opened in 1892, three years after the first branch in Owen Sound. Now, 100 years after the first store was founded, there are nine across Ontario to serve the public.

W. E. Conroy assumed management of the local branch in 1893 and remained in that position until 1925 when he died suddenly. Then Chris Hughes, who joined the firm in 1903 became manager of the Peterborough branch and retains that office to this day.

Although the House of Grafton is now well known across Ontario, its beginnings were modest. James B. Grafton began business in Dundas on May 3, 1853. In those days Dundas was a small country town which had already established itself as a textile and milling centre dependent for power on water wheels.

WORKED IN COBOURG

James Grafton, coming from pioneer stock, attended the Upper Academy at Cobourg, a school which was afterwards renamed Victoria College and then affiliated with the University of Toronto. Upon leaving school at 17, James was apprenticed to a Toronto drygoods store and later worked in Cobourg dry goods for two years After three more years experience in Hamilton, he left there for Dundas and established his own business.

For about five years he was in partnership with Anthony Gregson, trading as Gregson and Grafton. When his partner retired from business, Grafton took in his brother, J. S. Grafton and together they bought out the Gregson interests. An oil print of their store at that time shows a three storey building with large double windows.

STEADY PROGRESS

The business progressed steadily. In the early 60's, the brothers first entered the manufacturing field and operated with a third man, a woollen mill at Ancaster, while opening a factory at Brantford. A fire there in 1869 resulted in damage of $50,000.

J. B. Grafton had a motto: Uprightness and Honesty. He made it the principle of his business from the beginning and by precept and examples communicated it to his employees. He knew that these personal principles of moral conduct were the foundation of good business and high reputation and a century after he introduced them into his own business, the firm he founded still proudly remembers and observes them.

On February 1, 1884, James J. Grafton, son of J. B. Grafton, entered the firm. He had begun work in the store as a boy and when he entered the firm as a partner, its title was changed to Grafton and Company.

A branch was opened in Owen Sound in 1889, and then one here in 1892 Hamilton in 1895, London in 1896, Brantford, 1899 and Woodstock in 1905 followed. In later years, other branches were added: Kitchener in 1948 and Stratford in 1951

FOUNDER DIED IN 1909

The founder of the firm died in 1909 and was succeeded in the presidency by his son, James J. Grafton

The well-known trade mark, "High-Grade," with its Union Jack, Red Ensign and crown, was adopted in 1900 An incorporated company with the name Grafton and Company, Ltd , was formed in 1904

In 1939, Col. J. J. Grafton died and his wife then became the third president. She sold her interests in 1946 to Stewart Philp and Grafton Philp, brothers with a family background in store management.

A century covers a large part of Ontario history and the Grafton Company has played a leading part in the mercantile life of that period. From the modest beginnings of the founders a great business has grown testifying to the firmness of its foundations and its unbroken record of public services for 100 years.

Joliffe Urges Rewriting Municipal Laws

TORONTO (CP)—E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario CCF leader, Monday night urged the rewriting of all the province's municipal legislation.

Speaking over a CBC Ontario network in a series of free-time political broadcasts, he said local government in Ontario is breaking down. He said it has neither the money nor the power to cope with the burdens thrust upon it by the growth and industrialization of Ontario.

"This problem is tremendous and it's getting more serious every day. . .

MUST BE REWRITTEN

"It will be solved only when all our municipal legislation is rewritten and brought into line with present-day realities and when the work to be done and the moneys to be raised are divided fairly between Queen's Park and local government."

Mr. Jolliffe also said the provincial government has not provided enough technical assistance to agriculture to lower the unit costs of production.

Violated Act Man 61, Jailed

SIMCOE (CP)—Lloyd E. McDonald, 61, of Windsor was sentenced Monday to four months definite and three months indefinite on 12 counts involving violations of the Ontario Securities Act. The sentences will run concurrently in addition to a $1,000 fine and costs in default of an additional three-month term.

Evidence showed that McDonald sold securities in December of 1950 and January of 1951 while not registered with the Ontario securities commission. He was also charged with selling stock of the Kersley Oil and Gas Company of British Columbia under the name of Andrew Herlet. The amount involved was $50,000.

GRAFTON'S PETERBOROUGH STORE THIS YEAR CELEBRATES 61 YEARS SERVING RESIDENTS OF THIS DISTRICT WITH THE FINEST IN MEN'S AND BOYS', AND KIDDIES WEAR

Founded by pioneer Canadian stock in 1853, we today proudly mark the completion of a full century of service to four generations of Canadians, with the unique record —not granted to many business firms in Canada—of being under the direction of but one family during the whole of our hundred years.
Confederation was still fourteen years in the future when Mr. James Beatty Grafton, in 1853, opened his store in Dundas—the village in which Mr. Mackenzie King's grandfather was also in business. Gentlemen then wore tall beaver hats, while their ladies wore bonnets and crinolines, shopped for cassimeres, and paid their bills in pounds, shillings and pence. And, even in those early days, Mr. Grafton laid down a policy which has been faithfully carried on ever since—that of honorable and fair dealing to all.
From modest beginnings Grafton's have grown to ten modern stores in nine Ontario cities, besides their modern warehouse and factory in Dundas; supplying Men's clothing direct from maker to wearer, Men's furnishings, Boys' clothing and furnishings, as well as Dry Goods. For this long period of growth with Canada we are both proud and grateful, and now look forward to our second century of progress and service.

Greatest Gasoline Development in 31 Years!

TCP* Shell-discovered additive, now blended into Shell Premium Gasoline puts an end to the greatest cause of power loss. Actually boosts power up to 15%, spark plug life up to 150% by counteracting the deposit on spark plugs and in combustion chambers.

Though you may not realize it, the chances are that your engine is delivering far less than its original horsepower.

This is because, in the average engine, deposits constantly "build up" on spark plugs and in combustion chambers. These deposits actually "short circuit" your spark plugs causing them to misfire. They may also cause pre-ignition of the combustion mixture—resulting in severe knock. This is especially true when accelerating, climbing hills, or driving on the open highway.

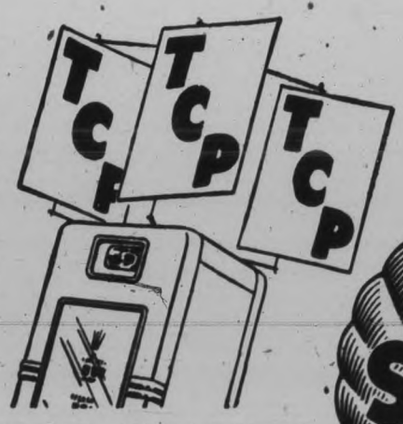
To overcome this condition, Shell research discovered a fuel additive TCP. Blended into Shell Premium Gasoline, TCP stops the short-circuiting effects of the deposits on spark plugs and in combustion chambers. This means, for the average motorist, a power boost of up to 15%, an increase in spark plug life of up to 150%, plus an increase in gasoline mileage!

Shell Premium with TCP is the most important advance in gasoline since the discovery of tetraethyl lead in 1922.

New and old engines benefit

If you have a new car, particularly one with a high compression engine, Shell Premium with TCP is essential if you want it to keep on delivering its original power for the normal life of the spark plug. But high compression or not, Shell Premium with TCP keeps it working like new.

Owners of older cars also benefit. Even if your car has gone thirty thousand miles or even more, your engine can get back much of its original power by the use of Shell Premium with TCP.



Shell Premium with TCP quick to act

So rapidly does Shell Premium with TCP counteract the deposit on spark plugs and in combustion chambers, that you'll feel your engine's had a tune-up before you've finished the second tankful. You enjoy that new car pep again.

Now in Canada-but only at your Shell Dealer's

TCP was originally developed by Shell research for aviation fuels and until now has been largely restricted to military aircraft.

Today, Shell Premium with TCP is available in this area, but only at Shell Service Stations.

Jaycees Plan To Promote Flourishing Tourist Industry

With an eye on what is predicted will be the biggest year for tourists in history, the Juinor Chamber of Commerce is making plans to draw more tourists than ever before towards Peterborough.

Highlight of the program is a "tourist of the week" feature which was outlined to the Jaycees' tourist promotion dinner meeting at the Club Aragon Monday night by Harry Beresford, tourist committee sub-chairman in charge of tourist bureau operations.

Under the scheme, one tourist would be chosen periodically as "tourist of the week" by the Jaycees. Together with his family, the tourist will be "on the town" for a whole day. He will be provided with all his meals, including a civic luncheon and dinner with the Jaycees, and whatever entertainment he wishes to have will be provided by the Jaycees, including theatre tickets and admission to the Peterborough Summer Theatre.

He will also be provided with certificates to obtain free at local stores those articles he particularly wishes to buy during his visit.

RADIO PROGRAM

Other schemes for tourist promotion outlined by Mr. Beresford include a weekly radio program local listeners as well as visitors, daily spot broadcasts throughout the tourist season and a campaign of newspaper promotion.

The increasing importance of the tourist industry to Canada was stressed by John Madden, president of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

"The average citizen too often feels he has no direct connection with the tourist industry," Mr. Madden said. "What he fails to recognize is that every additional dollar from the tourist industry benefits his community.

"Buildings have to be equipped and staff hired and a constant supply of food and other requirements of the tourist have to be maintained.

"Some residents may not handle the tourist dollar but they cannot designed to impress the importance of the tourist industry on fail to benefit from the increasing tourist trade. It results in better systems of communications, improved transportation facilities and new industries to supply tourist needs."

Bob Hamilton, assistant secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce, told the Jaycees that already to date 350 enquiries had been received from United States tourists. Of these, about 40 per cent were the result of publicity given by federal and provincial government departments.

He pointed out that while, years ago, the tourist industry was regarded as a nuisance which resulted in the overcrowding of communities, statistics have shown that it is one of the five major industries that maintain the Canadian economy and it hasn't reached its peak yet.

A brief history of the Jaycees' tourist promotion activities was presented by Doug Vaisey who said that, from all indications, this year was going to be a better year than ever.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers were Harry Smith, vice-president of the Canadian Junior Chamber of Commerce, Ken Faggetter, tourist committee sub-chairman in charge of special events, Tom Miller, tourist committee sub-chairman in charge of publicity and public relations, and Les Groombridge, local president and regional president-elect of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Also at the head table were G. K. Fraser, MP for Peterborough West, and Bruce Edwards, Jaycee president-elect. The program included piano selections by Norman Harris, a color film, "Travellers' Cheques," shown by Ron Ward of the National Film Board, and feats of magic by Gerry Maaswinkle. Chairman was Ron Balaam, Jaycee tourist promotion chairman.

Coronation Fever Making London Giddy

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)—The most popular recreation in giddy London today was to "walk the Queen's six miles."

It's the route through streets and parks along which the Coronation procession will pass just a week from today, the Queen riding splendidly in the gold and purple state coach drawn by eight Windsor Greys.

Excitement increased as the fabulous day approached. A game which Londoners and many thousands of visitors have invented is to see the city just as the Queen will see it. Tens of thousands jostle and plod along the route, gaping at miles of spic and span grandstands which have converted sober London into a gay and fluttering town of color and light.

The lift to the spirits of her majesty's subjects can almost be felt. Britons have become effusively sociable. Strangers talk to each other, argue, laugh and invite each other to tea.

Some of those who argue insist that the grand scale on which monarchy's finest spectacle is being organized is a foolish extravagance.

But everyone loves the Queen, and the fault finders—even those few who like to think themselves as wanting a republic—hurry down the Mall with the Coronation enthusiasts to converge in dense thousands about Buckingham Palace.

The royal standard again flew from the palace flag pole today, showing that the Queen had returned from a breather at the royal lodge at Windsor. Even during her absence the crowds stood, shoved and milled about.

Monday night police reinforcements were called to clear away crowds pressed against the palace gates.

"It's the Coronation fever we expected," said the earl marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, in charge of the Coronation arrangements.

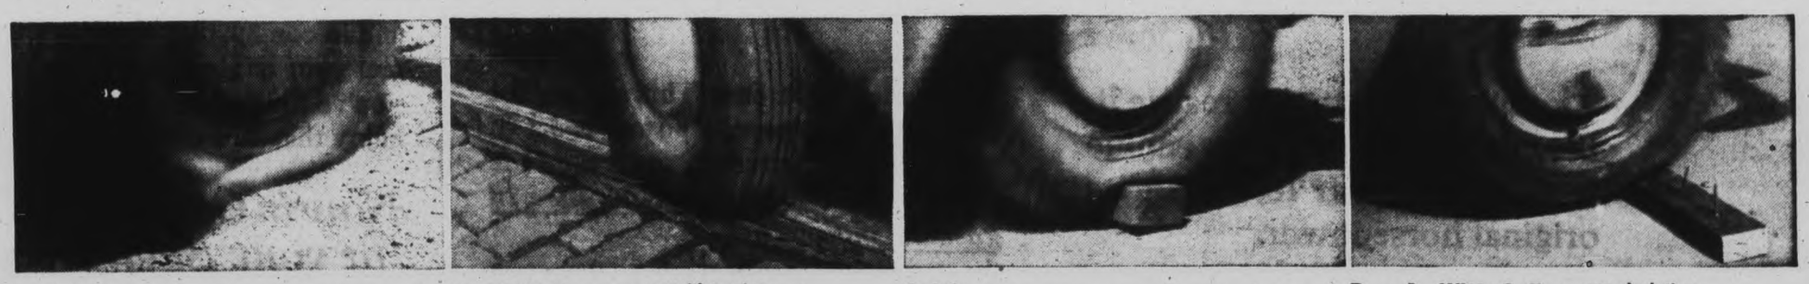
Then, wearily, the earl marshal prepared for still more rehearsals at Westminster Abbey, where the Coronation takes place. The most important will be Friday, when a great many of the spectators who will be admitted to the abbey will come to be told which doors to use and how to get to their assigned places with the least confusion.

The Queen herself is regarded just about letter perfect in her part. She and the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, who will place the crown of St. Edward on her head, have practised repeatedly in private. In the abbey, before a larger group, she has rehearsed the presentation of the Bible, spurs and sword, and has approached her throne three or four times to be sure just how many steps she will have to take.

The young monarch, in radiant health, had a day in the open Monday. In the morning she rode with the Duke of Edinburgh, and Princess Margaret, on bridle paths about the royal lodge. In the afternoon she and her mother watched races at Hurst Park. The Queen wore a light brown frock and a white-feathered hat. She smiled and seemed to be thrilled by some exciting races.

There still were 3,000 persons milling around outside Buckingham Palace when the Queen arrived from Windsor shortly before midnight. The royal car came unescorted and had slipped into the palace forecourt before the people realized they had just seen the sovereign go by. Then they raised a mighty cheer.

The Coronation fever pleasantly afflicting the land probably was heightened by the weather. The temperature rose to 86 degrees at 6 o'clock Monday night—and for England that is a scorcher.



The heat was expected to break late today, a change being brought in by severe hail and rain storms in Scotland and northern Wales.

Welcome Visitors

LONDON (CP)—Women contingents of Commonwealth and colonial forces coming for the Coronation will be guests of the director of the Women's Royal Air Force, Air Commandant N. M. Salmon. Arrangements include parties at the Overseas League to meet members of the British women's naval, army and air services.

New Synthetic Drugs Pose Big Problem For RCMP

By JOHN LeBLANC

OTTAWA (CP)—New synthetic drugs, which can be turned out wholesale in the kitchen, are posing a problem for the men fighting Canada's illicit narcotics traffic.

The moonshine manufacturing tactics may cause a big shift in the strategy of narcotics agents battling the business that is causing untold social and economic damage in this country.

The RCMP, the police force chiefly concerned with the drug problem, tells about its newest headache in a revised edition of its 1949 publicatic "Law and Order in Canadian Democracy," a general treatise on crime and police work in Canada.

CAUSE FOR CONCERN

Recent development of several synthetic narcotic substitutes, the RCMP says, has given "cause for concern" from the standpoint of efforts to curb illegal drug peddling and use, even though steps are immediately taken to control them as they appear.

"The great danger of the synthetics," the RCMP says, "lies in the fact that any unscrupulous chemist, possessing the known formulas and working in a basement laboratory, could produce large quantities of these drugs for the illegal traffic.

"This fact will undoubtedly greatly influence our future approach to the narcotic problem."

Of that problem generally, the force says that—despite a 30-year attack at huge expense—there is still "far too large a number of drug addicts and of the peddlers catering to their wants."

New recruits to the habit—heroin now gets the big play—are being made daily. Smugglers continue to bring large quantities of drugs into Canada.

PROBLEM ACUTE

"The Canadian narcotic problem is certainly still acute and will undoubtedly have to be faced for some time to come," the RCMP concludes.

Canadian addicts spend millions of dollars a year to ease their craving, the Mounties estimate. A large percentage of this money derives from crime, because of the victim's need for a steady supply at all costs.

"Because of the enormous economic burden placed upon the country by drug addiction and the crime associated with it, apart entirely from any consideration of humanitarianism, the suppression and complete elimination of the drug traffic is a matter of vital national importance," the RCMP states.

Up to now, the force says, the attack has been directed at trafficking more than at addiction. But this cannot end the problem.

MUST TACKLE ADDICT

The drug problem "cannot be solved unless it is tackled at its very source—the addict himself."

Canada needs a system of institutional treatment designed for a cure, not as a punitive measure. Narcotics addiction is as much an ailment as mental disease.

"If we are prepared to accept the proposition that there is a close similarity between insanity and narcotic addiction," the RCMP says, "we should be willing to take the next step and provide the necessary legislation for the enforced committal and control of the drug addict."

It continues:

"The ony way in which the narcotics traffic and crime stemming from it can finally be stamped out in Canada lies in . . . a nation-wide plan aimed at the roots of the problem, namely the ending of drug addiction through cure and post-treatment control of the addict."

Have Introduced Law Issue Power Licence

WASHINGTON (AP)—Legislation authorizing the federal power commission to issue a licence to the New York state power authority for development of Niagara Falls and Niagara river in co-operation with Canada was introduced Monday in the senate by Senator George Aiken (Rep. Vt.).

Submitted on behalf of Senator Irving Ives (Rep. N. Y.), the bill is similar to one introduced last week in the House by Representative Franck Becker (Rep. N.Y.).

Other bills dealing with the proposed $400,000,000 undertaking include those calling for congress to permit the development by private enterprise, and bills providing for the federal government to undertake construction.

ELIZABETH the Queen

By Marion Crawford

Former Governess to Her Majesty

XVIII

Queen Elizabeth loves children. Many times as we drove round London on our way to and from those Monday-afternoon treats Queen Mary used to give us, or on the way down to the Royal Lodge, Windsor, she would suddenly lean forward and say, "Look, what a lovely little girl that is." Or, "Isn't he a sweet-looking child?"

Whenever she had to speak with children or take bouquets from their embarrassed hands, a new gentleness came over her.

"Thank you so much," she would say, smiling at them in a pleasant, open way which made them feel that here was not some magnificent lady, but a kind elder sister or aunt. She has a way with children which is quite delightful to watch. Obviously she loves to be with them.

That is evident with her own children.

We used to play, I remember, a game of peep-bo together when she was small. The Princess would be Piccadilly, and I would hide myself behind a bush.

Suddenly I would pop my head out and say "Peep-bo," at which she would go off into a long gurgle of laughter, which I would stimulate again by repeating the performance whenever it seemed likely to stop. It was a game of which she never tired.

I was amused the other day to see a charming picture of her taken at Clarence House, where she was obviously playing just the same game with Prince Charles.

As a private citizen she would be able to spend most of her day with them, and lucky children they would be.

This thought brings to mind the touching reunion between her and Prince Charles on her return from Malta, where she had visited her husband.

At the airport a silver aircraft touched down on the runway, slowed to a stop, and then swept in a graceful arc toward the control tower.

The crowd which had waited surged forward, surrounding the plane, while panting policemen struggled to keep them from crushing the tiny figure in a lemon-colored coat, clutching his nurse's hand, and staring with round eyes at the now-stationary airplane.

The aircraft's door opened. A member of the crew came down the steps toward the child and said a few words to his nurse. Then he lifted the little boy into the aircraft.

Mother and child, together for the first time in 11 weeks, embraced in the plane, while the crowd waited patiently. And none among them grudged Princess Elizabeth the enjoyment of a few precious moments of privacy before she stepped out to acknowledge the cheers.

✣ ✣ ✣

Queen Elizabeth, mistress of her own household, with her own family around her, and carrying the responsibilities of the Throne is her father's own daughter.

Last year, Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh chose this photo of themselves with their children, Princess Anne (left) and Prince Charles (right), to appear on their Christmas cards. It was taken at Balmoral Castle, in Scotland, where the Royal couple spent their honeymoon.

Throughout the long association with the Royal Family which I have been privileged to enjoy, I have constantly had before me her parents' example of perfect unity. The King, the Queen, and their two lovely daughters always took such pleasure in one another's company that they seemed to draw strength from one another.

Their harmony gave no scope to the traditional jealousy of courtiers. There was none of the court favoritism and petty bickering of the old times, for there was no chance for jealousies to arise. The Royal Family as an indivisible unit, bound together by love and loyalty, stood above and apart from all that.

During the King's illness and the absence of the Duke of Edinburgh in Malta, the Princess and her mother were almost constant companions. It was not only her deep love and sympathy for her mother that kept her by her side, but also her responsibilities as the King's daughter.

And there was in that companionship also a continuing of the good habits that have grown up with her from childhood. When Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret were children it was their father's greatest delight to romp with them.

I felt that there was something special about his feeling for Princess Elizabeth. He showed it in a different way from his obvious love for Princess Margaret, who could always charm him.

Princess Margaret's personality was so compelling that she could make him snuggle up and tell stories when he really was too tired.

Princess Elizabeth would always sense his mood and conform to it. When I used to see them walk together from the Royal Lodge to the stables, where they fed the horses, they seemed to me a perfect picture of father and daughter.

The King, so tall and slim, bending slightly to the little figure by his side—and she, with her hand confidently holding his, always had so much to talk about. And so seriously.

To Princess Elizabeth he always used his normal, adult tone, as one understanding, sensible person to another.

Short-Term Influences Change Consumer Demand

by THE CANADIAN PRESS

A number of short-term influences operating on the Canadian economy have brought about a change in both the amount and pattern of consumer demand, the Bank of Montreal reports in its current business review.

Chief among these are the price and volume of housing construction and the suspension of credit regulations a year ago.

In the nine months ended March, 1952, the volume of retail trade declined about six per cent from the previous year, while it rose 12½ per cent in the 12 months ended March, 1953.

The review said the main element in the change seems to be consumer durable goods. Shipments by producers of goods such as motor-cars, refrigerators, washing machines and radios showed marked increases compared with the corresponding period in the previous year. Most noticeable were shipments of television sets, jumping from 25,000 to 125,000 units.

During a one-year period beginning June, 1951, food prices rose and "consequently less of the family budget was available for less essential goods and services." Conversely as prices declined, more money was available for costlier items.

Residential construction, which declined during the period of general credit constraint, has been rising. Houses completed in February were up 39 per cent from February, 1952.

The review said the retail sales rise has been accompanied by a sharp rise in the volume of consumer credit. At the end of 1952, outstanding credit was estimated at $1,530,000,000, up $519,000,000 in nine months.

There now is evidence that the rate of increase has diminished, it said.

RISING FASTER

Since the end of the Second World War, total consumer credit outstanding has been rising faster than disposable income available to consumers after taxes, the report said. The average level of consumer credit last year was equal to 8.1 per cent of disposable income, compared with 7.8 per cent in 1950 and 6.1 per cent in 1948.

During the last 12 months "real income of the consumer has increased significantly and has largely been used in the purchase of durable goods." Whether the income will rise or fall is of vital concern to retailers and business men.

Say Red Union Does Bargaining

TORONTO — (CP) — A Toronto newspaper said Monday that a Communist-dominated union holds bargaining rights in uranium mines in Northern Saskatchewan. It termed the mines' production "a cornerstone in North America's defence in a future atomic war."

In a dispatch from Uranium City, Sask., the newspaper said:

"It has the huge Eldorado Mining and Refining Co., a Crown corporation, signed up and is organizing the entire chain of mines which gives this country superiority in precious uranium."

—Roy Studio Photo

Gosselin-Spence

At the Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church on Saturday morning, Isobel Ida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Spence, became the bride of Vernon Gosselin, son of Mrs. Gosselin and the late Thomas Gosselin, all of Peterborough. The Rev. G. F. Sullivan performed the rites.

Mr. Herbert Michel, church organist, played the wedding music and also sang "On this Day" and "Ave Maria" during the service.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle Mr. Stafford King. She wore a gown of white Chantilly lace over white satin, fashioned with a Queen Anne collar, long sleeves coming to points, and the full length skirt with inserted tiers of nylon net at the sides. Her fingertip veil was of tulle illusion and her headdress was a juliet cap of Chantilly lace over satin embroidered with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of American Beauty roses.

Miss Roxie Gosselin, the groom's sister, was maid of honor, and the bride's sister, Miss Margaret Spence was bridesmaid. They were in ballerina length gowns of mauve and powder blue and wore Juliet caps of the same shades and wrist length gloves. Each carried a nosegay of sweet peas and pink rosebuds.

The groom was attended by his brother Leon Gosselin. Ushers were Paul and Jim O'Dette and the altar boys were Paul McNeely and Danny Twomey.

A reception was held in the Empress Hotel Kawartha Room, the bride's mother receiving in a navy dress and picture hat of navy straw and wearing a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother assisted her, wearing powder blue with a white straw hat and white gloves and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

For travelling to Ottawa the bride donned a beige suit and pink accessories and had a mauve orchid corsage when going away.

Mr. and Mrs. Gosselin will live at 67 Crescent St.

Winners in the essay contest sponsored by the Diocesan Catholic Women's League are announced. First is Patricia McDougall, second, Frederick Moher, and third, Suzanne Moher.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Little Things Go To Make Every-Day Life Happier

A worried young man said "Is there anything I can do to make her love me like she used to?"

Their quarrel had been over the merest trifle (her hair-do) and there is still a strong bond of respect and affection between them, but the quarrel had somehow removed the glamor from the courtship.

It set me to thinking about the little things that effect the whole lives of some people.

I know a doctor who openly admits that he proposed to his wife because of her beautiful curly red hair . . . and of a woman who smilingly claims that her swain won her heart with his courtly manners—for instance tucking her flowing skirts inside the car door after ushering her in.

Another trifle that saved the lives of two widow ladies was a bed of lilies of the valley. They had inherited a property in Florida and had the opportunity of moving there to live . . . but couldn't pull themselves away from this large bed of lilies of the valley growing in the side garden of their old home. Subsequently the property in Florida was laid low by a tropical hurricane and the caretaker was killed.

A mild little woman who had absorbed countless insults from her faithless husband silently resolved to leave him if he ever bumped into her dining-room chair as he passed again, after he had been doing the same little childish trick for five years. He did—and she did.

The wife of an uncle of a cousin of mine served him apple pie for dessert every day for twenty-five years. (Sounds like a tall story—but that's how it was told to me.) I don't know the outcome—but if he can survive that he can endure anything I suppose. Maybe mercifully he will outlive her and can then go to a restaurant and order strawberry shortcake—just once!

I know a sensitive little boy who always looked forward to his mother kissing him good-night, "because she always smelled so nice".

If these straws have a common point let it serve to etch into your memories the little things that you do that charm your families. Remember that the bare element of surprise is charming too.

A wife and a mother has so much power in her hands that sometimes it may seem a heavy burden but most of the time it is a proud challenge.

The little things like keeping the tarnish cleaned from the tips of the forks; or always handing your voluntary dish driers a clean towel; or never using a soiled tablecloth; and always washing the dishes after every meal; and eating in the dining-room whenever possible. Change the kitchen towels daily and when you strip the towels from the bathroom, hang up clean ones. It's annoying to the most patient of husbands to wash and then have to drip all the way to the linen cupboard for a clean towel.

Have a whistle for calling the children to meals. It's so undignified to shout for them—besides a whistle has so much more authority and gets quicker results.

A borrower who doesn't return things gradually loses her appeal. A borrowing neighbor who returns what she borrows—with the measure heaped up and running over (for interest) becomes a friend for life.

Golly—I've preached my way right to the bottom of the column, and nary a recipe yet.

Pete made the velvety-est fudge I've ever tasted, last night. He disobeyed all the rules, and produced a masterpiece. Here is his wacky way:

PETE'S VELVET FUDGE

Into a pan throw 3 tablespoons cocoa, 1 cup milk, 2 cups sugar, ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar, shake of salt. Place over high heat and stir (he used our armored thermometer as a spoon) all the time while it boils like mad to exactly 234 deg. Fahr. Remove from heat and add a hunk of butter that looks like about 2 tablespoons. Stand dish in large dish containing cold water and do not stir. (I had to chain him to the wall.) When cooled to lukewarm add 1 teaspoon vanilla and beat until thick and beginning to just hold its shape. Add 1 cup broken nuts—not at all necessary. Pour to 1 inch depth in small buttered pan. Chill in refrigerator for at least ½ hour if you can keep your family away from it.—With love from Mary.

LONG CELEBRATION

IODE Spent $427,538 On National Services

EDMONTON (CP)—The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire expended $427,538.18 for its "national services at home and abroad" program for 1952-53.

This amount is $16,626 more than for the 1951-52 period.

In a report prepared for delivery tonight at the 53rd annual meeting of the national chapter, IODE, Mrs. Barbara E. Osler, Toronto, convener of national services, said that $83,710.45 of this amount was spent on equipment for clinics, hospitals, preventoria and similar institutions.

Equipment supplied by chapters across the country ranged from television sets and floor polishers to infant oxygen tents and an examination table with equipment for cancer research, she said.

"More than 28,000 visits were made to sick and needy persons and some 90,000 magazines as well as thousands of games were distributed."

AID FOR CHILDREN

The Save the Children Fund received over 15 tons of clothing and other articles valued at $54,753.89.

More than seven tons of clothing and bedding, valued at $23,957.43, were sent to needy families in England. A children's hospital in England and another in Scotland received $1,370.93 worth of bedding and comforts.

Mrs. Osler said that the IODE had experimented by "sending" parcels overseas through the purchase of food tokens from a London, England firm which distributed parcels from within the country itself.

This method was adopted because of high postal rates on food parcels and seemed to be working out successfully as a means of cutting expenses, she said.

"The order has made a very real effort to assure our servicemen that they are not forgotten by those at home," said Mrs. Osler.

SMOKES FOR TROOPS

More than a million cigarets were shipped to Canadian and British troops in Korea and Germany during the last year and thousands more distributed to ex-servicemen in hospitals here.

Recreation programs for blind persons, veterans, handicapped children, pre-school children, inmates of county homes, orphans, new Canadians and members of "Over-60" clubs were carried out by many chapters, she said.

Thousands of dollars were also distributed for emergency aid, flood relief, merchant sailors and fishermen's homes and institutions and for the establishing and maintenance of war memorials.

Mrs. Osler said that although much was being done in Canada by the order, concentration on overseas projects was necessary, "if the world is to be a better place and situations which foster discontent and unrest abolished."

ELDERLY STATE COACH

The gilded coach used by the monarch in British coronations was built nearly 200 years ago for George III.

Of Interest to Women

CORONATION WAISTLINE is used for this coat, created from lace frosting over wool jersey. Color is vanilla ice. The designer has paired the coat with a dress in matching wool jersey that's sleeveless with low, dipping neckline.

I.O.D.E. Spent $172,938 On Educational Projects

EDMONTON (CP)—The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire spent $172,938.27 on educational projects during 1952-53.

In a report prepared for delivery at the 53rd annual meeting of the national chapter being held here this week, Mrs. O. M. Martin Toronto, national educational secretary, said that $150,443.30 of the amount represented outlay by the provincial chapters, "the largest in the history of the order."

Mrs. Martin said that $41,739.08 was spent on 1514 schools by 618 chapters for libraries, pictures, calendars, magazines and other supplies.

The total used for students was $86.795.98 including scholarships, bursaries, monetary assistance and prizes.

BIIG PRIZE LIIST

"Prize giving increased last year when 3,994 prizes were presented, 1,773 of which were books to students," said Mrs. Martin.

Last year 848 students, 128 of whom came from homes of ex-service personnel, were helped by the order.

Mrs. Martin said that the collecting and preserving of Canadian legends was a new project of the IODE and a committee headed by Ethel Raymond, Brantford, had been set up for this purpose.

The educational secretary also reported that "provincial educational secretaries of the IODE are realizing the importance of the creative use of leisure as reports show more emphasis placed on music, art and literature."

Plans were completed for the publication of a special IODE edition of Prof. George E. Tait's "Famous Canadian Stories." Chapters were urged to purchase copies as Empire and Citizenship Day prizes for grades VII and VIII.

OBSCENE LITTERATURE

Mrs. Martin referred to a brief presented last summer on behalf of the order by Mrs. J. D. Detwiler, Paris, Ont., to the special committee of the Senate on sale and distribution of salacious and indecent literature.

"The special committee of the Senate with even wider scope resumed its hearings in February and has now presented its report to the Senate with the single major recommendation that border controls be expanded to halt the imports of obscene books," she said.

In a report on the national Commonwealth and Empire committee, Mrs. C. M. Scott, Peterborough, said that plans are under way to bring a nurse, Miss Gnanaselvam David, from India this autumn to attend the University of Toronto school of nursing. Mrs. Scott said it was estimated that the over-all cost of the two-year degree course would be $4,500.

Mrs. Laurence Grout, Toronto, national secretary of the IODE magazine "Echoes," said in her report that "revenue from advertising was $24,867.40 for 1952-53 and from subscriptions, $23,821 18."

This represented a small profit on the year's operation despite the rising costs of publication, she said.

DOROTHY DIX:

Pampered Son Won't Improve With Marriage

DEAR MISS DIX: For the past six months I've been going with a young man of 22, to whom I have become quite attached. However, I don't know whether it's advisable for me to continue seeing him.

He is now attending college, and after graduation will go on to medical school. He comes from a fine family.

He tries to make it clear that he cares for me, yet he won't come to see me unless his brother, or a friend, provides transportation. He is obstinate and spoiled in many ways, and, once he gets an idea into his head, won't concede an inch. In the beginning, I went out of my way to please him, and because I won't continue doing so, he calls me unreasonable.

FLORA M.

SPOILED BY MOTHHER

ANSWER: Since doubts about your friend have already entered your mind, that in itself is sufficient evidence that the bloom has washed off your little romance. He has evidently been thoroughly spoiled by a doting mother, and unless you are inclined to continue the pampering, let him go. I doubt if you, or any other girl, would find much satisfaction in a marriage dominated by an inconsiderable boor. There is no chance that this young man's obvious shortcomings will improve after marriage; they will probably become worse. You're wise to realize that happiness cannot exist without the co-operation of both partners. A boy who has been brought up with the idea that the world owes him service ranks No. 1 on the list of poor matrimonial risks.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am going with a very nice young lady but her family thinks I'm too old for her. I am 55 and she is 18. We get along very well together, and I don"t think the difference in age is so important.

J. D.

ANSWER: While I often contend that age difference should not be the prime factor in marriage, a difference of 37 years is altogether too much. Do you realize you are old enough to be the girl"s grandfather? I hope the young lady's family has enough influence to break this foolish attachment.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a young widow without children, and have sufficient income so I don't have to work. Since I am at home most of the time, the mothers of the neighbourhood seem to look upon me as permanent baby sitter One especially, goes out two or three times a week, brings her children to me, and without asking if I can take them, departs. Of course, no mention is made of pay How can I stop this imposition?

ELIZABETH

ANSWER: The trouble apparently stems from the fact that you obviously have lots of free time. Why not try a part-time job, or, if that doesn't interest you, take on a volunteer job in a hospital, or with a service organization. Right now the Red Cross is in great need of volunteer workers.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIIX: Although I am 14, my parents refuse to leave me alone at night. Don't you think I should be entitled to a little privacy? I have never given them any reason to distrust me

J. M.

ANSWER: I'm sure there's no question of "trust" involved in your parents' reluctance to leave you alone. It's difficult for youngsters to appreciate the anxieties of their parents, who have so much wider knowledge and experience. Many of their worries might seem foolish, but if they concern the safety of their children, it's better to worry than be sorry. Your parents probably think of many threats to your safety—such as fire, or sudden illness, and so forth—which almost certainly might never occur, but are nevertheless sources of anxiety. You ought to appreciate their concern for you.

Girl Almost Totally Blind Graduates From McMaster

HAMILTON (CP)—Dorothy Margot Tate, 23, of nearby Dundas has received a bachelor of arts degree from McMaster University eight years after a specialist suggested she give up all thoughts of education.

That warning followed an operation for a brain tumor which left Miss Tate almost totally blind. Miss Tate, who hopes to become a home teacher with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, said at convocation ceremonies that she was helped during examinations by several persons interested in her case, including Mrs. J. Edgar Bates, dean of women.

In her third and fourth years she became a member of the Spanish Club, women's choir, Sociology Club, Geography Club, French and German Club and of the Women's International Relations Club.

Farm Women Plan Pageant

TORONTO (CP)—Canadian farm women are on the hunt for all sorts of items, ranging from old-fashioned guns to bustles.

Historic relics are needed for the mammoth historical pageant to be staged in Maple Leaf Gardens here on Aug. 21, in conjunction with the international conference of the Associated Countrywomen of the World.

Old-time clothing for both men and women will be needed and attics are being turned upside down for men's bowlers and toppers, tams, toques, hoop skirts and capes. Uniforms of the army, navy, air force, police, nurses and firefighters for any period up to 1929 are being requested, with characteristic dress of the various national groups that make up the Canadian mosaic.

Props for the pageant will include spinning wheels, churns powder horns, scythes and saddles.

When the pageant is staged a professional costume mistress and a staff of institute women helpers will be in the dressing rooms to see that the costumes are handled with care.

8,500 Attend Opening Opera Night

TORONTO (CP) — A thunderstorm contributed to the atmosphere of menace in the last act of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," with which the Metropolitan Opera company opened a week of opera in Maple Leaf Gardens Monday night.

The Toronto Rotary Club is sponsoring the opera presentation here, as it did last year.

The company, which came here from Montreal, ends both its current tour and its 1952-53 season with the Toronto appearance. Tonight's opera will be "Carmen."

8,500 ATTEND

The Verdi opera, whose English title is The Power of Destiny, told of the way fate dogged Don Alvaro after he accidentally killed his father-in-law.

Tenor Richard Tucker played Don Alvaro, with soprano Zinka Milanov as Lenora, Leonard Warren as Don Carlo, Cesare Siepi as Padre Guardinao and Gerhard Pechner as Fra Melitone.

Some 8,500 persons, many in jewels and evening dress, were ranged in a half circle facing the huge stage in one end of the sports arena.

Kitchener Man Has Best Photos

KITCHENER (CP)—Alan Butler, staff photographer of the Kitchener-Waterloo Record, has won the trophy for the second straight year for the best feature picture in newspapers of under 50,000 circulation in the Inland Daily Press Association annual news picture contest.

He also won first prize in the spot news division of the same contest.

Butler was in Chicago today to receive his awards at the spring meeting of association.

Mud-Running Mare Flareday Wins Plate

TORONTO (CP)—Flareday, a mud-running mare from the Waterloo barn of Frowde Seagram, won the Grosvenor Plate, featured event on Monday's program at Woodbine Park. Flareday plowed through six furlongs of slop in the creditable time of 1:13 2-5.

Unification was 1½ lengths back in second place and Scientist third, another seven lengths back.

The biggest price of the spring meeting was recorded in the fifth race when Triple Time scored under the colors of M. J. Boylen of Toronto. This good filly paid $81.50 for $2.

advised by his physician that he should have a holiday for the benefit of rest.

"Of course, if medical grounds enter into it, it is another story," Ald. Dewart remarked. "I think Mr. MacPherson should have gone to the Board of Health. We had no warning about this, and I don't feel we should take action tonight.""

Ald. Norman Graham said he had told Acting Mayor Miller 10 day's ago that the MacPherson resignation was coming.

"I move that he be granted two weeks holidays with pay," Ald. Graham proposed, but did not get a seconder.

"If the city council desires to take over the duties of the Board of Health, I'll be glad to relinquish them," Ald. Dewart said.

Ald. Burrows' motion had also mentioned the holiday detail, and in reference to the remark of Ald. Dewart, he said he was willing to rescind it and have the matter referred to the Board of Health.

"If the council appointed the Sanitary Inspector by bylaw," said Ald. Rehill, "then the resignation has to come to the council first. This man was quite in order in sending his resolution right here."

Ald. Dewart said he did not dispute that procedure, "but we are discussing whether he should be let go tomorrow or a week from tomorrow, and that is something which affects the Board of Health and should be discussed by the board."

TOO MANY RESIGNATIONS

Ald. Graham repeated his position saying that he moved the acceptance of the resignation with two weeks pay. "There are too many resignations. There's something wrong somewhere."

Ald. Dewart volunteered to telephone Dr. J. P. Wells, MOH, with respect to the effect on the department, but returned with the information that Dr. Wells was not at home.

Ald. Dewart said his concern was that the Board of Health would probably be embarrassed by the resignation of the Sanitary Inspector without notice to the board.

"I'd suggest that we accept the motion, but that the date be left in the hands of the Board of Health," Acting Mayor Miller proposed.

"If that is agreed, I'm satisfied," Ald. Dewart said. "I think a meeting of the board could be soon arranged."

The motion was finally recommended to the council that the resignation be accepted, that the inspector be granted holidays with pay, but that the date of the beginning of the holidays be referred to the Board of Health. It was moved by Ald. Burrows and seconded by Ald. Farquharson.

Dionne Quints To Celebrate 19th Birthdays

NORTH BAY (CP)—The Dionne Quintuplets, 19 next Thursday, will be spending their first birthday away from home.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, two sisters, Pauline and Mrs. Maurice Geraud of Waterloo, Que., and a brother, seven-year-old Claude, will join the quints at a summer cottage near Nicolet, Que.

The cottage, located in an attractive maple bush, is owned by the nuns who operate the girls' College Institute Familial, which the quints are attending at Nicolet.

There will be the usual birthday celebrations and cake, although this time it will be for six Dionne girls—the quints, Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie, and Yvonne, and Pauline, who celebrated her 20th birthday last month.

The five girls have already received a large number of birthday cards, many of them from Europe and the United States.

CASH GIFTS

Mr. Dionne said Monday: "Though we will be giving them some clothes, our main birthday gift to the girls will be in the form of cash. They know best what they need."

He said none of the girls has a boy friend. "They have been much too busy with their studies for this sort of thing. I feel sure they will stay in school for two more years, probably longer."

He said they are considerably slimmer and recently adopted short bob hair styles. "They are in exceptionally good health," he added. "When I saw them recently they looked much more refreshed and relaxed than they have for a long time."

The girls have been taking a course in home economics, comparable to first year at university. They have been given the privilege of taking whatever subjects they choose and Mr. Dionne said they may choose art next year as a result of their interest in Pauline's work. Pauline is studying art at Montreal and plans to become an art teacher.

MAIN HOBBY MUSIC

The quints' main hobby still is music, and all five are good at it. At Nicolet, Marie has been taking singing lessons and she, Annette and Cecile have also been taking piano lessons.

As for their future, Mr. Dionne said: "Mrs. Dionne and I are still leaving it entirely up to them. With the education they have received now and the confidence we have in them, they are well equipped to choose for themselves."

The quints will be out of school in June and will spend the summer vacation at the family home.

"We have had some heartaches during the last 19 years, but we are happy now and I am thankful to God that things have turned out so well," Mr. Dionne said. "Mrs. Dionne and I are very proud of all our family."

The original aim was to have the division in Europe by the end of this fiscal year, Next March 31.

In August the three squadrons that make up the wing will leapfrog across the Atlantic. They are No. 422, now at Uplands, Ottawa, No. 444 at St. Hubert, Que., and No. 414 at Bagotville, Que.

Canada now has fighter wings in England, France and Germany, each consisting of three squadrons of Sabre jets.

Says Warning Not Warranted

LONDON (CP)—Conditions preceding last Thursday's tornado in western Ontario did not warrant the issuing of a tornado warning, Fred Turnbull, chief forecaster of the Dominion Meteorological Bureau said Tuesday.

He stressed that government policy was to forecast tornadoes immediately enough evidence was compiled confirming the danger.

Mr. Turnbull was replying to criticism by Ald. George Beedle in last night's meeting of city council.

Ald. Beedle claimed that information regarding tornado warnings in the Sarnia area was in the hands of the bureau "early on Thursday" but the information was not published.

Council adopted his motion urging the federal government to establish a policy in line with that in southern and central United States, "where such tornadoes occur more frequently and storm warnings are posted."

Dam Gates Stick Village Has Flood

WELLESLEY (CP)—The Nith river rolled over its banks during a heavy rainstorm Monday night and the entire village of Wellesley was roused when the flood gates on a dam could not be opened. Damage was light.

Water spilled over the banks shortly after midnight and headed for the village, 22 miles northeast of Stratford.

Michael Boshart, gate tender at the dam, sounded the fire siren when the flood gates stuck. Small boats were washed away and cellars and gardens in the village were flooded.

The volunteer fire brigade and about 70 residents hurried to the scene and placed sandbags along the river banks during the night.

The flood gates were opened just before dawn this morning and the water level went down to normal.

On Feb. 6, 1952, Leon Paquette, 26-year-old father of the girl, was killed in a traffic accident.

The second accident leaves only the mother, the former Theresa Ross, and a three-year-old boy in the family.

Bogert Believes Reds May Be Sincere

OTTAWA (CP)—Brig. M. P. Bogert, CBE, DSO, former commander of the 25th Infantry Brigade in Korea, said Monday night he believes it is wrong to assum Communists do not mean what they say in current peace overtures.

He felt there is no reason peace in Korea cannot become a reality providing the Communists show sincerity.

"If they do I cannot see why peace is not possible soon" he told the annual convention of the RCAF Association.

Score Against MiGs 51 To 1 In 26 Days

SEOUL (AP)—U. S. Sabre jet pilots who shot down 12 Communist MiGs have piled up a lopsided score of 51 to 1 in aerial combat with the swift red MiGs in 26 days this month.

Tuesday's bag boosted the MiG kill since the war began to 704, the air force said.

Another 126 MiGs probably were destroyed and 862 damaged.

Air force records credit the deadly Sabre jets with 687 of the 704 kills—with only 55 Sabres lost in aerial combat.

Dark Star will be turned out at Port Washington this summer, the owner added, and then will be retired to stud in Kentucky in 1954.

Guggenheim; in a statement said: "Jockey Henry Moreno reported that while the horse was running with great ease (in the Preakness) at the head of the stretch he suddenly stopped.

"After cooling out, his leg filled and the injury to a main tendon became apparent."

Dark Star finished fifth in the Preakness, won by Native Dancer.

Stock Cars Draw Large Crowd In First Meet

Frank Andre of Napanee in his 1941 souped-up Ford stock car, won the feature race Monday night at the Exhibition Grounds.

Seven stock cars from various points in Ontario and four half-milers, specially designed racing cars, from Toronto made up the card for the evening, with the half-milers being the feature attraction of the evening.

The first race was a six-lap event, with five stock cars entered. Bill Wilson of Thistletown was the winner of the first heat and set the pace throughout the race, with Frank Carleton of Toronto in his 1941 Ford coming in second.

ANDRE WINS

Frank Andre was the winner of the second race, in which six cars were entered, and it also was a six-lap event.

In the featured four half-milers completed in a six-lap race, Ron Clifford of Toronto, a comparative newcomers to the game, set the pace for the first four laps, but Lloyd Shaw of Toronto, a veteran of 20 years racing experience in Canada, came up from behind in his Cook's Special, powered by a Jaguar motor, and won the heats, with Ed. Tardiff of Toronto coming in second.

The next heat was a six-lap race, with five cars entered, and Frank Carleton of Orillia winning the event and Frank Andre second.

Following the fourth race there was another half-miler contest, with only three cars entered, Jim Chandler's Pigget's Jimmy being unable to enter, due to motor trouble. Again Lloyd Shaw's superior car and years of racing experience showed as he raced ahead to win again, with Ed Tardiff coming in second. Clifford was forced to withdraw from the race due to motor trouble after the first two laps.

In the ten-lap featured race, all the stock cars competed. Frank Andre again walked away with his second win of the evening, with Frank Carleton of Toronto second and Elwood Dophins of Odessa in third.

The only mishap of the evening was in the second race when Bill McDougall's stock car went out of control in the fourth lap and crashed into the wire fence at the south end of the track.

Joe Fair of 506 Weller St., Peterborough, a newcomer to stock car racing, entered his car in the feature ten-lap race and made a fine showing for his first time out.

Despite the local Peterborough lacrosse team playing in Miller's Bowl, a crowd of nearly 3,000 crowded the stands for the first event of the season, and several hundred other bystanders observed the races through the wire fence on Park St.

Next Monday night there will be racing again, and they are featuring several larger races of half-milers and stock cars.

Due to the rain in Toronto Monday night, several of the other stock cars were unable to make the trip on wet pavement.

Canadian Jets Unmatched By U.K. Planes

by DAVE MCINTOSH

NORTH LUFFENHAM (CP)—Canada's No. 1 Fighter Wing here is not only part of Britain's first line of defence. Its also the first line of the first line of defence.

This is to say that the three squadrons of Sabre jets are unmatched by any British planes. Officers claim that Britons, from Prime Minister Churchill down, want to keep Canadian fighter pilots in Britain in case it is attacked.

A recent exercise demonstrates that the Sabre is probably the best fighter plane now available in Britain. The Canadian Sabres staged a dummy dog-fight, or were supposed to, with British Meteors.

The Meteor pilots complained the Canadians hadn't shown up in strength and that they had seen only three Sabres. However the Sabres brought back films showing they had "shot down" 21 Meteors of the 24 sent up. All 24 Sabres had taken part in the "attack."

IN FLY-PAST

Twenty - four "best-in-Britain" Sabres will take part in the Coronation fly-past June 2. The rest of the armada will comprise 144 Meteors in the all-jet flypast just east of Buckingham Palace.

Group Capt. E. B. Hale, DFC, of Hamilton, 38-year-old commander of the wing, says the wing's aim is "to learn and to serve." After nearly a year at this base 90 miles north of London, the wing is a compact, highly skilled striking force. It is still learning new tricks and is ready to serve if needed.

One of the wing's exercises with the Meteors is "Operation Yalu," named after the Yalu river between Manchuria and North Korea. The Sabres play the villain of the piece, acting as MiGs.

The single-seat Sabres also exercise with British bombers and carry out strafing, air-to-air and air-to-ground firing exercises off the east Anglian coast.

There are about 1,000 personnel on the field, 75 of them pilots. The base, which overlooks the green English countryside for miles around, was built as a permanent station by the RAF in 1941. It was also used by American bombers during the Second World War and as a glider training field.

Canadian Soldiers In Korea Will Toast Queen On June 2

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP)—Canadian soldiers here will toast the Queen on Coronation Day.

Brig. Jean Allard, 25th Canadian infantry brigade commander, has ordered units to provide suitable beverages for the toast at parades to be held in company and platoon positions as near to noon that day as possible. Officers and their men will toast Her Majesty together, and then give three cheers.

Most units will drink the toast in beer, but some are trying to obtain enough port to do it in the wine traditionally associated with officers' toasts to the Queen.

PRAYERS FOR QUEEN

Allard also has asked units able to do so to hold church parades earlier that day to pray for guidance and success for the Queen.

Church parades at which special prayers will be offered for the Queen have been arranged throughout the division for Sunday May 31.

There will be a divisional parade at noon Coronation Day. Participating will be 21 contingents representing all units, corps and services, and all countries with troops in the division.

Tankers from Canada's Lord Strathcona's Horse will parade with members of the Royal Tank Regiment. Canadian service corps men such as medicals, ordnance, engineers and the like will march with fellow corps members from Britain, Australia, New Zealand and India.

TO RETAIN IDENTITIES

Detachments of one officer and 20 men from each of the Royal Canadian Regiment, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, the Royal 22nd Regiment and the 81st Field Regiment, RCA, will keep their identities in the parade.

The band of the PPCLI will be one of four providing music, which will culminate with a royal salute, first to be given in this theatre.

Senior officers of the UN command have been invited to attend.

Maj.-Gen. Michael West, Commonwealth division commander, will present decorations to officers and men listed in a Coronation Day supplementary awards list to be issued shortly. Thirty-five Canadians are known to be on the list, but all but nine or 10 have returned to Canada.

STANDARD AWARDS

The supplementary list is not to be confused with the Coronation medal, struck in commemoration of the Coronation. It is an extra group of standard awards, ranging from mentions in dispatches to Commander of the Order of the British Empire, authorized as supplementary to the normal allotments.

Nominations for the Coronation medal are being compiled for submission to Ottawa, but are not expected to be announced until mid-June.

Although not officially noted in the schedule of Coronation Day events, Canadian gunners have their own observances lined up. They plan a regimental volley for the exact moment the crown touches the Queens Head.

All guns will be raised to 45 degrees — maximum elevation for maximum range—and fired when radio commentators broadcasting from Westminster Abbey tell the world that the Queen is about to be crowned.

Korea is 14 hours ahead of Canadian time, and nine ahead of Greenwich. It will be evening here when the pageant in London is unfolding. Units hope to get as many men as possible around company shortwave sets to listen in that night without prejudicing defence arrangements.

Ship To Sail Despite Warrant

OWEN SOUND (CP)—An arrest warrant taken out by five former crew members will not prevent the sailing of the freighter George Hindman from Montreal this week, say the new owners, Hindman Transportation Company of this city.

The ship reached Montreal from Genoa, Italy, 10 days ago, manned by 24 Greek and Italian seamen. Most of these sought return berths to Europe, but five took out a warrant, claiming they had been insufficiently paid. A company official said the ship, formerly the Risacua, is still under provisional British registry. He said the sailors were paid off above the British scale under which they were hired.

Pair Already In Jail Plead Robbery Guilt

TORONTO (CP)—Already serving time in jail, Robert E. Wood, 24, and Talbot Murphy, 22, pleaded guilty Monday to a $28,000 Dominion Bank robbery here last September.

Wood drew seven years for the bank robbery plus an additional six months for attempted escape, to run concurrently with the 17 years he is already serving for two other armed robberies.

Murphy was given five years for the bank robbery, plus six months for escaping, to run consecutively with two years less a day being served for shoplifting.

Fined On Liquor Counts

Wilfred Bolton, of Nassau, was fined $20 and $2.50 costs Monday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal possession of liquor.

William Reid, 49, 226 Edinburgh St., was fined $10 and $2.50 costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk.

Canada House Swarming With Visitors

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Britain's most extensive preparations in nine centuries of Coronation planning have involved thousands of London buildings.

Some, like the earl marshal's office at his Belgrave Square home, the war office and the ministry of works, join Buckingham Palace and Westminster Abbey in shouldering the main burden.

Others, famed in their own right, hold subsidiary but significant administrative and traditional roles. Among them are Canada House, Clarence House, 10 Downing street and Scotland Yard.

Canada House, on the southwest side of busy Trafalgar Square, is well into its most active season ever. The massive, Georgian residence of the Canadian high commissioner, link with home to Canadians in Britain, is swarming with Coronation visitors.

Besides its services as a Commonwealth headquarters, it will afford one of the choicest procession viewing sites. Those occupying the seats, whose plank and steel tube ingredients swath its exterior will see the pageantry three times as it passes through the square.

In front, Canadian service personnel will stand guard along a section of the route.

The building forms the central point of a cluster of many of Canada's commercial houses, including railway and shipping companies. Built in 1824, it was purchased by the Canadian government in 1925, revamped and then opened by King George V and Queen Mary. Norman Robertson, present high commissioner, is the eighth since the post was inaugurated in 1883.

A year younger and boasting long royal ties, Clarence House is a cream-colored, square building near the Mall, where the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret have just taken up residence.

Here, beside the dingy red of St. James's Palace, the then Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh set up housekeeping in 1949, before King George VI's death took them to Buckingham Palace.

It was built in 1825 for William IV, housed various royal figures and was occupied from 1901 to 1940 by the Duke of Connaught, once governor-general of Canada. Canadian troops taking over the traditional guard at Buckingham Palace June 5 will also stand sentry duty at Clarence House.

Watchdog of the four is New Scotland Yard, storied in crime fiction, home of the metropolitan police force "bobby" and never as heavy-handedly inept as the Sherlock Holmes tradition sometimes implies. A group of three buildings, "the Yard" fronts inscrutably on the Thames-side Victoria Embankment and is bordered at the rear by historic Parliament street.

Aptly enough, the procession will pass front and back of the premises responsible for split-second details of security, traffic and crowd control.

It has taken the vast task in stride, profiting from countless similar problems met since its organization 1842 with 12 detectives in its criminal investigation department.

Scotland Yard originated in part of old Whitehall Palace and moved to its present location in 1890. Its unusual name derives from the habit of visiting Scottish Kings of invariably occupying that part of the palace where the organization was born later.

Least prepossessing, but carrying the greatest national and international prestige, 10 Downing street is the brick office-home traditionally occupied by the sovereign's first minister since Disraeli set the precedent in 1877.

Downing street, 285 years old, opens on Whitehall and backs into St. James's Park, a short distance away. Its No. 1 occupant, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, could manage a distant view of the Coronation procession as it comes back from the abbey.

But, by virtue of his position as head of Her Majesty's government and main go-between for crown and responsible government, he will be an important part of it.

The house at 10 Downing street has never lived up to its high position in looks.

"Liver-colored and squalid" was one description given it—a sentiment endorsed by many of its illustrious tenants. Stanley Baldwin said it was dirty and "not convenient in any way."

And, although it was disliked, with one small bath up to 1908 and rarely affording enough room for all the belongings of the changing residents, its place in modern world history is undeniable.

Suffragettes stormed its doors. Crowds formed for good news and bad, peace and war. The old house accepted and accepts new and former inhabitants as the electors decree.

Here June 9 Sir Winston will entertain Commonwealth prime ministers in London for the ritual of Coronation and to talk about the economic troubles of their countries. Later in the year, if tradition prevails, Sir Winston will entertain the sovereign.

FOR SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL—Alec Guinness, British stage and film star, visits the property department at Stratford, Ont., where materials are being made for the Shakespearian festival to be staged there this summer and in which Guinness will play leading roles. At left is Jacqueline Cundall of the Old Vic Theatre, London, in charge of making the properties. They are examining chains of office to be worn in one of the plays, "Richard III."

Scilly Islands To Be Taxed For First Time

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Britain's 45 per cent income tax has finally come to the Isles of Scilly and the people of these sub-tropical bits of rock and soil off England's southwest tip are not at all happy about the situation.

Somehow, the Scilly (pronounced "silly") Islanders for centuries avoided the necessity of supporting the Crown. Whether this boon was the gift of some former monarch or just an oversight is obscure, but it was too good to last.

In his last budget message Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer noted the long tax exemption and declared that "a clause in the finance bill will bring this happy state of affair. to an end."

FLOWER PRICES

The tax ruling may increase London florists' prices, for the majority of Scilly Islanders make their living through the sale of flowers in England, particularly London.

The Scilly Islands are some 30 miles southwest of Land's End, and they enjoy the benign influence of the Gulf Stream. This climate makes them one vast flower garden. Jonquils, for instance, are ready for cutting months before they bloom in England. Some flowers grow the year round.

In the mild weather, palms and eucalyptus, even banana plants, flourish. Snow and frost are almost unknown, but salt spray riding the Atlantic gales all the way from North America can blight the blooms, and high, thick hedges have been planted to protect the gardens.

ABOUT 140 ISLANDS

About 140 islands compose the archipelago. Only five—St. Mary's St. Agnes, St. Martin's, Tresco, and Bryher—are inhabited. The total land area, including granite reefs visible only at low tide, is less than 50 square miles. Population is under 2,000.

For centuries the Scilly Islands were notorious as menaces to shipping. Many vessels piled up on their rocks before modern aids to navigation, including the famous Bishop Rock light on the westernmost reef, were installed.

A persistent legend names the islands as the remnants of "The Lost Land of Lyonesse" of Arthurian times. When Arthur was king, the story goes, the Scillies were connected with Cornwall by a land bridge that suddenly disappeared beneath the waves. Oldtimers say that in stormy weather the bells of inundated churches can be heard tolling.

Hope Queen Will Lift No Smoking Ban At Palace

By IAN McEWEN

LONDON (Reuters)—The Household Brigade, Queen's Elizabeth's bodyguard, wants the "no smoking" ban at one of Britain's royal palaces lifted next Friday in honor of Princess Margaret.

Story has it that no one has dared light a pipe, cigar or cigaret at Hampton Court, biggest of the Queen's palaces, since Sir Walter Raleigh introduced his "noxious weed" there for the first and last time nearly 400 years ago.

The brigade's officers, drawn from the aristocracy, hope to end the ban when Margaret, 22, attends their Coronation ball in the great hall of the palace.

Siding with the princess in a current hue and cry over her smoking in public, the officers have laid the problem on the doorstep of the Earl of Scarboruogh, the lord chamberlain, who heads the royal household.

Guests will watch Margaret carefuliy at the ball. If her cigaretholder appears, it will be the signal of royal consent, probably from the Queen herself. Everyone will then be able to ignore the "no smoking" notices scattered around the palace.

But officials at Hampton Court Palace, 15 miles west of London, are sure the rule will stand.

No member of the royal family now lives in the palace. Built in 1515, it has over 1,000 apartments. Some of them are occupied by "grace and favor" tenants—people who get an apartment in return for some special service to the sovereign or the state.

CORONATION PROCEDURE

Anointing of the monarch with sacred oil precedes presentation of royal regalia in the British coronation ceremony.

CHANCES are you have, because practically everything we eat — grains, vegetables, meat, milk, eggs — contains aluminum. This is not surprising, since one-eighth of the earth's crust is aluminum.

Aluminum is most readily available commercially, however, in the form of bauxite ore. Alcan ships this ore from South America to feed its pot lines at Arvida, Isle Maligne, Shawinigan Falls and Beauharnois, P. Que. When the huge new Kitimat development is completed in B.C., refined ore will be shipped up the West Coast from South American or other abundant sources. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

ST. LAURENT'S TRIBUTE MOVES QUEEN

Lauds Value Of British Institutions

Canadian Stresses Significance Of Commonwealth

LONDON —(CP)— An eloquent tribute to the "human value of British institutions" and to the vital significance of the Crown came today from Canada's Prime Minister St. Laurent, descendant of a race which, he said, "did not come into the Empire by choice."

The French-speaking prime minister spoke in seconding a vote of thanks to the Queen moved by Prime Minister Churchill at a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association luncheon in honor of Her Majesty. It was his first speech since arriving to attend the Coronation.

Mr. St. Laurent said:

"To outsiders it is frequently a great source of wonderment how an association like the Commonwealth, whose members are so widely scattered over the globe, who have such diverse interests, who comprise so many ethnic elements, can possibly survive as a harmonious international entity.

"If they who are thus perplexed could have been with us this afternoon they would be better able to understand why this achievement of the Commonwealth has been possible.

STRESS UNITY

"We never have had to overlook our differences, but we do endeavor, in our relations one with another, to emphasize those things which tend to unite rather than to divide.

"Of course, the unifying forces of the Commonwealth include our common parliamentary institutions, out of which this association has grown. But of the forces which bind us together, nothing is stronger than our common loyalty to the Crown and our devotion to our sovereign, even where the most formal expression of that devotion has to be found in the recognition of Her Majesty as the head of a Commonwealth broad enough to include a state whose people prefer it to be called a republic.

"That the Crown has today such high prestige and such unifying powers is due to the selflessness and the conscientious devotion to essential human values of our sovereigns of the last 100 years and more.

Lone Gunman Holds Up Bank

TORONTO (CP)—A tall gunman Tuesday waved an automatic as he herded a bank staff of seven into a vault before escaping from the suburban Newtonbrook branch of the Dominion Bank with an estimated $7,000.

He fled by getting on a bus heading north and leaving it at nearby Thornhill. He left his raincoat on the bus.

Police said the robbery was carefully planned and executed with a coolness that marks it as the work of a professional.

The man entered the bank a few minutes before closing time and waited until the last customer had left. He then pulled the automatic pistol from his pocket.

"All right, everybody get in the vault. I'm not fooling," he shouted.

He herded the staff into the vault, collected the money and fled.

Onlookers Get Butterflies In Stomach

Pilots Gasp At Kelly's Flying

NORTH LUFFENHAM, Eng.—(CP)—Fellow pilots here say Flt.-Lt. Dean Kelly, son of Mrs. Mary Kelly and the late Noble Kelly, who resides in North Monaghan Township, near Peterborough, Ontario, puts his Sabre jets through manoeuvres which the manufacturer never intended that the plane withstand.

How many times has he cracked the sonic barrier? Kelly answers this way:

"I haven't any idea. Dropping the boom (breaking the sound barrier) is so common now that you might as well count the number of times you raise or lower your wheels.

"I was reading in the paper that some guy in California has dropped the boom 60 times. I was thinking he can't have much to do if he counts the number of times he's gone through."

ACE AEROBATIC PILOT

Kelly, 32-year-old ace aerobatic pilot of the RCAF's No. 1 fighter wing, is a big, black-haired man with wrists like stanchions who almost blushes when somebody speaks to him. He has been flying for 12 years, including Spitfires in Malta early in the Second World War.

Kelly gags aside almost every question about his flying ability. "Any of the other pilots here can do what I do," he says.

That's not the way the other pilots tell it.

"He pulls off stuff I wouldn't even attempt," says FO. Len Pappas of Toronto, who won the Distinguished Flying Cross in Bomber Command during the Second World War.

During the recent visit of the Duke of Edinburgh, Kelly used only a small end of the field to make a tight turn at nearly 700 miles an hour, 50 feet above the deck. Other RCAF pilots claim this was never matched by the late John Derry, British jet ace.

TRICKY LANDING

One trick of Kelly's is to do a slow loop over the field, come out of it with wheels down and land immediately. It's a stomach-lurching performance, not for Kelly but for the spectator.

Other pilots say his timing is uncanny. A matter of moving the stick a fraction of a second too late could cost him his life. Wearing a G-suit helps Kelly withstand the enormous pressure on the body in lightning turns. It helps prevent all the blood in the body rushing to the feet and consequent blackout by the pilot.

Cracking the sound barrier means beating the speed of sound—760 miles an hour at sea level, less at higher altitudes. A boom accompanies it. Kelly sometimes throttles back and scoots through the sound barrier a number of times in a few seconds, resulting in a series of booms.

There have been so many complaints from surrounding residents here, however, that pilots now rarely dash through the sonic barrier.

How does Kelly's English wife take her husband's aerobatics?

"It leaves me a bit weak at the stomach," she says. "I don't see him operate often. Maybe it's just as well."

Fear RCAF Bomber Crashes

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ground parties moved today into the Oregon wilderness believed to have been skimmed by an RCAF bomber in its last terrifying minutes of flight. They were checking on the report that the plane, carrying 10 men, apparently crashed after shearing into the 140-foot trunk of a dead tree. Meanwhile, in Vancouver, the RCAF released the names of nine of the crew members. The plane was on a scheduled 1,200-mile flight from its Vancouver Island base to San Diego when it disappeared after reporting its position off the southern Oregon coast.

Seach swung to the coastal Port Orford area of the state late Tuesday after citizens told of hearing a low-flying plane and the still more ominous report concerning the possible crash.

George Montgomery of Salmon Mountain, 17 miles east of Port Orford, told of a multi-engined plane apparently crashing after striking the tree.

GIVES TIME

This happened, he said, between 2 and 3 a. m. Tuesday. The missing Lancaster was last heard from at 2:22 a. m., several hours after

Says U.S. Must Provide World Economic Leadership

TORONTO (CP)—L. Dana Wilgress, Canada's deputy external affairs minister, said today the United States represents one-half of the world's economic power and warned that the free world may split into bickering trade blocs if the U.S. does not provide economic leadership in the struggle against Soviet communism.

A crucial turning point in American policy, he indicated, may "happen in the next few weeks."

A great deal of the strength of the free world depended on the survival of the 34-country tariff-cutting pact, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. But the survival of GATT depended on renewal of the U. S. Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, now before Congress.

PACT JUSTIFIED

The pact has "thoroughly justified its existence," but its fate depends on what happens in the U.S. in the "next few weeks," Mr Wilgress said in a 5,000-word speech prepared for the annual convention of [illegible] to attend and his speech was read by Russell McCormick, CMA's tariff department manager.

Passage of President Eisenhower's requested one-year renewal of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act was "vital," even more important than adoption by Congress of the U.S. customs simplification bill. GATT would die if the Trade Agreements Act is not renewed, Mr. Wilgress said.

Sovereign Honored At Luncheon

Premiers Give Pledge To Go Forward With Queen In Reign

LONDON (CP)—The Queen met today with the elder statesmen of the far-reaching British Commonwealth and received their pledge to go forward with her "in a spirit of adventure."

It was the first time that representatives of the Commonwealth parliaments feted a British sovereign about to be crowned, the occasion was a luncheon at Westminster Hall.

Standing in the hall where King Charles I was condemned to death for treason 300 years ago, the 27-year-old Queen was reverently received by 750 guests including Prime Minister St. Laurent of Canada and 69 members of Commonwealth legislatures.

QUITE AT EASE

A diminutive but dominant figure among her counsellors, she appeared completely at ease as she promised to carry on the traditions of her father, King George VI.

"It is a stirring thought that all these legislatures are descended from the assembly which first met under this roof nearly seven centuries ago," she said in a brief response to the homage of the Commonwealth representatives.

"We stand here in the Palace of Westminster which is the home of the mother of Parliaments. Of the many ties linking this family of nations not the least is that system of parliamentary government which is common to us all."

Elizabeth, dressed in a blue ensemble, sat with the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Queen's address was broadcast to all Commonwealth countries.

THEME OF LUNCHEON

The birth of a new "Elizabethan Age" was the theme of the luncheon, and Harold Holt, the chairman and Australia's minister of labor and immigration, gave this pledge:

"Your Commonwealth is responding, as you have counselled us, to the spirit of adventure. We feel the urge to develop our great

Noted Violinist Spalding Dies

NEW YORK (AP)—Albert Spalding, one of the world's leading violinists and a noted composer and author, died suddenly Tuesday night of a cerebral haemorrhage. He was 64.

Spalding, a member of the famous Chicago sporting goods family, collapsed at his New York apartment as he was dressing to go out.

The violinist retired from the concert stage in 1950.

At the time of his retirement, he had written some 60 works for violin, 25 for piano, 30 for voice and four each for chamber music and full orchestra.

He also wrote a novel, "a Fiddle, a Sword and a Lady."

Mayor In Jail

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP)—Edward C. Peirce, 58-year-old mayor of this textile city of 109,000, was behind bars today under a four-year sentence on gambling conspiracy charges. Peirce proclaimed his innocence from the outset. Before he was sentenced Tuesday he said he would attempt to conduct his mayoralty duties from his cell.

Taft Says U.S. Should Forget U.N. In Korea

CINCINNATI (AP)—In a surprise major foreign policy speech, Senator Robert Taft said Tuesday night the United States "might as well forget the United Nations as far as the Korean war is concerned."

"I think we should do our best now to negotiate this truce," he said, "and if we fail, then let England and our other Allies know that we are withdrawing from all further peace negotiations in Korea."

The Republican Senate majority leader added:

"I believe we might as well abandon any idea of working with the United Nations in the East and reserve to ourselves a completely free hand."

NOT SATISFACTORY

Taft's speech was delivered by his son, Robert A. Taft, Jr., at a dinner in the senator's honor. The Ohio Republican still is in a local hospital for a checkup.

Taft said "even the best truce under present conditions will be extremely unsatisfactory." It would divide Korea along an unnatural line, creating an unstable condition likely to bring war again at any moment.

And, said Taft, a prime force on the Senate foreign relations committee, it would "release a million Chinese soldiers, who no doubt will promptly be moved down to southern China for use against Chiang Kai-shek or against the French in Indo-China."

SHOULD HAVE INSISTED

He said that "from the beginning, we should have insisted on a general peace negotiations with China, including a unification of Korea under free Koreans, and a pledge against further expansion in Southeast Asia."

Taft said he thinks that the United States "in any event" is bound to the policy of preventing Commuist aggression where it occurs and where it is within the means of the United States to stop it.

Lower Income Tax Deductions

OTTAWA (CP)—The revenue department gave Canadians an official reminder Wednesday that lower income tax deductions start July 1.

The department issued a new table of tax deductions at source.

The effect is to slash approximately 11 per cent off the present deductions in keeping with the Feb. 19 budget.

Liberals Capture N.S. Election, But Majority Cut

HALIFAX (CP)—The Liberals were returned to power in Nova Scotia's general election Tuesday, but Progressive Conservative gains cut their majority in the Legislature by six seats, the slimmest since the party started its reign in 1933. The results, compared to the 1949 election:

	1953	1949
Liberals	22	28
PCs	13	7
CCF	2	2
Total	37	37

Following the 1949 election the Progressive Conservatives gained a seat from the Liberals in a by-election made necessary when the voting in one riding was declared void.

All three party leaders—Premier Angus L. Macdonald of the Liberals, Robert L. (Bob) Stanfield, 39, of the Progressive Conservatives and Michael McDonald, 43, of the CCF—were re-elected Tuesday.

The popular - vote tabulation showed the Liberals with 49.7 per cent of the total. The Progressive Conservatives had 42.9 per cent.

In 1949, the Liberals won with 51 per cent of the vote. The Progressive Conservatives had 39 per cent.

STRONGEST OPPOSITION

Progressive Conservatives, forming their strongest Opposition since losing the government to Mr. Macdonald in 1933, will have a strong voice in the new legislature.

With 22 of the 37 seats, the Liberals will lose one vote in naming a Speaker. That gives them 21 votes against 15 for the Progressive Conservatives and CCF.

The make-up of the House, however, may change with recounts, and at least two seem possibilities. In Hants East, PC Ernest Ettinger retained his seat by one vote and in Pictou West, Liberal Stewart Proudfoot was returned by five votes.

Makes Contractor Pay Dissatisfied Customer

QUEBEC (CP) — Mr. Justice Oscar Boulanger of Quebec superior court believes workers have lost their taste for any pride in doing a good job— and he ordered a house contractor to pay $400 to a dissatisfied home-owner.

The outspoken judge ruled Tuesday in the case of Laurent Samson who sought damages from Lorenzo Demers.

Demers built a home for Samson for $11,200. Samson alleged rain seeped in through the walls of his new home.

Said the judge:

"Apparently petitioner was victim of our great national vices—careless work and lack of conscientiousness. It's an attitude of 'let it go, it's not my job'."

Masefield To Write Only Short Poem

ABINGDON, England (Reuters) —John Masefield, Britain's unconventional poet laureate, will not produce the traditional ode expected from him for the Coronation June 2.

Masefield said Tuesday he is writing only a short poem.

It is considered the duty of the poet laureate to write an ode—a poem of exaltation intended to be sung—on big royal occasions. The laureate gets £100 a year for his poetic services.

South Koreans Call Plan 'Dishonorable'

SEOUL (AP)—Irate South Korean assemblymen today called for withdrawal of the United Nations' latest plan to break the Korean war prisoner deadlock. They called it a "dishonorable and surrendering truce."

An Assembly delegation asked for a meeting with Lt.-Gen. William K. Harrison, chief Allied truce delegate, to demand that the proposal be scrapped. Harrison said he would try to arrange the meeting Thursday.

In many capitals of the free world, the UN proposal drew favorable comment. Both Britain and India warmly endorsed it.

After a meeting with South Korean President Syngman Rhee and other top Republic of Korea officials, Assembly Vice-chairman Soon Chi Yung implied that pressure from Britain was partly responsible for the proposal, which he denounced as a "dishonorable and surrendering truce."

SHOULD GO HOME

"British troops in Korea should pack and go home," he said.

Prime Minister Churchill said his government and other United Nations were consulted in preparing the proposal.

The plan was handed to the Reds Monday in a secret session at Panmunjom. The talks were recessed until June 1.

Reliable South Korean officials disclosed general provisions of the plan Tuesday.

The RoK government was reported particularly irate at the UN decision to hand balky North Korean prisoners to a five-country neutral commission for disposition.

An earlier Allied plan—rejected by the Communists—would have turned the North Koreans free as civilians immediately after an armistice.

Yoon and other South Korean assemblymen in an interview today said the new plan "ignored the sovereignty of Korea."

Engine Derailed Two Injured

HAMILTON (CP)—A light locomotive and coal tender, leading a heavily-loaded Simcoe-bound CNR freight train up Hamilton mountain from the Ferguson avenue yards was derailed this morning as it entered the switch intersection of Ferguson avenue and Rebecca street. Two of its three crew members were taken to hospital.

Now in hospital suffering from scalding and lacerations are Richard Gay, 42, the fireman and Murray Calder, 28, brakeman.

The remainder of the 30-car train remained on the tracks, although a heavy second locomotive was pulled off the tracks.

The engineer of the tipped engine, Charles Penfold, 52, of Aldershot, said the switch was [illegible] gone straight ahead without trouble. He could see no reason for the derailment.

The accident happened over the switch.

Death Masks of Drake, Sea Dogs Spooky

DUDLEY, Eng. (Reuters)—The folks who live next door to Sam Humphries have complained to the town fathers about the Coronation decorations in his front garden. They protested that the garden looks like a graveyard.

Disembodied heads leer out at you from between the sweet peas and the Brussel sprouts, they complained.

Sam, a 70-year-old retired bricklayer, was a little hurt. He is proud of his Coronation decorations, thinks them much more fitting than his neighbors' flags and bunting.

He wanted something different that would last, he explained.

Working from portraits in history books, he made life-size plaster "death masks" of Sir Francis Drake, Sir Walter Raleigh and other Elizabethan sea dogs.

He placed them in the front garden. Near them he erected a concrete slab shaped like a grave headstone. On it were the crown and a cross, "representing peace."

Then Sam gave his house a facelift. He painted the front of it a vivid green and set up two plaques in honor of the two queens named Elizabeth. And over his front door he plastered a concrete inscription reading: "Endue Thy ministers with righteousness."

When he had finished his labors, Sam sat back and was pleased.

Not so his neighbors. When they woke up one morning and saw Drake apparently nodding to Raleigh among the sweet peas, they were aghast.

"But what really shook us was seeing Sam's garden in the moonlight," said one. "It looked positively spooky."

The town hall promised to send an expert to see whether Sam's "cemetery" is objectionable.

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — This capital of the Republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina gives in an almost unbelievable way a snapshot of the trials and strains and divisions of the Yugoslav nation.

All over the city are the mosques and graceful minarets to which the faithful Moslems are still called to prayer half a dozen times a day——for Turkey founded Sarajevo in the 15th century and only gave it up in 1878.

Yet matching in dignity are the stately Russian-styled onion-domed towers of the Serbian Orthodox Church—and though the Bosnians have no great love for the Serbians they are mindful that the capital of Yugoslavia, Belgrade, is in Serbia and that a good portion of the leaders of their own republic, or province, are Serbian.

The Roman Catholic cathedral, however, enjoys a commanding position on the main street and the masses held there Sunday revealed no obvious trace of the [illegible] Yugoslav government [illegible] the Vatican.

But superimposed upon this background of racial, religious and political problems, Sarajevo lays before the eye almost equally impressive contrasts.

The city is cradled by mountains which today are not only snow-capped but snow-bottomed for it snowed heavily here this morning. A bare 15 miles into the hills discloses peasant farms wrestling against rock and poverty. A cow or goat on a leash is great wealth and the carts and farm gear are roughly hewn out of trees and assembled with hides and stubborn vines.

CONTRASTS

Within the city a population of about 140,000 walks in the middle of the stony streets in defiance of the very few who drive trucks or cars at a pace of madness. The Turks and then the Austrians built government buildings and barracks here but their imperial wealths are now gone. The cement peels off the buildings. The courtyards of the fine palaces and estates ring cheerily with the shouts of children whose families have moved in in tenement fashion. It is not their fault that they were kept under foreign heel for centuries and now have neither the income nor the training to live in palaces.

You will find an old restaurant where a Turk who must be a thousand years old grinds the coffee by lifting a great blunt-ended crowbar six or eight inches in the air and letting it fall point down upon the coffee beans resting at the bottom of a massive stone jar. You will find a hotel posing in bitter rift between the Communist Western modernity but concealing the most primitive facilities. Duke Flies From Palace

Helicopter Takes Off From Buckingham Lawn

LONDON (AP)—The Duke of Edinburgh took off in a helicopter from Buckingham Palace lawn again today to review colonial troops at Woolwich. He made his first hop off the royal grass Tuesday for a similar mission.

A palace spokesman said the duke had the Queen's approval although some of the more staid officials have frowned at his air gallivanting. Crowds outside the gates cheered as the helicopter rose into the air.

Danger?

A palace official explained "it is felt that the duke is taking no greater risk than travelling by road."

Hoorahs came, too, from the air-conscious Britons who have nicknamed him "Duke in a Hurry."

"It is a startling and yet completely sensible innovation," commented Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express. "The duke's bold example should stir up the thinking of all those who are concerned with the problems in aviation."

The ministry of civil aviation explained the duke isn't breaking any laws governing low flying over the capital.

"Planes normally must not fly less than 1,000 feet above he highest obstacle on the route," a spokesman said, "but the rules were waived."

The duke himself has won his wings. He's travelling about, however, in a helicopter equipped with duel controls piloted by Cmdr. H. R. Spedding of the Royal Navy air arm.

ST. LAURENT'S TRIBUTE MOVES QUEEN

Lauds Value Of British Institutions

Canadian Stresses Significance Of Commonwealth

LONDON —(CP)— An eloquent tribute to the "human value of British institutions" and to the vital significance of the Crown came today from Canada's Prime Minister St. Laurent, descendant of a race which, he said, "did not come into the Empire by choice."

The French-speaking prime minister spoke in seconding a vote of thanks to the Queen moved by Prime Minister Churchill at a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association luncheon in honor of Her Majesty. It was his first speech since arriving to attend the Coronation.

Mr. St. Laurent said:

"To outsiders it is frequently a great source of wonderment how an association like the Commonwealth, whose members are so widely scattered over the globe, who have such diverse interests, who comprise so many ethnic elements, can possibly survive as a harmonious international entity.

"If they who are thus perplexed could have been with us this afternoon they would be better able to understand why this achievement of the Commonwealth has been possible.

STRESS UNITY

"We never have had to overlook our differences, but we do endeavor, in our relations one with another, to emphasize those things which tend to unite rather than to divide.

"Of course, the unifying forces of the Commonwealth include our common parliamentary institutions, out of which this association has grown. But of the forces which bind us together, nothing is stronger than our common loyalty to the Crown and our devotion to our sovereign, even where the most formal expression of that devotion has to be found in the recognition of Her Majesty as the head of a Commonwealth broad enough to include a state whose people prefer it to be called a republic.

"That the Crown has today such high prestige and such unifying powers is due to the selflessness and the conscientious devotion to essential human values of our sovereigns of the last 100 years and more.

Lone Gunman Holds Up Bank

TORONTO (CP)—A tall gunman Tuesday waved an automatic as he herded a bank staff of seven into a vault before escaping from the suburban Newtonbrook branch of the Dominion Bank with an estimated $7,000.

He fled by getting on a bus heading north and leaving it at nearby Thornhill. He left his raincoat on the bus.

Police said the robbery was carefully planned and executed with a coolness that marks it as the work of a professional.

The man entered the bank a few minutes before closing time and waited until the last customer had left. He then pulled the automatic pistol from his pocket.

"All right, everybody get in the vault. I'm not fooling," he shouted.

He herded the staff into the vault, collected the money and fled.

Onlookers Get Butterflies In Stomach

Pilots Gasp At Kelly's Flying

NORTH LUFFENHAM, Eng.—(CP)—Fellow pilots here say Flt.-Lt. Dean Kelly, son of Mrs. Mary Kelly and the late Noble Kelly, who resides in North Monaghan Township, near Peterborough, Ontario, puts his Sabre jets through manoeuvres which the manufacturer never intended that the plane withstand.

How many times has he cracked the sonic barrier? Kelly answers this way:

"I haven't any idea. Dropping the boom (breaking the sound barrier) is so common now that you might as well count the number of times you raise or lower your wheels.

"I was reading in the paper that some guy in California has dropped the boom 60 times. I was thinking he can't have much to do if he counts the number of times he's gone through."

ACE AEROBATIC PILOT

Kelly, 32-year-old ace aerobatic pilot of the RCAF's No. 1 fighter wing, is a big, black-haired man with wrists like stanchions who almost blushes when somebody speaks to him. He has been flying for 12 years, including Spitfires in Malta early in the Second World War.

Kelly gags aside almost every question about his flying ability. "Any of the other pilots here can do what I do," he says.

That's not the way the other pilots tell it.

"He pulls off stuff I wouldn't even attempt," says FO. Len Pappas of Toronto, who won the Distinguished Flying Cross in Bomber Command during the Second World War.

During the recent visit of the Duke of Edinburgh, Kelly used only a small end of the field to make a tight turn at nearly 700 miles an hour, 50 feet above the deck. Other RCAF pilots claim this was never matched by the late John Derry, British jet ace.

TRICKY LANDING

One trick of Kelly's is to do a slow loop over the field, come out of it with wheels down and land immediately. It's a stomach-lurching performance, not for Kelly but for the spectator.

Other pilots say his timing is uncanny. A matter of moving the stick a fraction of a second too late could cost him his life. Wearing a G-suit helps Kelly withstand the enormous pressure on the body in lightning turns. It helps prevent all the blood in the body rushing to the feet and consequent blackout by the pilot.

Cracking the sound barrier means beating the speed of sound—760 miles an hour at sea level, less at higher altitudes. A boom accompanies it. Kelly sometimes throttles back and scoots through the sound barrier a number of times in a few seconds, resulting in a series of booms.

There have been so many complaints from surrounding residents here, however, that pilots now rarely dash through the sonic barrier.

How does Kelly's English wife take her husband's aerobatics?

"It leaves me a bit weak at the stomach," she says. "I don't see him operate often. Maybe it's just as well."

Fear RCAF Bomber Crashes

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ground parties moved today into the Oregon wilderness believed to have been skimmed by an RCAF bomber in its last terrifying minutes of flight. They were checking on the report that the plane, carrying 10 men, apparently crashed after shearing into the 140-foot trunk of a dead tree. Meanwhile, in Vancouver, the RCAF released the names of nine of the crew members. The plane was on a scheduled 1,200-mile flight from its Vancouver Island base to San Diego when it disappeared after reporting its position off the southern Oregon coast.

Seach swung to the coastal Port Orford area of the state late Tuesday after citizens told of hearing a low-flying plane and the still more ominous report concerning the possible crash.

George Montgomery of Salmon Mountain, 17 miles east of Port Orford, told of a multi-engined plane apparently crashing after striking the tree.

This happened, he said, between 2 and 3 a. m. Tuesday. The missing Lancaster was last heard from at 2:22 a. m., several hours after

Says U.S. Must Provide World Economic Leadership

TORONTO (CP)—L. Dana Wilgress, Canada's deputy external affairs minister, said today the United States represents one-half of the world's economic power and warned that the free world may split into bickering trade blocs if the U.S. does not provide economic leadership in the struggle against Soviet communism.

A crucial turning point in American policy, he indicated, may "happen in the next few weeks."

A great deal of the strength of the free world depended on the survival of the 34-country tariff-cutting pact, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. But the survival of GATT depended on renewal of the U. S. Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, now before Congress.

PACT JUSTIFIED

The pact has "thoroughly justified its existence," but its fate depends on what happens in the U.S. in the "next few weeks," Mr Wilgress said in a 5,000-word speech prepared for the annual convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Wilgress was unable to attend and his speech was read by Russell McCormick, CMA's tariff department manager.

Passage of President Eisenhower's requested one-year renewal of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act was "vital," even more important than adoption by Congress of the U.S. customs simplification bill. GATT would die if the Trade Agreements Act is not renewed, Mr. Wilgress said.

Sovereign Honored At Luncheon

Premiers Give Pledge To Go Forward With Queen In Reign

LONDON (CP)—The Queen met today with the elder statesmen of the far-reaching British Commonwealth and received their pledge to go forward with her "in a spirit of adventure."

It was the first time that representatives of the Commonwealth parliaments feted a British sovereign about to be crowned, the occasion was a luncheon at Westminster Hall.

Standing in the hall where King Charles I was condemned to death for treason 300 years ago, the 27-year-old Queen was reverently received by 750 guests including Prime Minister St. Laurent of Canada and 69 members of Commonwealth legislatures.

QUITE AT EASE

A diminutive but dominant figure among her counsellors, she appeared completely at ease as she promised to carry on the traditions of her father, King George VI.

"It is a stirring thought that all these legislatures are descended from the assembly which first met under this roof nearly seven centuries ago," she said in a brief response to the homage of the Commonwealth representatives.

"We stand here in the Palace of Westminster which is the home of the mother of Parliaments. Of the many ties linking this family of nations not the least is that system of parliamentary government which is common to us all."

Elizabeth, dressed in a blue ensemble, sat with the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Queen's address was broadcast to all Commonwealth countries.

THEME OF LUNCHEON

The birth of a new "Elizabethan Age" was the theme of the luncheon, and Harold Holt, the chairman and Australia's minister of labor and immigration, gave this pledge:

"Your Commonwealth is responding, as you have counselled us, to the spirit of adventure. We feel the urge to develop our great

Noted Violinist Spalding Dies

NEW YORK (AP)—Albert Spalding, one of the world's leading violinists and a noted composer and author, died suddenly Tuesday night of a cerebral haemorrhage. He was 64.

Spalding, a member of the famous Chicago sporting goods family, collapsed at his New York apartment as he was dressing to go out.

The violinist retired from the concert stage in 1950.

At the time of his retirement, he had written some 60 works for violin, 25 for piano, 30 for voice and four each for chamber music and full orchestra.

He also wrote a novel, "a Fiddle, a Sword and a Lady."

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP)—Edward C. Peirce, 58-year-old mayor of this textile city of 109,000, was behind bars today under a four-year sentence on gambling conspiracy charges. Peirce proclaimed his innocence from the outset. Before he was sentenced Tuesday he said he would attempt to conduct his mayoralty duties from his cell.

Taft Says U.S. Should Forget U.N. In Korea

CINCINNATI (AP)—In a surprise major foreign policy speech, Senator Robert Taft said Tuesday night the United States "might as well forget the United Nations as far as the Korean war is concerned."

"I think we should do our best now to negotiate this truce," he said, "and if we fail, then let England and our other Allies know that we are withdrawing from all further peace negotiations in Korea."

The Republican Senate majority leader added:

"I believe we might as well abandon any idea of working with the United Nations in the East and reserve to ourselves a completely free hand."

NOT SATISFACTORY

Taft's speech was delivered by his son, Robert A. Taft, Jr., at a dinner in the senator's honor. The Ohio Republican still is in a local hospital for a checkup.

Taft said "even the best truce under present conditions will be extremely unsatisfactory." It would divide Korea along an unnatural line, creating an unstable condition likely to bring war again at any moment.

And, said Taft, a prime force on the Senate foreign relations committee, it would "release a million Chinese soldiers, who no doubt will promptly be moved down to southern China for use against Chiang Kai-shek or against the French in Indo-China."

SHOULD HAVE INSISTED

He said that "from the beginning, we should have insisted on a general peace negotiations with China, including a unification of Korea under free Koreans, and a pledge against further expansion in Southeast Asia."

Taft said he thinks that the United States "in any event" is bound to the policy of preventing Communist aggression where it occurs and where it is within the means of the United States to stop it.

Lower Income Tax Deductions

OTTAWA (CP)—The revenue department gave Canadians an official reminder Wednesday that lower income tax deductions start July 1.

Liberals Capture N.S. Election, But Majority Cut

HALIFAX (CP)—The Liberals were returned to power in Nova Scotia's general election Tuesday, but Progressive Conservative gains cut their majority in the Legislature by six seats, the slimmest since the party started its reign in 1933. The results, compared to the 1949 election:

	1953	1949
Liberals	22	28
PCs	13	7
CCF	2	2
Total	37	37

Following the 1949 election the Progressive Conservatives gained a seat from the Liberals in a by-election made necessary when the voting in one riding was declared void.

All three party leaders—Premier Angus L. Macdonald of the Liberals, Robert L. (Bob) Stanfield, 39, of the Progressive Conservatives and Michael McDonald, 43, of the CCF—were re-elected Tuesday.

The popular - vote tabulation showed the Liberals with 49.7 per cent of the total. The Progressive Conservatives had 42.9 per cent.

In 1949, the Liberals won with 51 per cent of the vote. The Progressive Conservatives had 39 per cent.

STRONGEST OPPOSITION

Progressive Conservatives, forming their strongest Opposition since losing the government to Mr. Macdonald in 1933, will have a strong voice in the new legislature.

With 22 of the 37 seats, the Liberals will lose one vote in naming a Speaker. That gives them 21 votes against 15 for the Progressive Conservatives and CCF.

For there is a law in most of Yugoslavia which says that all vehicles approaching a corner must honk three times if turning to the left, twice if turning to the right, and once if straight ahead. It is bedlam, but at that it is not as annoying as the sight of half-trained drivers who use the horn as a whip and exhibit a Balkan disdain of human life. Duke Flies From Palace

Helicopter Takes Off From Buckingham Lawn

LONDON (AP)—The Duke of Edinburgh took off in a helicopter from Buckingham Palace lawn again today to review colonial troops at Woolwich. He made his first hop off the royal grass Tuesday for a similar mission.

A palace spokesman said the duke had the Queen's approval although some of the more staid officials have frowned at his air gallivanting. Crowds outside the gates cheered as the helicopter rose into the air.

Danger?

A palace official explained "it is felt that the duke is taking no greater risk than travelling by road."

Hoorahs came, too, from the air-conscious Britons who have nicknamed him "Duke in a Hurry."

"It is a startling and yet completely sensible innovation," commented Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express. "The duke's bold example should stir up the thinking of all those who are concerned with the problems in aviation."

The ministry of civil aviation explained the duke isn't breaking any laws governing low flying over the capital.

"Planes normally must not fly less than 1,000 feet above he highest obstacle on the route," a spokesman said, "but the rules were waived."

The duke himself has won his wings. He's travelling about, however, in a helicopter equipped with duel controls piloted by Cmdr. H. R. Spedding of the Royal Navy air arm.

Phone, Hydro Services Not Repaired

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Telephone and hydro services were still knocked out in the London and Stratford areas early today after Monday night's rain and high winds, a Canadian Press survey showed.

The storm, which cut across Huron county from Lake Huron, flattened barns, damaged farms and orchards and uprooted trees. Telephone crews worked round the clock to repair lines near London and in Morris township.

Hydro gangs from Stratford, Lisowel, Clinton, Elmira, Exeter, Wingham and Hamilton went out, but power is expected to be out in some areas for about three days.

CLEARING SKIES

Clearing skies coming across Ontario from the Windsor area were predicted by the weather bureau at Malton. The storm was reported to be moving rapidly eastwards.

The storm, which caused more than $1,000,000 damage, struck inland at Nile, Carlow, Blyth, Belgrave, Brussels, Cranbrook, Ethel and Wingham. Three houses in the Stratford district were knocked about and one church was badly damaged.

Hail affected some areas. Rain was heaviest at Hamilton, which reported 3.18 inches, a record for 24 hours. Streets and basements in the city were flooded.

Communications were cut in many districts and in some instances telephone calls from the least hit areas in Huron county were re-routed Tuesday night through Toronto to towns and cities south of the county.

Nehru Endorses New Truce Offer

NEW DELHI (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru said Tuesday he has seen and endorsed the latest United Nations proposals on Korea, which he described as the closest so far to an eightpoint plan advanced by the Communists.

Addressing a mass meeting, he said he found both sides so close to each other on the prisoner of war issue he could see no reason why differences should persist. He added he would be surprised if a truce agreement was delayed much longer.

The United Nations proposals have not been officially made public. Negotiations at Panmunjom were recessed after Monday's meeting until June 1—apparently at Allied request so Red negotiators can send the new UN plan to Peiping or Moscow for high level consideration.

Nehru previously backed the Communists' proposals. In a foreign policy statement May 15, he said those proposals closely approximated the Indian-authored Korea resolution adopted by the UN general assembly last Dec. 3. At that time the Indian plan was rejected by Moscow and Peiping.

Stay Of Execution Refused Rosenbergs

WASHINGTON (CP)—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted A-bomb spies, Tuesday were denied a stay of execution.

The denial was announced by Chief Justice Fred Vinson of the U. S. Supreme Court and followed the Supreme Court's announcement of Monday in which the high tribunal for the third time refused to review the trial of the Rosenbergs.

The stay petition turned down Tuesday repeated allegations that perjured testimony was given at the Rosenbergs' trial and their death sentences were excessive.

Predicts Bright Future For Canadian Economy

TORONTO (CP)—G. K. Sheils, CMG, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, today predicted a bright future for the Canadian economy—even if defence spending is sharply reduced.

In a speech prepared for the 82nd annual general meeting of the association here, he answered the question: "What is going to happen to Canada's economy when the support of defence orders is withdrawn?"

He said he does not believe that Western statesmen are so gullible as to cancel or substantially reduce arms spending "merely because the Kremlin is making certain conciliatory gestures."

But if arms spending were cut off "the end result would be tremendously beneficial."

The federal budget for 1953 earmarks 45 per cent of all tax revenues for defence purposes—roughly about $2,000,000,000. Without defence spending, the government could effect a substantial reduction in taxes.

COULD INCREASE PURCHASES

"The relief which would thus be granted to the consumer taxpayer would make it possible for him to increase his purchases of a wide range of articles." Manufacturers would have more funds to expand and reorganize to meet the increased demand.

If defence spending were cut sharply in the United States, a similar reduction in taxes might be delayed because the U.S. now is spending more money than it collects in taxes, he said.

U.S. manufacturers then might ask for more "protection" to keep out foreign—including Canadian—goods and try to sell more goods in Canada. If U.S. "protection" involved the use of "internationally illegal quotas or prohibitions" the Canadian government "must act—not content itself with writing notes of protest."

NO SUGGESTIONS

Dr. Sheils did not suggest what specified action should be taken.

Canada had "lived well within the spirit and the letter of her undertakings" in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, but the United States continued to use its Customs Act to prevent "any serious competition from Canada or any other 'foreign' nation."

Canada should "at the very least, 'mark time' in her march toward the Elysian fields of international free trade until the stragglers caught up with her."

At Myrtle Point, 30 miles northeast of Port Orford, there were a number of reports of a low-flying plane and the United States Coast Guard was attempting to plot its route from telephoned reports of those who heard it.

A thunderstorm had cracked along the Oregon coast shortly before the Lancaster disappeared and continued unsettled weather made conditions unfavorable for searching.

Captain of the plane, which was en route to California to participate in joint exercises, was FO. Kenneth Edgar Elsden of Kye Bay, B. C. The co-pilot was FO. Harry Charles Maddick of St. John's, Nfld.

OTHERS IN CREW

The other seven crew members identified were: FO. Robert James Calder, Dundas, Ont.; FO. David Fair Ellis, Bienfait, Sask.; FO. Joseph Bourgeois, Verdun, Que.; FO. John William Brownie, New Westminster, B. C.; Cpl. Donald Gordon Spence, Comox, and LACs. [illegible] and William Henry Waldron, both of Puntledge, B.C.

The search was being directed by U.S. authorities, the coast guard putting nine planes in the air despite unfavorable flying weather.

Find Stamps Disappointing

OTTAWA (CP)—The post office department, somewhat discouraged by its new postage stamps of the Queen, is planning a new set.

The stamps currently on sale in one-to-five-cent denominations, and the special Coronation four-center which goes on sale Monday have drawn numerous complaints and considerable criticism, Walter Turnbull, deputy postmaster-general, said Tuesday.

"We can't say we're entirely happy about the new stamps," he said in an interview.

The department doesn't plan to withdraw the issue and has approximately a six-months supply. The stamps probably will last until November, but it may be well on into the new year before there is a new Queen Elizabeth issue to replace them.

Ont. Assessment Act Criticized At Meeting

HAMILTON (CP)—Criticism of Ontario's Assessment Act was voiced today by Martin H. Laird of St. Catharines, president of the Association of Assessing Officers of Ontario, as its annual meeting opened here.

His address followed an invocation and welcomes from acting Mayor Leslie Parker and Warden William K. Dunham of Wentworth county. M. G. E. Danby of Sault Ste. Marie responded.

Mr. Laird criticized Section 33 of the act for telling assessors to assess land at its present actual value but at the same time suggesting that other factors, such as normal rental value, normal resale value and present use, be taken into consideration.

resources, and as the young countries of our Commonwealth grow in strength, so we strengthen the whole.

"The greatest days of this Commonwealth are still ahead of us. May it be in the reign of our Queen Elizabeth that we attain them."

The Queen was moved as Prime Minister St. Laurent toasted her in these words:

"That the Crown has today such high prestige and such unifying power is due to a selflessness and the conscientious devotion to essential human values of our sovereigns of the last 100 years and more."

ONE QUEEN

Prime Minister Churchill, proposing a vote of thanks to Elizabeth, said "here today in this hall we salute 50 or 60 Parliaments—and one Queen."

Churchill, whose own political career began under another queen—Victoria—a half-century ago, was in a happy mood as he went on:

"Some envious people in other countries might say we want to have it all ways at once. I see no harm in that. We are seeking the best of all worlds and certainly we have got the pick of this one.

"The key thought alike of the British constitutional monarchy and the republic of the United States of America is the hatred of dictatorship. Both here and across the ocean over the generations and the centuries the idea of the division of power has lain deep at the root of our development."

Churchill drew cheers as he added:

"We feel that Her Gracious Majesty here with us today has consecrated her life to all her peoples in all her realms and we are resolved to prove on the pages of history that these sacrifices shall not be in vain.

"Like nature we follow in theme the paths of variety and change and our faith that in the mercy of God things will get better and better if we all try our best."

In keeping with a Commonwealth occasion, the menu had an Empire flavor—maple syrup from Canada, sherry from South Africa, cigars from Jamaica, salmon from Scotland, and on down the list.

CANADIAN GUESTS

Canadians invited to the luncheon besides the prime minister, included W. Ross Macdonald, Speaker of the House of Commons, Elie Beauregard, Speaker of the Senate, and Leon Raymond, clerk of the Commons.

Liberals Capture

Romkey, senior member of the House, fell as Progressive Conservatives bit into eight Liberal seats. On the other hand, Liberals won three seats formerly held by Progressive Conservatives.

Mr. McDonald and Russell Cunningham, the two CCF members re-elected, were the official Opposition from 1945 to 1949 after the Progressive Conservatives were wiped out of the House.

RETURNED AGAIN

They opposed 28 Liberals, but in 1949, House membership was increased to 37 and the Progressive Conservatives returned as opposition.

The campaign for Tuesday's election, the most spirited in years, was sparked by a Progressive Conservative slogan of "Twenty's Plenty"—a reference to 20 years of Liberal government.

The 63-year-old premier and his party said the only issue was the Liberal record. They pointed to only five budget deficits since 1933 to back up their contention that their government had been sound.

The CCF contended that the government was not interested in the working classes and promised efforts to establish low-rental housing.

The PCs highlighted their campaigning with charges that liquor agents were operating in the province, contrary to provincial law. Mr. Stanfield also said that Health Minister Harold Connolly had owned shares in a company which sold wine to the government's liquor commission.

LARGEST MAJORITY

Mr. Connolly, who termed the charge "beneath notice," was returned in Halifax North with the largest majority of any candidate in the province.

Both Liberals and Progressive Conservatives had full slates of 37 candidates in the field. The CCF entered 16 and there was one independent. The only woman candidate, Mrs. Florence Wilton, CCF nominee in Cumberland Centre, ran last in a three-way race

The one-vote-margin contest in Hants East recalled the situation when a Liberal won in neighboring Hants West by the same majority in 1949. After a suecession of court actions the election was ruled void and a by-election ordered.

Mr. Ettinger, taking the poll by one vote Tuesday, fulfilled a prediction he made in the House. An undertaker, he said he would have the usual last word against his opponent, Liberal Alfred Reid, a doctor.

FIFTH TIME

For the premier it was the fifth time he had led his party in a provincial election. He served as federal navy minister for five years during the Second World War.

Mr. Stanfield, a lawyer fighting his second election as party leader, took over the leadership in 1948 from Leonard Fraser, another lawyer.

Mr. McDonald succeeded Mr. Cunningham as CCF leader during the last session of the House.

Divorce Laws Breed Lies—Rev. H. Douglas

OSHAWA (CP)—Rev. H. Douglas of Peterborough said today Canadian divorce laws "make hypocrites of a lot of good people who are making a pretence of adultery to get a divorce."

He spoke before the Bay of Quinte conference of the United Church of Canada. The conference opposed any extension of grounds for divorce in Canada.

Obituary

MRS. ROBERT GREACEN

ROSENEATH (ENS) — The death occurred at Cobourg General Hospital late Tuesday evening of Mrs. Robert Greacen of Alnwick township. Formerly Mary Pulfer she was born in England 79 years ago, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Pulfer. She came to Canada at the age of three weeks.

Forty-nine years ago she was married in Hastings to Robert Greacen and their entire married life has been spent at their farm home in the northern part of the township, overlooking Rice Lake.

Surviving are her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Butcher (Phyllis), Harwood; a son, Leslie of Alnwick township; a daughter, Mrs. Albert Parker (Lillian) died some years ago. Also surviving are nine grandchildren and four brothers, William Pulfer and James Pulfer, Hastings; John and Robert Pulfer of Saskatchewan.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Wild Yuletide Drinking Under Fire

OSHAWA (CP)—The Rev. J. R. Mutchmor, secretary of the board of evangelism and social service of the United Church of Canada, today criticized "wild drinking parties" during the Christmas season.

He told the Church's Bay of Quinte conference that Christmas and Easter are too widely regarded as holidays instead of holy days.

The religious significance of Christmas was desecrated by "bottle parties" in offices, factories, and not a few Church homes in both city and rural areas.

"This indicates the trend towards using great days in our Church life for pagan observances," he said. "The result is that the central figure of Christ becomes obscured."

Dr. Mutchmor asked all elders to support their ministers in a voluntary abstinence pledge plan.

Safety Campaign Cuts Accidents

LINDSAY (ENS)—So far, according to Chief John Hunter, Lindsay's car safety check campaign has cut the May accident toll to three minor mishaps, compared with some four times that number or more during a normal month.

The chief attributes this decline in the accident toll directly to the safety check which not only brought officers into the streets more during their checking duties but also caused many motorists driving unsafe cars to have them repaired at local garages before the police checked them.

A high incidence of failures on the ten-point test was noted during the first week of the test but motorists apparently fealized later that they could have their cars tested at local garages before presenting them to police for further examination, and many had minor repairs made that caused them to pass the test.

During the latter weeks of the month, however, hardly any failurcs have been noticed, and practically no cars have been found in serious mechanical shape. A further safety drive is expected to be operated during June, and further details will be released next week by the chief.

4000 Refugees Swarm Into West Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—Four thousand refugees, the highest number ever counted on one day, streamed into West Berlin today from the Russian zone.

The influx proved too much even for the expanded facilities of refugee headquarters in the British sector. Only about 3,200 could be registered.

City officials were amazed by the sudden increase. They attributed it to widespread fear among East Germans that West Berlin may be sealed off definitely, that new identity cards would be issued restricting their movement and that drafting for a Communist "people's army" is around the corner.

Enemy Planes Strafe Strathcona Squadron

By BILL BOSS

IN KOREA (CP)—The rear headquarters of B squadron, Lord Strathcona's Horse, were strafed Tuesday when four jet planes with USAF marking bombed a bridge used principally by the Commonwealth division with which the Canadians are fighting.

Casualties were limited to a broken leg suffered by a soldier diving for a bunker.

The planes also strafed a unit of the 151st United States engineers. Two Koreans were killed and four Koreans and one American soldier were wounded. Several vehicles were destroyed.

U.S. Dollar At Discount

MONTREAL (CP)—The U. S. dollar was at a discount of 11-16 per cent in terms of Canadian funds at noon today. Tuesday's noon rate was 99 11-32 cents. Pound sterling $2.79¼, against $2.79½.

Cheese Officials Reject Offer Of 25 Cents A Pound

BELLEVILLE (CP)—Cheese factory representatives Tuesday night turned down the 25 cents a pound offered them for their cheese and the 6,620 boxes of cheese offered at a board went unsold. Boarded were 5,075 boxes of colored cheese, 1,419 boxes of white and 126 of special cheese.

The cheese board adjourned for a week.

W. O. Coons, president of the Ontario Cheese Producers Association, told the 125 cheese men present he wanted to wait until he met with his executive before commenting on an Ottawa announcement that the cabinet has agreed to buy 5,000,000 pounds of cheese from Ontario producers at 30 cents a pound.

He said that, if cheese were sold on an open market, its price would break itself down. He said something must be done to establish a floor price.

TO BUY CHEESE

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet Tuesday agreed to buy 5,000,000 pounds of cheese from Ontario producers at 30 cents a pound.

Under the $1,500,000 deal, the federal government will take over the 1952 stocks held by the producers and offer them for sale at cost.

It may take some time to sell the cheese. Meanwhile the producers, hard-pressed for cash, will get funds quickly to tide them over until the situation is clarified on their 1953 production.

Producers have a lot of cheese on hand, but few buyers. Under the Co-Operative Marketing Act the federal government has offered to renew the 1952 guarantee of 24 cent a pound on the cheddar, providing the Ontario government will renew its 1952 six-cent-a-pound guarantee, bringing the guaranteed price to producers to 30 cents a pound.

But the Ontario government is reported to have declined to grant the six-cent request.

PAID HOMAGE

"Fifty-six years go, peoples from all parts of the British Empire assembled here to pay homage to a great queen, who had reigned for 60 glorious and fruitful years. It was a tribute to the human values of British institutions that the man who came as leader of the Canadian delegation to honor the Queen Empress was of a race which did not come into the Empire by choice, but indeed had fought gallantly for another monarch against the arms of a British king.

"The [illegible] occasion of delegations from [illegible] peoples of Asia with their broad and ancient cultures was equally significant. There have been tremendous changes in the Empire since Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his contemporaries were here to celebrate the diamond jubilee.

HAVE FULL RESPONSIBILITY

"Over 90 per cent of those peoples who formed part of the British world in 1897 have assumed and they exercise full responsibility for the management of all their internal and external affairs. For them, even the name of 'Empire' has been changed to 'Commonwealth.' But at the same time, the allegiance to and the recognition by all of our sovereign as head of the Commonwealth still proclaims that there has continued to be a sharing of common ideals and common institutions, a sharing at times of common perils and on occasions such as this of common national prides and rejoicings.

"And I do not think it would be presumptuous to add a sharing of the common desire to benefit not only our own peoples but free mankind throughout the world."

Queen Follows Father's Example With Ministers

LONDON (AP)—The text of the speech by the Queen to the luncheon of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Westminster Hall today:

I thank you all most sincerely for the kind way in which you have drunk my health. I thank you also, Mr. (Harold E.) Holt, for this most interesting book, which you have just given me on behalf of your fellow members of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

I was delighted to accept the invitation of the association to be their guest today, for it gives me this opportunity of welcoming my prime ministers and ministers and the many other parliamentary representatives from our great Commonwealth of nations.

FOLLOWED EXAMPLE

On the eve of his own Coronation, 16 years ago, my dear father also met in Westminster Hall those who represented the legislatures of the Commonwealth. I am indeed glad to follow his example.

It is a stirring thought that all these legislatures are descended from the assembly which first met under this roof nearly seven centuries ago.

We stand here in the palace of Westminster which is the home of the mother of parliaments. Of the many ties linking this family of nations not the least is that system of parliamentary government which is common to us all.

I have vivid memories of my visits during my father's lifetime to Commonwealth parliaments overseas, and I am looking forward with pleasure to seeing others during my forthcoming tour.

To this great association I offer my best wishes for the success of their coming deliberations. I hope that all of you whose homes are overseas will have a very happy and enjoyable stay in this country.

Stage Show Stars British Hypnotist

A British hypnotist recently arrived in Canada is presenting a show of the phenomenon in Peterborough.

Considered one of the best, Edwin Heath has given many people their first authentic demonstration of hypnotism.

First put to use as far as records show by Mesmer, the state of receptive unconsciousness was known as mesmerism.

Long an oddity that apparently had no practical use, it now is being used experimentally by modern science. It has been tried in pain free dentistry in unusual circumstances where freezings were not practical.

Psychology and psychoanalysis have made use of the phenomenon in an attempt to find the true motives and thoughts of mentally disturbed people.

But Edwin Heath's show is pure entertainment that produces some astonishing tricks and will have a wide interest.

Siamese Twin Playing Celebrity Role

CHICAGO (AP) — Rodney Dee Brodie has moved off the critical list and plunged into the rigorous role of a celebrity—and he loves it.

Rodney, the only head-joined Siamese twin to survive a separation operation, as taken from his sheltered life in a hospital room Tuesday and placed before a battery of photographers.

He faced up to the occasion with a big grin and a loud "Hi."

The photographs are in preparation for the first glimpses the public will have of the 20-month-old boy whose parents risked all in the hope the twins would have a chance for a normal life. His brother Roger died Jan. 20.

AUTHORIZE PUBLICATION

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brodie have authorized publication of the photographs in newspapers, magazines and newsreels June 4 when their son, Rodney, appears on the March of Medicine program to be telecast from the annual meeting of the American Medical Association.

Lolling in his baby tender in the sun-swept grass court of the Illinois Neuropsychiatric Institute, Rodney watched the photographers go through their paces with an interest sometimes bordering on fascination. He even obligingly waved his rattle at them.

Only in the last few weeks had Rodney seen any individuals other than the doctors, nurses and parents. Now he takes his meals with other children in the hospital ward and his permitted outside on sunny days.

Doctors described Rodney's progress in the last two months as excellent, but he still has a long way to go.

NEEDS HARD SKULL

So far, the top of his brain is protected only by a cover of skin and hair. In another two months or so, surgeons hope to build a hard skull roof of bone, metal or plastic and insert it under the skin cover.

Rodney has a good hair covering on the front half of his head because skin containing hair follicles was transplanted there from the side of his head.

Surgeons say they face two problems in their plans to give Rodney a hard skull top. One is a problem of contour. Rodney's brain, instead of curving spherically on top, is flat and higher in the back than in the front.

The other is deciding on the substance. Transplanted bone, plastic and metal have all been known to work loose after such operations.

What are his chances for a normal life?

FAR ADVANCED

The nurses who have cared for him daily say he is as far advanced mentally as any 20-month-old boy. The doctors say it is too early to tell. But they add there is no evidence that his mental capacities have been harmed by the 12-hour separation operation Dec. 17.

They describe him as "reasonably bright" and say he is improving from a partial left-side paralysis that followed the separation operation. He has undergone 18 operations.

Council Studies Lone Tender For Hall Roof

COBOURG (ENS)—Lone tender for a new roof for Cobourg town hall was for $5,949. On motion council decided to go over the tender carefully to see if it were reasonable.

The recreational centre board submitted a number of suggested expenditures at the centre and council decided to approve the two most needed ones, eavestroughs and ventilation of the pit at the west side of the ice surface to prevent danger of the supports to the seats rotting.

The Cobourg Opera and Drama Guild sent the town council a cheque for $1,000, being a payment to the town for an advance to cover redecoration of the town hall. Mayor Jack Burnet complimented the Guild on its excellent work in restoring the opera house.

Mayor Burnet said soil tests had been taken on Forth St. and due to rock formation it was decided to lay the force-main sewer on top of the present sewer at a saving of about $5,000.

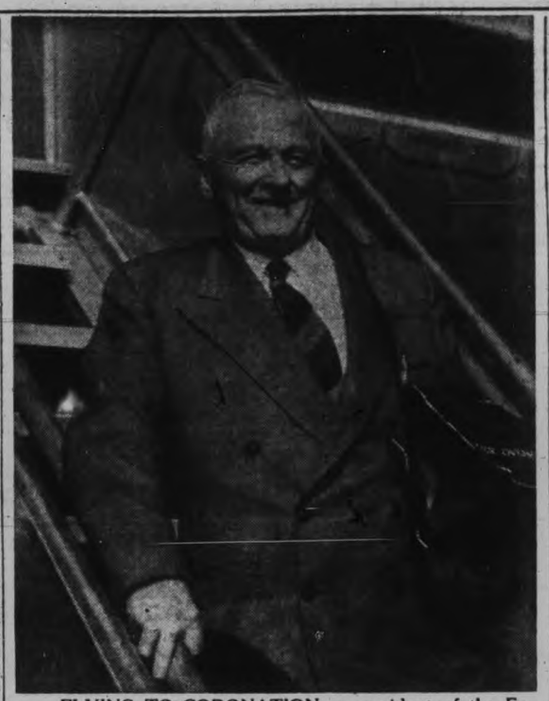
Dr. W. E. Wilkins, who wrote two weeks ago asking permission to operate a motel where his line of one storey, attached dwellings was located, at that time was asked for more particulars. Last night he wrote council to point out that the motel building was erected some time ago under the supervision of the town engineer. Permission was granted.

CMA Membership Reported At 6,891

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Manufacturers' Association today reported a total membership of 6,891 for the year ended April 30—an increase of 143 over the previous year.

J. T. Stirrett, general manager, in his annual report said the largest increase was in Ontario where 63 members were added. Quebec and the Prairie provinces followed with 44 and 18 new members respectively.

Back on Route



BORDEN, P.E.I. (CP)—After completing her overhaul at Halifax the big car ferry Abegweit is back on the run between here and Cape Tormentine, N.B. While the boat was laid up the old ferry Prince Edward Island was kept operating around the clock to cope with traffic.

Useful Catch

MEAFORD, Ont. (CP)—One of the biggest carp ever taken in the Big Head river, a 27-pounder, was caught by Ted McLaughlin. Although a nuisance to game fishermen, the carp is a popular food fish for some markets.

Happy Reunion

WINNIPEG (CP)—For the first time since they kissed each other goodbye 40 years ago in the Ukraine, father and daughter met each other here. John Hawrylishyn of Winnipeg met his daughter, Mrs. John Chudobiak, now living in Ottawa.

NEW WATERFORD, N.S. (CP)—A third set of twins, boy and girl, was born to colliery worker William Cheetham and his wife here. With two single children, the oldest 16, they now have eight—four boys and four girls.

Hats Taxed

LUTON, England (CP)—Luton hat manufacturers have asked the British government to abolish or reduce the purchase tax on ladies' hats. At present, the 25-per-cent levy is applied on all hats except knitted headgear.

Mr., Mrs. G. H. Hutchinson Married 50 Years Ago

Mr. and Mrs. G. Harry Hutchinson of 424 Sheridan St., descendants of two of Peterborough's oldest families celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Monday at their home with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson were married 50 years ago Monday in St Stephen's Anglican Church in Toronto. Following their honeymoon they returned to Peterborough, where Mr. Hutchinson continued working for his father in the firm Hutchinson and Son. Today one of Peterborough's oldest tinsmiths and plumbing firms.

Mr. Hutchinson's son, Harold, is carrying on the business today, and is the third generation of Hutchinsons in the firm.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Hutchinson was Elsie Gibbs, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gibbs.

They have one son Harold, and two daughters: Florence and Grace Hutchinson, at home; and one granddaughter, Anne Hutchinson.

In looking back over the years Mrs. Hutchinson recalls that both their fathers were members of the volunteer fire brigade under Col. Poole as captain and her father, Mr. Gibbs was the captain of the hose company of the volunteer firemen. At that time the fire hall was in the old city building on Simcoe St. and the fire equipment was pulled by hand.

Among the many beautiful gifts received from friends were many gold tea cups and plates, in recognition of their golden wedding anniversary.

"Occasional Sunshine"

Yesterday, you may remember, was cool and wet, with a disturbance before noon which unscientific people might call a cloudburst. How did the scientific people describe the day? You had it right on our front page, above the line, in the weather forecast: "Sunny and very warm." Was the Examiner in error? Yes. Was it the Examiner's error? No. Other newspapers reporting weather forecasts, even the biggest, said the weather in this district Tuesday would be sunny and hot. Radio stations in Toronto, giving weather reports long after this newspaper had gone to press, reported likewise. The error was general.

* * *

Whose error was it? All these reports came from the same source, the Dominion Meteorological Bureau in Toronto. Now, the Bureau has a staff of experts, scientifically trained. To it come readings of wind velocity, of high and low pressure, of the amount of humidity and other data which go into the making of a weather forecast. These come to the bureau from all over the continent, and precise details are gathered from the weather stations of the RCAF. Here as well as at the Bureau they are sifted, collated and mapped so that weather forecasts may be projected. These people say, and we have no right to disbelieve them, that their excellent equipment (paid for at public expense) and their highly-trained staffs (paid for at public expense) are able to reduce the margin of error to the smallest latitude possible. Yet they do not preclude error. They truthfully maintain that what they are reporting is an informed guess; weather cannot be predicted absolutely.

* * *

How true this is may be read in our and other newspapers' daily weather reports; in yesterday's paper, for instance. The day which was supposed to be sunny and very hot turned out to be cool and very wet. The report for today—carried yesterday—was "occasional sunshine." As you read this you may observe how narrow was the margin of error in that summary. We do not wash our hands of the mistaken forecasts (which, incidentally, the Bureau allows itself to say are valid until midnight of the day following publication). We merely repeat, with the prognosticators, that we do the best we can.

The Queen Will . . .

Today the Queen attended a luncheon given by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Westminster Hall for Members of Parliaments in the Commonwealth. Tomorrow the Queen will give a garden party at Buckingham Palace. Saturday state visits of royal and official guests begin. Monday the Queen will give a luncheon party for Prime Ministers and representative members of Commonwealth countries. Tuesday the Queen will be crowned.

Wednesday week the Queen will hold a State Banquet at Buckingham Palace. Thursday the Queen will hold a State Banquet at Buckingham Palace. Friday the Queen will attend a dinner given by the Foreign Secretary; she will also hold an evening reception at Buckingham Palace.

And so the program runs: "The Queen will drive through . . ." "The Queen will be present at a Gala Performance . . ." "The Queen will lunch at . . ." "The Queen will hold an evening reception at Buckingham Palace." "The Queen will hold an investiture at Buckingham Palace." So it goes, through the whole month of June and spilling into July.

What of the public dismay and warnings after King George's death, the asserted necessity of lightening the gruelling round of Royal work and public appearances? Ah, well, the Queen is young and vigorous. She is reported to bear well the heavy Coronation schedule and even to be enjoying it. She has been trained and has disciplined herself for these duties and ceremonies. A Coronation month comes but once in a lifetime for the monarch.

Coronation Trees

A fine and lasting memorial of the Coronation has been planned by the Peterborough Fish and Game Association. Trees—6,500 of them—are to be planted that day on farm land near the city. The trees are intended, we suppose, to be a perpetual forest, and June 2nd is happily made the occasion of a planting by a public body. But the woodlot will mature with the succeeding years of the Queen's reign and in the fullness of their time will be cut for profit and probably replaced. Meanwhile, they will represent a good effort of conservation and use of land and be remembered as the trees planted on Coronation Day.

Ceremonial tree planting, for ornament and memorial rather than utility, has long been common here and elsewhere. We remember a venerable mulberry tree in an English garden which attracts comment by all viewers. Its main spreading branches are supported by crutches, which make it appear as ancient and sapped of strength as it really is. The tree was planted by King James the First.

Perhaps the woodsman's axe will spare a tree or two in the Coronation Day Smith Township planting, and they can become a century hence noble reliques of this great June Day. Perhaps other trees will be planted in the city and parks with the specific purpose of building, through nature, a memorial of this day as permanent as time. It is a pleasant and verdant salute to the Crown.

Royal River Pageant

Amidst all the fanfare and new gilt to old gold of the pre-Coronation publicity, it is refreshing to read about plans for an old-fashioned Coronation celebration on the oldest-fashioned stage in Britain. It is a Royal River Pageant to be presented on July 22nd on the Thames. The Lord Mayor of London and aldermen of the City will lead the pageant. The Queen will witness it from the Royal Festival Hall near the end of the route in Westminster.

The procession itself will come down the river from Greenwich—to music. The army, navy, air force, merchant marine and fishing fleets will be represented. Historical tableaux will be presented on several launches, and London's commerce and industry will have a section. Some of the ancient livery companies will stage displays.

In earlier centuries river pageants gave inspiration to state poets and masters of music. Some of Spenser's highest flights of fancy came to rest on royal river pageants. Will July's pageant evoke some sonorous lines and noble images? May we expect to have some broadsheets, too, lays of more humble aspiration? A few modern lines in common idiom would lighten the proceedings and give to the Coronation itself the authentic popular humour, which seems so far to be getting its innings only in the buying of cheap souvenir trinkets. Such lines as these written for the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1897:

Queen Victoria sixty years the Monarch of our Realm
Shows the grand old lady has kept a steady helm.
She often tacked, she never backed,
she always heaved her lead,
And never turned into her bunk when breakers were ahead.

Cathleen Ni Houlihan

At the end of April we read with regret of the death of Mrs. John MacBride of Dublin. In her youth she was the beautiful Maude Gonne, a fiery fighter for the independence of Ireland. Like many a spirited Irish nationalist, she was Anglo-Irish by birth and of the privileged class. She threw herself whole-heartedly into the Republican movement, scandalized Ireland by her uninhibited political behaviour, and in 1903 married Major John McBride who was executed in 1916 as a leader in the rising of that terrible year.

Maude Gonne was celebrated for her beauty, as well as for the fiery spirit which possessed her. She was the actress for whom W. B. Yeats wrote Cathleen Ni Houlihan, certainly the most moving of his early plays. Yeats loved her, and in that play he cast her as the ancient, proud spirit of Ireland. Those who knew them well have said that the bitterness which she developed in her political work estranged the poet. Years of struggle, the loss of her husband, and her own imprisonment may well have embittered her. But she was a woman of rare quality.

A curious footnote must be added to this brief mention of her. In her later years she was invariably referred to by the Irish as "Madame MacBride." No one has ever explained this Celtic trick of calling distinguished women "Madame". It is a custom which also obtains in Wales. It is as though a whole people sought a title of distinction for a woman of great abilities. The odd thing is that the title they choose comes from a language which is not their own.

NOTES AND COMMENT

Two British Columbia surgeons had gone quite a way in removing a boy's appendix when they discovered that he was in hospital for a skin graft. They have been fined $1,684. And it will take some time for their scar to disappear.

The cities of Guelph, Kitchener and Galt are somewhat annoyed because an Ottawa paper suggests that in 25 years they may be united under some such name as Kitelphalt. We sympathize with them; something more euphonious could certainly be devised—like Galchenelph.

GODLIKE ABOVE FRAILTIES

Ruthless Everest

By JOHN GALE

HOW LITTLE progress has been made against Everest since the first British assault in 1922 and how bitterly have the last thousand feet of the mountain fought against man. These are the strongest impressions gained from "The Story of Everest," published last month.

In 1922, George Finch failed by half a mile; in 1924, Colonel Norton went higher, to 28,126 feet, without the aid of oxygen; in the same year, shortly before he disappeared for ever, George Mallory wrote in a letter: "It is almost unthinkable with this plan that I shan't get to the top; I can't see myself coming down defeated." Thirty years have passed: two Swiss expeditions have attempted Everest; the ninth British expedition is in the throes of its assault now. Its time is running out; the mountain still seems inviolate.

✧ ✧ ✧

ALL who have known Everest have feared it: "An infernal mountain, cold and treacherous," were Mallory's words: "This monster, this relic of primordial chaos, the home of devils, not of Gods," said Tom Longstaff. Even Dr. Edward Wyss-Dunant, leader of the first Swiss expedition last year, believed that no human would ever reach the summit alive.

Everest has been known to be the highest mountain in the world only since 1852, when an Indian at Dehra Dun, who had been computing altitudes from the observations of surveyors, burst into the office of the Director of the Survey of India with the news that Peak XV on the frontier Tibet and Nepal was 29,002 feet high. (This figure was later corrected to 29,141. Dr. Wyss-Dunant said last year that the peak was still rising: he estimated its height to be 29,610 feet.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN 1852 no Tibetan or Nepali name was known for Everest, so it was named after the previous Surveyor-General. But it was later found that the Tibetans did have a local name for it: Chomolungma, translated either as "Goddess Mother of the World," or "Lady Cow," depending upon small variations of Tibetan spelling and pronunciation.

In the days of the early Tibetan kings a large number of birds were fed at royal expense in the southern districts near the Himalaya. For this reason, official papers from Lhasa have been known to refer to the Everest district as "the Bird Country of the South." When, in 1920, the Dalai Lama gave his consent to the first Everest expedition, the preamble at the top of the official pass did full justice to the occasion. It began: "To the west of the Five Treasuries of Great Snow (without the jurisidiction of White Glass Fort, near Rocky Valley Inner Monastery) is the Bird Country of the South. . . ." Thus began one of the most extraordinary, most useless and most noble of human endeavours.

APPROACHING from the north-east, over the high plains of Tibet, the first reconnaissance expedition in 1921 saw a preposterous lump rising out of the mist: then, to the left, a serrated crest; finally, as one of the expedition members described it, "far higher in the sky than the imagination had dared to suggest," the summit of Everest, which, they discovered, often flew a plume of snow crystals, swept upwards by great winds.

Several men have lost their lives upon the mountain by exposure or avalanche. N. E. Odell, who on that fateful day in 1924 performed miracles at a great height without oxygen, was the last to see Mallory and Irvine. He glimpsed them moving upwards into mist at about twenty-eight thousand feet. Although years later an axe was found, nothing had been discovered to prove definitely how much further they climbed or how they died.

THE LAST ATTEMPT to climb Everest from the north was made in 1938: bad weather foiled the assault. Now, since Tibet is under Communist rule, the mountain must be approached through Nepal. The present route up the mountain from the south of the Tibetan border is the one reconnoitred by Eric Shipton in 1951 and followed by the Swiss last year. The assault is made up the south ridge, from the high glacier known as the Western CWM.

The Swiss concentrated particularly on improving oxygen apparatus and on testing medical and scientific aids to overcome physical incapacity above twenty-five thousand feet (there is still disagreement, however, as to whether a well acclimatised man can function best with or without oxygen: on three separate occasions British climbers exceeded twenty-eight thousand feet without oxygen, and they saw no reason to believe that the last few hundred feet could have stopped them, granted good weather and freedom from snow.)

✧ ✧ ✧

ONE of the greatest difficulties on Everest is that although acclimatisation to great heights is essential, any prolonged stay above twenty-three thousand feet brings about musucular deterioration. The lungs have to be deliberately set to work and kept working; the mind and powers of concentration are dulled. The great Swiss climber, Raymond Lambert, recorded that after breathing oxygen he was filled with a deceptive sense of well-being: "Everything seems to be going well and at precisely that moment one fails." Moreover, when the senses become blunted, a man often fails to appreciate danger and may keep going until it is too late to turn back— no one can survive a night out on the upper slopes of Everest.

Yet Lambert and Tensing, the sherpa (porter-guide) climbed to 28,215 feet which is thought to be the greatest height yet reached by a man on his feet. Tensing, probably the finest sherpa to attempt Everest, is the "Tiger of Tigers"— "Tiger" being the title given to a sherpa when he succeeds in carrying a load to twenty-four thousand feet. Without sherpas, no expedition could hope to get far.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE BRITISH expedition now assaulting the peak has the finest equipment ever brought against the mountain. Essential items, including light cotton-nylon tents, air-filled mattresses, silk gloves, light, well-insulated boots, specially prepared food, wireless sets and, in particular, oxygen equipment, have been subjected to searching tests. In addition, the expedition is assisted by a sectional ladder of light metal to provide a foot bridge, rope ladders and an avalanche gun. It seems that almost nothing has been overlooked.

Yet the odds remain heavy. Mr. Murray maintains that the strongest expedition will fail unless "aided by three major strokes of fortune, which must all concur: freedom from high wind near the top; no deep powder (snow) on the slopes below or above the south col; and the right man high at the right time. Good fortune of that very special kind has graced none of the last nine expeditions."

Everest is a ruthless mountain inspiring no love. Frank Smythe, who spent a night alone at the highest camp, concluded that "that last thousand feet of Everest are not for mere flesh and blood. Whoever reaches the summit will have to rise godlike above his own frailties and his tremendous environment."

If this can be done by the British expedition now on the last stage, climbers throughout the world will perhaps feel a strange regret that the mountain has been conquered at last. But one disputed secret will probably remain, that of the "Abominable Snowman."

An American View: BE CAREFUL AROUND CEMENT MIXERS

Keeping Up With Winston

By ROBERT MILLER

I CANNOT REMEMBER a more dramatic atmosphere in the House of Commons than during the Premier's speech on foreign affairs last week. No one had expected Sir Winston Churchill to make any important pronouncement, and indeed an editor I know did not even bother to go down to Westminster that day, though he likes to be present whenever there is a policy statement of unusual interest.

But it was not only the matter that aroused interest: it was also the manner. The Premier is now nearly eighty and no one has driven himself so hard as he has. Most of us, if we had reached his age and had had so strenuous a life, would have long ago called it a day and put our feet up with a sigh of relief. But not Sir Winston. There he stood in that crowded chamber, superbly confident, putting out all the old tricks of speech and mispronunciation of names.

What is so extraordinary is that he seems younger than ever since he took over Mr. Eden's work at the Foreign Office. He is enjoying every moment of it. He still keeps the same routine as he did during the war and during the last few weeks there has been a morning gathering of Foreign Office officials round his bedside. In the afternoon he has a nap and in the evening, his batteries recharged, he wears everybody out with his vitality. "Doesn't he realise," one Minister complained to me the other day, "that we young men can't stand it" Haggard and sore-eyed, he had been kept up by the Premier until two o'clock that morning. Indeed, one young man said to me the other day, "When I'm Winston's age, I'm damned sure the old boy will still be Prime Minister. It will seem very odd if he isn't."

(OTTAWA JOURNAL)

IN 1952 profits of Canada's manufacturing industries averaged only five cents on each dollar of sales.

This may surprise many. And their surprise may be even greater when they learn that out of this five cents profit from each dollar sale each dollar sale only 2.2 cents were paid in dividends, the remaining 2.8 cents put back into the business.

This is the "plutocracy" about "hidden hand" that we often hear about.

The people who own and run these manufacturing industries risked their money in them, burdened themselves with work and worry. At the end of a year they found themselves with a return of a little more than two per cent., plus a bit more than two per cert. which they risked again for more work and worry. Yet any one of these men could have put their original investment in safe government bonds, avoided work and worry, got a bigger return. Or, at the end of the year, they could have sold their business to somebody else, put the cash in the bank or in bonds, got rid of continued worry.

Nor is this the whole picture. We hear of the industries that survive, that make a profit of five cents on the dollar. We don't hear of the industries that fail. Yet there are many —many industries that just keep their heads above water and some which don't even do that. A glance at the record of business failures is an enlightening thing. Enlightening about what we call our "profit system," but which is really our profit and loss system.

Yet despite small returns, our manufacturing industries keep going, with men willing to risk their capital just because they have industry and ambition. Last year their investments totalled $4,700 million and they employed 437,000 people.

British TV Device

(U.K. Information Office)

British televiewers will see startling effects on their screens this summer when a hush-hush gadget is used. The new equipment enables a producer to "punch" holes in a TV picture and to place a second picture in the hole thus made. This will create "ghost" and other effects previously achieved by the superimposition of one camera on another. The new process, developed by B.B.C. engineers, is called "inlay".

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest, and desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven: and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks. And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do. . .

And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus. . .And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias: and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord. And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, and hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight. . . And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized. . . And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God. (Acts 9: 1-6, 8, 10-12 17, 18, 20.)

There was a refreshing candor in the comment of Pakistan's new Prime Minister, Mohammed Ali, about the internal Communist menace. Asked whether such a problem exists in Pakistan, Mr. Ali replied: "That's a $64 question which puts me on the spot. If I say yes, it's not true. If I say no, I get no American aid."

Perhaps Mr. Ali overdrew his point a bit. It is nonetheless true that American foreign aid policy has lent itself to manufactured scares. The token for admission to the club too often has been mere shouting; we have seemingly been willing to swallow almost anything so long as it was coated with anti-Communism. In the parcelling out of assistance of various kinds, we have paid scant respect to the countries which have managed their own affairs well enough so that there is little subversive problem. Likewise, in the haste to sign up other nations on the dotted line, we have shown little understanding of the utility of having a few countries which, though ideologically sympathetic, are politically neutral.

Altogether, Mr. Ali's observation is reminiscent of the knock-knock game that was popular a few years back. Knock-knock. who's there? Aunty. Aunty who? Aunty Communism.

Neither the King nor the Queen wished the Princesses to grow up to be athletic women. Of course they learned to ride and swim, but feminine ideals were always held up to them.

Their mother, particularly, was always insistent on their behaving "nicely." Not that they ever behaved otherwise; but even Royal children are apt to forget their manners when there is excitement about.

I never went to children's parties with them. A collection of excited children all demonstrating how wonderful they are, egged on by their admiring nurses and governesses, is my idea of purgatory.

Instead, Alah, their nurse, would prepare them for the treat and bring them along for inspection. Their mother was always very firm before they set out.

"Now, darlings," she would say, "do be good. And be sure and say 'thank you' very nicely before you leave. You won't forget, will you?"

And both little girls would nod their heads and promise.

Queen Elizabeth always had that natural tact and sense of good manners which carried her through. Even as a tiny girl she was seldom even thoughtlessly rude. She would make Princess Margaret her special charge.

"Margaret almost forgot to say 'thank you,' Crawfie," she would tell me afterward, "but I gave her a nudge, and she said it beautifully."

Until the time we moved to the Palace the girls had a normal, simple upbringing. People are continually amazed when they learn how really natural members of the Royal Family are. They are expected to live always in an aura of glamor and be surrounded by hundreds of bowing flunkies. This is not so.

Few families were as well-balanced. But with the host of new duties that thrust themselves upon him, the King was forced to break away a little from the close intimacy with his children.

They were a little sad to find their rooms at the Palace so far from their parents' suite, but their mother comforted them by saying, "After all, darlings, we are only just along the passage and down some stairs. And look at the space you have to ride your horses in!"

This was a great consolation. Almost the first thing they did, even before they had their hats off, was to decide the disposition of their horses.

Princess Elizabeth began to notice the great change forcing into their lives. "I wish Papa was here" she would say.

They she would break off. "Oh, dear, I suppose he's busy," she would end sadly.

✧ ✧ ✧

All this was forgotten at week-ends. Before the war we would go down to the Royal Lodge, the luggage ahead of us in the Palace station wagon, and the five of us following behind in one of the Royal cars.

I am easily carsick and particularly susceptible to the smooth, dignified, humming progression of the Royal cars. After King George came to the Throne there was always a detective on the box beside the chauffeur. But while he was still Duke of York we would sometimes go down unescorted.

Then I would say, "Would you mind, sir, if I sat in front with the chauffeur? I always feel that the car sways less in the front seat, and I think I shall feel better there."

This always amused the King, though he was always sympathetic to anyone's weakness. "Crawfie is the only person I know," he would say, "who would rather travel on the box with the chauffeur than with us."

I was always struck by the easy, amiable way of the two Princesses. They were never afraid or shy of people, but always went out to them in an open and heart-warming way.

But I think they did miss the company of a brother. Sometimes the two Harewood boys would come, or more often their cousins John and Andrew Elphinstone.

Both the Elphinstones were excellent mimics, and very full of boyish tricks. The little girls thought they were wonderful.

"I do wish we had a brother," Princess Elizabeth would sigh.

"Brothers have their drawbacks," I would point out diplomatically.

"But how, how, Crawfie?" she would insist. "What do you mean, drawbacks?"

"Well," I would answer, "they're inclined to be rough. And they tease a lot."

But nothing I could say would persuade her that a brother was not a wonderful possession.

After I was married, and I was still in my rooms at the Palace, my husband was told that he must, of course, feel free to come and go as he wished.

Something had gone wrong with the hotel water heater and he had not been able to have a bath there.

George is not an unusually noisy bather. But men do tend to be more exuberant in the bath than women, and it was doubtless the first time Princess Elizabeth had heard the sounds which were now issuing forth.

"Good heavens, Crawfie," she said, smiling all over her face and round her eye. "Whatever is that?" She must have thought I had brought a sea lion home.

I told her it was George taking a bath.

"Oh," she said, "your husband is having a bath and mine is taking the dogs round the garden for a walk."

Seabrooke's And Revoy's Beat UEW And TPT Petes In Men's Softball Opening

Dynamic action featured Tuesday night's opening city league softball twin bill at the east city Bowl, that pitted last year's city champion Seabrooke Motors' squad against U.E.W. in the first struggle, for a 15-5 victory; and Revoy Motors against the new TPT Petes, the latter absorbing a 6-3 setback. Despite intermittent drizzles of rain that all but halted hostilities at frequent intervals, particularly in the after-piece, a fair crowd of fans, old and new, viewed the games with interest as the lid got the final pry on what should prove a banner year. Eight draw prizes were awarded early in the second game to lucky ticket holders.

Threatening skies and a light shower fell as Pat Calladine called "play ball" and Jack Balkwill strode to the mound for Howie Dalton's UEW team opposing slim Lefty Doris.

SHOWED POWER

Almost immediately the Sullivan pack showed signs of their former vaunted power as they rattled home six runs on five hits in the first two frames; before the shop crew summoned Tony Kotowski from second base to the hill. A four-run blast in the second was featured by the season's first homer, a long drive to left-centre by Mart O'Donoghue.

Kotowski held well until the fourth when inability to control a wet ball, and the visitors' bats, drove him out. Balkwill came back to finish up the abbreviated tussle, called after six innings of play by the 8:30 curfew; he was charged with the loss. UEW fought hard, scored three in the second inning, as led by Bruce Taylor, sharp-hitting third baseman, the shop lads combed Lefty's slants; but thereafter were unable to bunch hits effectively for good rallies against the slim slinger.

HOMER FOR RED

Red Sullivan poled his first homer of the campaign in the fifth, a lifty fly that cleared the rightfield barrier near the foul line; he drove home three runs to share runs batted in honors with O'Donoghue, Speed Curry and Taylor. Blair Thomson, sturdy catcher for UE, and Bob Wyatt, star third sacker for the winners, each smacked in a run. A pair of double-plays featured the short opener; the fielding of Neil Thompson, last year's player of the year, was a treat; while despite the odd early season babble by either team, the boys on both squads looked well.

The nightcap saw a spectacular twirling exhibition by Dick McCracken of Lakefield, who, aided by sterling support afield from his mates, featuring four Wasson brothers, Cam, Dean, Red and Neil (though Cam sat this one out), held the highly rated TPT squad well in check for nine frames to earn a 6-3 verdict.

Rain fell throughout, but Revoys played steadily behind the staunch erstwhile Lakefield Indian ace, to merit an early surprise victory. Haddy Eakins, veteran speedball artist, opposed Dick on the rival hill, and hurled a creditable game also, actually limiting Motors to less hits, but when hits meant runs, the Revoy maces proved slightly more potent, in a keen contest.

AN EARLY LEAD

Revoys took a two-run lead in the first on hits by Gord Henry, Red Wasson and Ray Craig, aided by three walks and an error; they followed with a pair in the second, and singles in the seventh and ninth, meanwhile holding Buck Legrow's boys in check until the seventh when a long homer by Bobby Crowe broke the TPT ice. Bob incidentally also featured his return, after a season's absence, by cracking a triple and fielding as of yesteryear..

Petes staged a belated rally in the ninth as Crowe, Collins, Fryia, Greenlaw, and Eakins smote the white melon to garner two runs; but hope died in the camp as West skied to Blewett for the final out. Featuring the nightcap also was some remarkable fielding in the mid-pasture by the ageless Joe Blewett, who robbed Legrow in the third, and Junior West and Gus Leonard in the fifth of possible homers. Toodie Greenlaw pulled a gem off Red Wasson in the seventh in left; while the latter's stab of Mackness' drive in the sixth and throwout was a thing of beauty. It was a keen struggle throughout.

Royals Sweep Doubleheader From Orioles

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Royals took a one-game lead over Toronto Maple Leafs in the International Baseball League race Tuesday night by sweeping a doubleheader from Baltimore Orioles.

Rain and wet grounds washed out the balance of the schedule. Rain prevented games between Ottawa and Springfield at Springfield and Toronto at Syracuse. Wet grounds forced postponement of a doubleheader between Rochester and Buffalo.

Montreal set back the Orioles 7-2 in the seven-inning opener at Baltimore and blanked the Birds 1-0 in the nightcap, a 10-inning affair.

GOT 13 HITS

The Royals got to Dick Starr and Ken Heintzelman for 13 hits in the first game. A big six-run fifth settled the issue. The Orioles were held to six safeties. Both their runs were bases-empty homers by Roy Weatherly and Stan Jok.

Bob Ludwick held Baltimore to six hits in the second game, won when Don Hoak walked, advanced on a sacrifice by Edmundo Amoros and went home on a single by Dick Williams.

It was Ludwick's second win against one defeat. Ron Mrozinski also limited the Royals to six safeties, fanned seven and walked the same number.

P.G. & C.C. CHIPSHOTS

National Golf Day at the Peterborough Golf Club saw 37 golfers out trying to beat Julius Boros, but only two succeeded. Jim Clarkson, who won the opening day sweep shot a neat 75 and with a nine handicap his 66 was more than enough to beat Boros, who shot a 70. On Sunday Jim continued to play good golf when he turned in a 78 with a lost ball. He says the change of scenery is responsible for the best golf he has played since he came to Canada.

Hip Hardill, the big left-hander, also beat Boros shooting an 87 and with an 18 handicap beat the U.S. champ by one stroke. Nice going Hip.

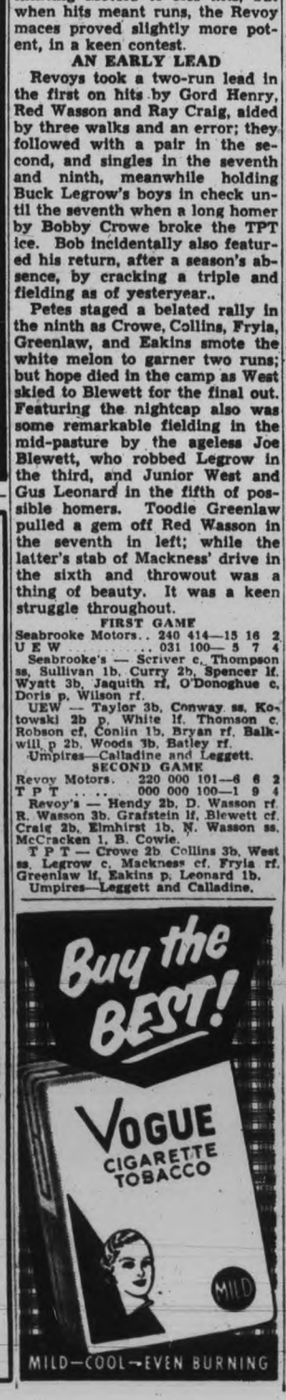
MIDLAND LEAGUE

Next Saturday the opening of the Midland League takes place at the Peterborough Golf Club. A record entry is expected as the Peterborough meet is a popular one every year. There is a minimum of $100 in prizes at each meet and the entry fee is only $1.50.

The Midland was started some years ago as an inter-club affair with the players from Kawartha, Cobourg, Port Hope, Oshawa, Lindsay and Peterborough golf clubs participating. Each club has one meet during the season. It started out in a small way due to the efforts of fellows like Joe Watson and Stan McBride and members of the executive from the other clubs it has grown into a well organized league. As most of the players will be from out of town and won't be arriving early it would be appreciated if all local golfers would try and get out early to avoid crowding on the first tee.

Starting times are from 9 a.m. till 2 p.m. You must be at the first tee by 2 p.m. or you will be ruled ineligible. If you cannot arrange your own game come out anyway and one will be arranged for you. You will be drawn with players in your own handicap group if it is possible. If you do get out have a good game and let's keep some of the prizes in Peterborough.

LADIES' SECTION



The regular Tuesday field day was rained out and is to be held on Friday. Next Tuesday being Coronation Day and a holiday the regular field day has been postponed until the following Friday.

The business girls of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club held their opening day on Sunday, May 24. There was a very good turnout and score cards showed promise that this year will be a record one.

The club is pleased to report that several new members were on hand. These were warmly welcomed by Captain Shirley Sackville and were introduced during dinner which was served at 6:30 p.m. Mrs. P. Westbrook gave a short talk, particularly to new members, on the rules and etiquette of golf. Mr. Alf Hill, the pro, also spoke to the girls on the game of golf, and arrangements were made for group lessons.

Mrs. Gordon Maniece spoke to the girls and gave a most interesting talk on handicaps and revised CLGU rules and regulations.

Miss Dorothy Lane and Mrs. Westbrook presented prizes to the winners in the nine-hole section. Miss Marg. Behan and Mrs. G. Maniece presented prizes to the winners in the 18-hole section.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

He didn't say whether or not Alonzo Boyd and Willie Jackson were in the crowd, and we're sure Mickey McDonald was an absentee, but George Carver of Belleville did say: "The teams played before a packed house, and the spectators were generous with their applause. Naturally the hometowners were favored but fans did not forget to express appreciation of outstanding plays by the vistiors." The Quinte columnist was referring to an exhibition softball game between the Belleville Glens and the Kingston Saints last Sunday. Played in Kingston's penitentiary with the permission of Warden Dick Allan. Glens beat the Saints— a pen name, one presumes— 9-8 in 10 innings.

Don't know if Sunday sports are legal in the Limestone City but what's a little thing like that behind those forbidding walls? It is a good thing to have healthy competition for these inmates and the enforced fans there. They go in for quite a few sports, but of course no cross-country running. Carver says of the Glens: "Later, the party was taken on a tour of the institution. It went through the spotless kitchens while the people were being served the evening meal. Here 1,000 pounds of bread and 10 bags of potatoes are consumed at one sitting. The meal was a substantial one, typical of the fine fare served there. Then on to the well-equipped radio room and other places of interest, ending with the waiting room where products of handicraft of the inmates are on display and for sale."

Petes 'Gainst Locals, Eh?

Four or five former Petes' seniors will perform for Lindsay in the Lakeshore Baseball League fixture here tonight against the local Liflocs, weather being okay. Off to a slow start, Lindsay should be a potent factor in the race this season, while the Liflocs are bound to make a good splash in the puddle, too. They've won and lost a game to date and would love to lick the Lindsayites right here. Haven't heard at the moment which moundsman will perform for Howie Dalton's crew this game, but either Doug Loucks or Junior West is expected on the Scugog slab. It may be pretty much of an all-Peterborough performance at that.

* * * * * *

Look who is pitching for Oshawa Transporters in this intermediate loop— none other than Bill Gingerich. The former USA college star, who hurled grand ball for Oshawa seniors a couple of years ago, has made his home in the Motor City and just last Saturday twirled a three-hit game to trounce Port Hope 19-2! George Brabin hit a homer that day. They also have Ted Barnes and other ex-seniors aboard. Whitby picked up Fred Bidgood and a few former Merchants, as well. Could be that several of the current clubs in the Lakeshore League will soon remind fans of the COBL senior calibre of recent years. But we still feel that our up-and-coming Liflocs will win their share of games in it.

Action At Dampish Bowl

Despite drizzling rain at times last evening, the men's City Softball League got away to a start with a double-header at the Bowl. Red Sullivan's potent Seabrooke squad pounded out a 15-5 win over Howie Dalton's UEW crew in a six-frame fray. Lefty Doris tossed 'em in for the easterners while Jack Balkwill and Tony Kotowski saw slab service for the losers. In the nightcap, Cam Wasson's transplanted Lakefield team in Revoy colors yanked out a 6-3 decision against Buck Legrow's new TPT Petes. Dick McCracken was the winning hurler for the team boasting four Wassons, while Haddy Eakins did the speedballing for the other side. Revoy's play UEW on Thursday, as Seabrooke's wind it up against the TPT-ers.

Mimico officials have asked for a general OLA meeting to deal with the squabble over senior players touched off by wholesale raiding by Toronto West Yorks. Early in May the senior clubs—who run their own affairs with the blessing of the OLA—met and Yorks, Brampton, Hamilton and Fergus outvoted Petes, Mimico and St. Catharines on two points. One was to discard the OLA residence rule and the other was to declare as free agents all players not listed by the clubs as signed within a short time. Mimico's Sam Tillet, in demanding a general meeting to deal with these points now, argues that the senior clubs had not the right to break the OLA constitution. OLA will set a meeting date.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Although the lawn bowling season has hardly commenced notices for out-of-town tournaments are coming in every mail but the ones that are drawing most attention from local bowlers are our own two open tournaments held in June.

The ladies are holding one for rinks on Wednesday, June 10 afternoon and evening. It's wide open and the ladies are expecting quite an entry.

The men are holding, on Wednesday, June 17, that ever popular tournament for the Strattan Trophy. It's for men's rinks and it is also open.

We believe this Strattan Trophy is the oldest trophy in this district. It has been competed for every year since the late J. R. Strattan donated it in 1912. This is always a good tourney and one of the few rink tournaments to be held this season.

Bowlers are requested to keep these dates in mind.

No bowling tonight, but the ladies are holding a draw from the board tournament tomorrow at two o'clock.

Tennis At Kawartha

Opening day for tennis at the Kawartha Club drew 20 entries in a mixed doubles tournament.

In the semi-finals of the main event, Willard Elmsley and B. Williams defeated Ted Mercer and Ken Kingston 6-3, while Joan Lye and Fleming Hunter downed Maurice Charlton and Dennis Walker 6-3. Joan Lye and Fleming Hunter then went on to win out, defeating Elmsley and Williams 6-2 in the final.

Dorothy Hunter and Ted Cook took consolation honors for the day by winning the final 7-5 over Pat Collins and Roy Lye.

Empire Games Planners Not Loafing

By DON MATHESON

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 1954 British Empire and Commonwealth Games here are responsible for probably the world's biggest divot.

Sometime next month after the honorary games chairman, mayor Fred Hume of Vancouver, returns from the Coronation, that divot will be dug.

After appropriate ceremonies, bulldozers will slice into a neat little nine-hole golf course to dig the foundation for the games' big site—a $1,365,000 stadium.

With 26,511 permanent concrete seats, the horse-shoe shaped stadium is to be built on the grounds of the Pacific National Exhibition. The PNE gets "sole custody, control and management" of the stadium after the games.

And if there's a thought that June, 1953, is none too soon to start construction of such a giant stadium for use at the end of July, 1954 — relax. Construction work can be carried out the year round in balmy Vancouver.

TEMPORARY BLEACHERS

On top of the 26,511 permanent seats now planned, the end of the horse-shoe may be closed in with temporary bleachers if necessary, boosting the capacity to 35,000.

As an indication of progress in coping with the million-and-one details that go into such a worldwide sporting carnival as this—each seat now has a number, the tickets are designed and printing will soon begin.

And—details again—your B. E. G. ticket will be printed on watermarked paper, like a cheque, so that a ticket bought from the Fiji Islands guarantees that someone from South America, say, won't be sitting in your seat when you get here.

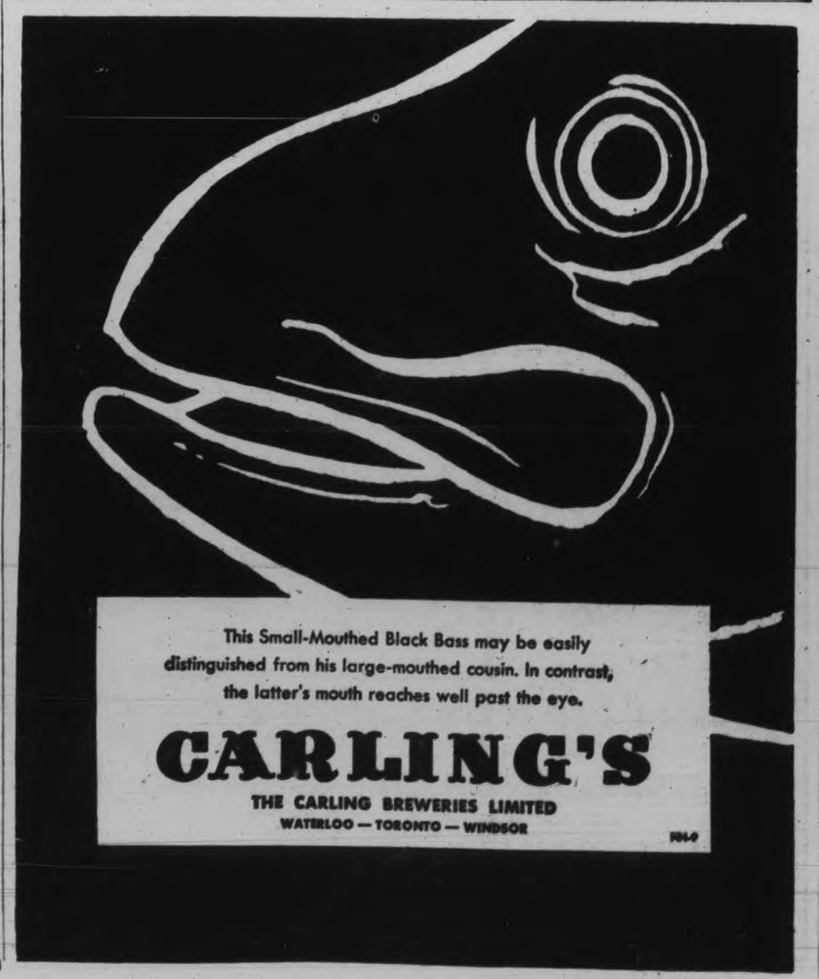
NOT JUST A DREAM

Buying a ticket from Fiji is not just a dream, either. Send Fiji a postal money order, get a receipt and pick up the tickets on arrival. The actual ticket won't leave the country for bookkeeping reasons.

Details. . .but when the approximately 600 athletes from an expected 23 countries show up for the eight-day event starting July 30, they'll find the new stadium, a new cycling track, a new 6,700-seat swimming pool, separate boxing, wrestling and weight-lifting arenas in existing buildings and an Empire Games village on the University of British Columbia campus.

Charles Decisions Omaha's Larry Watson

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles knocked Larry Watson down four times in the fifth round Tuesday night before the Omaha light heavyweight finally was knocked out at two minutes 50 seconds of the round before a slim crowd at the Milwaukee Arena.



A brutal body attack gave the Cincinnati Negro his 10th straight victory in his comeback campaign for a shot at the title now held by Rocky Marciano, who watched the fight from a ringside seat.

Watson was down once in the third and twice in the fourth of the scheduled 10-rounder before Charles really opened up in the fifth. Watson weighed 175½ and Charles 188¾.

Milwaukee Clips Cincinnati 6-0 To Lead League

By ED CORRIGAN, Associated Press Sports Writer

Everyone knew that Milwaukee Braves were improved over last year, but even manager Charley Grimm, the optimist eternal, didn't dare dream that his outfit would be leading the National League with more than a month of the season gone. Grimm's club staggered home seventh last year, 32 games behind Brooklyn Dodgers who won the pennant, and his prediction this year was fifth and with plenty of breaks perhaps, fourth.

This is a team that should get better before it gets worse, too. Neither Sid Gordon nor Andy Pafko have been hitting, and these two veterans figure to be the mainstays of the attack along with Eddie Mathews and Joe Adcock. Both Gordon and Pafko are under .250.

Grimm's youth movement is panning out even better than he expected, but in the long run it will be the veterans like Gordon and Pafko, along with pitchers Max Surkont (6-0) and Warren Spahn (4-1) who will spell the difference between a struggling club or one with confidence.

6-0 VICTORY

Spahn, a four-time 20-game winner, hurled the Braves to a four-hit 6-0 victory over Cincinnati Redlegs Tuesday to pull his team 1½ games ahead of the second-place St. Louis Cardinals.

The victory was the 12th in the last 16 games for the Braves and was the sixth straight game in which they have not made an error. They lead the league in defence.

The Cards split a doubleheader with Chicago Cubs. The Redbirds won the opener 6-3 but dropped a 3-2 decision to Turk Lown in the nightcap.

St. Louis has been cutting a swath through the league, too. The defeat in the afterpiece was only the second in the last nine games.

HAD EASY TIME

Harvey Haddix had an easy time in the opener with Red Schoendienst supplying most of the power. The second baseman had a perfect three-for-three, including a home run, and drove in three runs.

In the second game, the Cards looked to be on their way to another triumph. They were leading 2-0 in the sixth inning on the strength of bases empty home runs by Vinegar Bend Mizell and Enos Slaughter. But the Cubs got rid of Mizell in the sixth and held off the Redbirds the rest of the way.

They were the only games scheduled in the National League.

Both Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox picked up a half-game on the idle New York Yankees in the American League. The second-place Indians fought off a ninth-inning rally by Detroit Tigers to pull it out 9-8 on a home run by Larry Doby and the Pale Hose polished off St. Louis Browns 8-2. Both were night engagements.

Philadelphia and Boston were rained out.

Canadian Commander In Korea Asks For British Produced Guns

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP)—Brig. Jean Allard has recommended to Ottawa that the Patchett machine-carbine replace the Sten gun in his brigade.

Extensive tests by infantrymen and armorers in the 25th Canadian infantry brigade during April have demonstrated the British-produced weapon to be sufficiently superior to the Sten to merit immediate purchase.

But Allard also has reported that it is not yet sufficiently better to replace the Sten throughout the army. He has recommended that the search for a better automatic weapon continue.

(The Canadian Army is developing several automatic weapons in attempts to find its own answer to some soldiers' need for a personal automatic rifle capable of firing effectively at 100-yard and 200-yard ranges, yet handy enough for close-in fighting.)

OFFERED IN 1941

The Patchett, commercially produced in Britain, was first offered to the forces in 1941. It is a nine-millimetre weapon weighing 10½ pounds with magazine loaded and its knife-type bayonet attached.

It can be fired either from the shoulder or the hip, and with its butt flipped under and locked to the barrel it is considered good for close-in fighting.

However, say the reports collated by the brigade, it has defects which make it unacceptable as a standard weapon for the Canadian Army.

Vibration when firing, say the reports, shakes certain parts loose. Its barrel overheats where the left hand is supposed to hold it. Its metal butt bends easily, which affects accuracy and comfort.

OTHER DEFECTS

More seriously, they say, the Patchett can be reassembled wrongly and still fire. That makes it dangerous. It is said to have too many parts, especially small ones, making reassembling it under stress in darkness over-difficult. And of the two comfortable ways to hold it, one places the left hand on the magazine, considered a bad habit, and the other has the thumb over the muzzle—just right for amputation.

British ordnance officers say the overheating and vibration may be reduced by lengthening the barrel, which also would safeguard the thumb.

Canadian soldiers now using the Sten have little confidence in it.

As the Patchett, with all its defects, is considered much the better, and as soldiers who have used it report confidence in it, the decision is to recommend its purchase.

The view here is that the fighting soldier is entitled to a weapon in which he has confidence. It is considered better to settle now for a reasonable weapon than to wait until the fighting is over for the ideal answer to be produced.

tolerance. The man in authority—whether he be driving a truck or a senior waiter among assistants—is in the mood of a man who has been waiting to attain that position for fifteen generations. And I don't mean just Communists, for actually they are in the minority in all Yugoslavia. With such a background and such a people there need be little wonder that the over-all government runs a police state.

MOST COLORFUL COSTUMES

Bosnia claims to have the most colorful of the Yugoslav costumes. These you will find in the country more than in the city, but even here in the city they are numerous. The Moslems were obliged by law to remove their veils half a dozen years ago, but many of the women still peer out from heavy shawls or turn their eyes downward when any man approaches. Some women carry a handkerchief held to their mouth as though they had a toothache. Many men still wear headwrappings; the Serbian farmer, the Jew, the Moslem in his fez. But the most common costume in Sarajevo and hereabouts is that of poverty: Rags and patches, patches worked upon old vests, feet bandaged in old socks or goatskin moccasins but still breaking out in holes and caked with mud. These poor are in the streets, but they seem to go about their business and begging is almost unknown. They retain a personal dignity, somewhat, though not as much as did the innumerable poor I saw in India and Pakistan. A Westerner cannot look at them without feeling a sense of personal emabrrassment at his own rarely-admitted good fortune.

COLORFUL BAZAAR

Yesterday morning I sat for an hour upon a big flat stone by the edge of the old bazaar and wished I were reporting by movie camera instead of having to conjure up a Balkan bazaar out of a steel-fingered typewriter.

Peasants had walked in from the hills with their wares and the poorer of the city s residents had come out early for the bargains. Cottage cheese spewed out upon rough wood tables, men carried cans of milk and cream strapped upon their shoulders and from them filled the housewife's proffered jug or mug.

At the next long table stood a lean limbed woodsman selling plates and spoons he had fashioned out of a light wood, and beside him a skinny young boy with only one tooth in his mouth guarded a pile of rough shoelaces he had made from the hide of a cow or goat.

GREAT CONTRAST

Radishes appeared in great mounds, and lettuce, and a kind of rough cabbage, but there seemed no other vegetables except potatoes. One counter bore smoked meat that must have been raised on garlic, killed by garlic, wrapped in garlic. Cherries were on the next table, and a wonderful old woman in the long pantaloons of the Moslem sang a sort of lament to attract attention.

A few feet away was a table where there seemed always a group of young bucks or old men, and on getting up from my rock I observed it was run by a man with a barrel of plum brandy which he dispensed in a tiny iron cup for about six cents a swig. That, however, was not my favorite table. The latter was where half a dozen peasants had piled up little open sacks of herbs of one kind or another Buyers would finger them, rub them, smell them—and walk away. The vendors seemed only to admire them for their fastidious taste, but at the end of the hour each had unloaded a good deal so I judged it wasn't inferiority of product that was their problem but that each buyer knew precisely what he wanted and wasn't taking anything in its place.

FOOD VERY DIFFERENT

I confess the market made eating not much more desirable than some of the restaurants. The food may be good if you are accustomed to it. But you need a highly developed taste for fats and greases and you have to be entirely indifferent to whether the hot things come hot or cold, time being unimportant to these people. You must also welcome garlic and onion as inevitable, and of course milk and cream and therefore cheese are not on the advised list for short-stay visitors. Tuberculosis is the scourge of the country and though a start is being made through UNICEF at developing pasteurization it will take barrels of money and years of education.

But oe doesn't come to Yugoslavia to eat, and there is nothing amiss about the food that a private supply of plain biscuits and chocolate bars cannot put right. They do play havoc with the eating hours though. You waken shortly after dawn because all the world is up and about by then. Lunch may come anywhere between 1 and 3:30, for the average work day is from 7 until 2 without pause for meal and whether tourist or not you seem to fall in with that lunch habit. Consequently the evening meal may not begin until 9:00 or 10:00. Between times you are meant to sustain yourself with plum brandy just as frequently as you'd reach for a cigarette.

WINE POPULAR

As a matter of fact they often break open a bottle of wine between meals instead of brandy, or in addition to it. The wine is better than Canadian, but that doesn't mean we should go to the trouble to import it. Up in Slovenia, they say, the wine is as good as German or French, and some years when the French product is not so good the French import the Yugoslav stuff and put French labels on it. So the Slovenians say, anyway, but fifty million Frenchmen will surely say it isn't so.

Anyway, I seem to be having trouble in keeping this story away from food and drink so let's call a halt to the whole thing right here. Besides, it is getting on towards sundown and I'm going back to that old market near the 16th century mosque and hear the Muezin sing evening prayer from the top of his tapering minaret.

The Movie Column

Stack Pioneered In 3D Films, Missed Chance

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The star of Hollywood's first 3D epic admits the picture was bad.

But it did wonders for the movie business, himself included, says Robert Stack, the glamor boy of the society and cinema circuit.

He was the leading actor in Arch Oboler's "Bwana Devil," the independent film that caused a revolution in the film industry.

"The picture was bad," Stack admitted. "But Oboler is now a millionaire. How can you argue with that?"

The actor added that he is black and blue from kicking himself. He could have had a 10-per-cent cut of the picture, instead of taking his salary.

COULDN'T SEE IT

"But I couldn't see it," he sighed. "We were pioneering all the way. So I decided to take my money while I could. If I had taken the 10 per cent instead, I would now be ahead $150,000."

Stack told me these facts between the blasts of jet airplanes. He was working at San Fernando valley airport on "Sabre Jet," the first air epic about fighter pilots over Korea.

"The basic story of 'Bwana Devil' sounded okay, so I signed to do the picture," he remarked. "The script turned out to be bad. It was incredibly difficult.

"The technicians had no precedent to go by. They had no idea of how to take advantage of the depth illusion. The color was off. The two prints were different colors, producing a strange kind of brown when viewed with both eyes.

"But you've got to hand the credit to Oboler. He stuck it through and did the experimenting that the major studios have profited from."

DONE 5 FILMS IN ROW

By the end of summer, Stack will have completed five pictures in a row.

"I did a picture called 'The Bullfighter and The Lady' three years ago," he remarked. "The film was acclaimed by critics of all the newspapers and magazines. I did not work for a year and two months! But after 'Bwana Devil,' which was panned by everyone, I've had all the parts I can handle. The picture gave me a saturation of the film market.

"I can feel it in the fan mail. The fans have been writing more since 'Bwana Devil' and they seem more familiar."

UPS AND DOWNS

Stack's career has had its up and downs. He was going great guns with the malt shop set before the war. But his career lost momentum during his absence in the service. Now it's getting back in high gear. He's sticking to he action field in independent pictures.

"The independents can't afford to put on the spectacles that the big studios do," he observed. "But they can compete by getting good actors and directors and making scrips that are well written and with plenty of action."

Liberal Re-election Expected In N.S.

OTTAWA (CP)—Tuesday's election victory of Premier Macdonald of Nova Scotia was not a surprise in Ottawa.

There had been little discussion of the campaign, and the return of the Liberal party had been generally expected.

Acting Prime Minister Claxton messaged Premier Macdonald "warmest congratulations." The national leaders of the two major parties, Prime Minister St. Laurent and George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, are both in London for the Coronation.

Hees Prepared To Cut Taxes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — George Hees, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto Broadview, said Tuesday night his party can reduce taxation without impairing essential defence or social security.

It could be done, Mr. Hees said in an address prepared for delivery to a nomination convention of the London Progressive Conservative Association, "by applying to government the same principles that apply to industry."

Industry remained efficient by continually bringing in new blood to positions of responsibility, ensuring that methods used in each department are continually under review.

Robert W. Mitchell, local lawyer, was named candidate for the riding in the federal election. Mr. Mitchell defeated James Currie, railroad conductor for the nomination.

Meeting Places

EXETER, England (CP)—Archdeacon W. A. Westall said here that some clergymen are too much like fussy housekeepers. He said: "Keeping churches like museums invites visitors to treat them as such."

Publicity-Shy Gloucesters In Coronation Limelight

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

LONDON (CP)—The publicity-shy Duke and Duchess of Gloucester who share a reluctance toward big state occasions will be separated for a great part of the Coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey.

The petite, Scots-born Duchess will reach the abbey ahead of her husband, taking her place in the royal box before the Queen's arrival. The Duke will ride behind the Queen's carriage from Buckingham Palace to the abbey, and walk in the Queen's procession down the aisle behind Her Majesty. He will then take his place with the Dukes of Edinburgh and Kent.

The Duchess will proceed down the aisle of the abbey between the Princess Royal and the Duchess of Kent—it will be an intimate family affair. At her side will be her two sons, 11-year-old Prince William and eight-year-old Prince Richard. Her coronet will be carried by a nephew, the Earl of Dalkeith, married early this year to mannequin Jane McNeill.

The Duchess' ermine-trimmed purple train will be carried by a niece, Lady Caroline Gilmour.

AT THREE CORONATIONS

The tall, soldierly Duke of Gloucester is, however, no novice at such ceremonies. When the young niece he has known from babyhood is crowned Elizabeth II, it will be the third British coronation he has witnessed in his 53 years.

As an 11-year-old schoolboy in 1911, he watched from the royal box at the coronation of his father, George V. In 1937 he walked up the aisle with his young wife to take his stand with the Royal Dukes at the coronation of his second brother, George VI.

The military Duke, whose regiments include the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps and Royal Winnipeg Rifles, has, however, always suffered from the shyness that has been characteristic of most of the Windsors. This kept him in the background even in the flapper days of the 1920s, when his elder brothers enjoyed London's night life.

COLLECTS ANTIQUES

Then and now, the Duke preferred browsing round back-street antique shops, building a collection that one day may approach the standards set by the rich collection gathered by the late Queen Mary. The Duke shared his mother's interest in antiques, learned much from her, and now is the most knowledgeable member of the Royal Family on the subject.

Such hobbies were not calculated to win popularity among the debutantes of his bachelor years. In fact, one flighty flapper dubbed him "the debutante's despair"—a title his brothers did not let him forget in a hurry. He was 35 before a childhood friendship led to romance and he married Lady Alice Montague-Douglas - Scott, nearly two years his junior.

The Duchess' reticence matched that of her husband, and they have established a quality of self-effacement whereby they take a full part in royal engagements, yet remain comparatively unnoticed. Few people not intimately connected with royalty, for instance, appreciate that the quiet figure stepping up behind the Queen on many state occasions is the Duchess of Gloucester.

COUNSELLOR OF STATE

As a senior Royal Duke with a powerful vote in all Royal Family matters, the Duke of Gloucester takes part in behind-the-scenes activities. When the Queen and her husband leave on such trips as the royal tour of Canada, the duke is senior counsellor of state.

The Gloucesters spend as much time at their country home, Barnwell Castle, Northamptonshire, as royal commitments permit, but with other members of the Royal Family they have a heavy schedule of post-Coronation activities that will keep them at their London apartment in St. James's Palace.

They will take their place at such state functions as two Buckingham Palace banquets, June 3 and 4, luncheons and dinners for overseas diplomats and royalty and a gala performance at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, at which the Queen will be present. They will preside at a dinner to be given by the Overseas League and Victoria League and for racing at Ascot they will stay with the Queen at Windsor Castle.

Find Earnings Higher Than In 1952

TORONTO (CP)—Industrial employment, payrolls and average weekly earnings in Ontario so far this year are all higher than the record level for the same period last year, the Ontario bureau of statistics and research said Tuesday.

In its economic review of Ontario, the bureau reports that production of most goods is well above 1952 figures, notably in the electrical appliances and automobile fields, with increases of 26.7 per cent and 16.7 per cent respectively.

Prices at retail and wholesale levels are lower to date than for the same period last year.

FARM PRICES DROP

Farm prices show a drop of 11.4 per cent. Retail trade in the province for the first quarter of 1953 was eight per cent higher than for the same period last year. Largest dollar increases were in appliances and radio, 30.7 per cent, and furniture, 16.8 per cent.

Employment in manufacturing industries at the beginning of March was 8.3 per cent higher than at the same time last year. Average weekly earnings were $62.36, up $3.79, and payrolls were up 15.3 per cent.

First Czech Spy Trial Since Death Of Stalin

LONDON (Reuters)—Communist Czechoslovakia Tuesday night announced the first spy trial behind the Iron Curtain since Stalin's death.

The trial opened and closed in a single day, instead of the drawn-out shows previously staged.

The defendants were convicted but none was sentenced to death.

The result was reported by the official Czechoslovak news agency Ceteka. One of the defendants was Richard Slansky — brother of the executed Rudolf Slansky, former secretary-general of the Czechoslovak Communist Party.

Richard Slansky was sentenced to life imprisonment, together with Eduard Goldstuecker, formerly attached to the Czech embassy in London.

Two other defendants, Pavel Kavan and Karl Dufek, were sentenced to 25 years.

The charges against the four accused were treason and espionage —similar to those made against Rudolf Slansky, former foreign minister Vladimir Clementis, and 12 other former top party leaders in the last spectacular state trial in Czechoslovakia last November. All but a handful of those defendants were executed.

Ceteka said the four men sentenced Tuesday all pleaded guilty.

Collection Of Indian Relics Made By Belleville Man

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP)—M. C. Cummings has been picking up bits of stone and pottery for more than 12 years.

Today the silver-haired, bespectacled accountant has a collection of some 1,000 Indian relics which include arrowheads, necklaces, spearheads, hammers, tomahawks, axes and pottery.

It all started when Mr. Cummings now district representative of the Ontario Archaeological Society was in his teens, working for a lumber company some 75 miles north of Sudbury. He was in charge of a group of Indian laborers and quickly picked up the Ojibway language and the habit of wearing moccasins.

Through the men under his charge he found an interest in Indian products of earlier years.

TWO CAMP SITES

Most of his artifacts come from two prehistoric Indian camp sites, one located some 20 miles from Belleville and the other a few miles north of this city.

Mr. Cummings believes that relics from the first site indicate it was occupied by people of the Laurentian culture which existed between 3,000 and 5,000 BC. The second site, which he discovered himself, yields evidence that it was first inhabited by people of the Laurentian culture and later by members of the Point Peninsula culture which existed around 500 AD. People of this culture are thought to be ancestors of the Iroquois.

BURIAL GROUNDS

Many of Mr. Cummings' findings are under study by museum officials in Ottawa. Most were made from flint, quartz, chert, jasper and agate and are believed to have been pressure-shaped by striking them with stone hammers and polishing with wet sand.

Mr. Cummings says that many Indian burial grounds are to be found along the shore of the Bay of Quinte on the north shore of Lake Ontario. The mounds vary in diameter from 30 to 50 feet at the base and some 12 feet at the apex. None is higher than five feet.

100 Families Flee Lackawanna Flood

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Flood waters that chased more than 100 families from their homes in nearby Lackawanna retreated Tuesday, leaving heavy damage and a sanitation problem for the city of nearly 30,000.

Officials announced that water still coursing through the street had forced indefinitely postponement of garbage collection.

Police and fire authorities tentatively estimated damage as high as $1,000,000 to the 3,000 homes in the flooded area.

Britain Supporting Latest Truce Plan

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill Tuesday night announced Britain's "complete support" for the United States' latest proposals to end the Korean deadlock.

Churchill said the new secrecy-shrouded proposals made at Panmunjom Monday "are very close to the terms of the Indian resolution passed by the United Nations in December last."

"They have the complete support of Her Majesty's government," he added.

Liberals Win With 49.7% Of Popular Vote

HALIFAX (CP)—Tabulation by The Canadian Press of the popular vote in Tuesday's Nova Scotia election shows that the Liberal party won re-election with 49.7 per cent of the popular vote, compared to 51 per cent in 1949.

Progressive Conservatives candidates polled 42.9 per cent of the total vote to elect 13 of the legislature's 37 members. In the 1949 election, the party's candidates polled 39 per cent and seven were elected.

The CCF vote, which elected the same two members as in the last House, dropped to 6.8 per cent from 10.

Liberal votes elected 22 members compared to 28 four years ago.

CONTESTED EVERY SEAT

Liberals and Progressive Conservatives entered candidates for every seat as they did in 1949. The CCF had 16 candidates compared with 21 last time.

With tabulation almost complete (1,633 of 1,665 polls), the figures were as follows (percentages bracketed):

	1953	1949
Lib	168,596 (49.7)	174,269 (51)
PC	145,715 (42.9)	134,190 (39)
CCF	23,024 (6.8)	32,998 (10)
Others	2,075 (0.6)	750 (—)
Totals	339,410	342,207

(These figures, however, do not indicate the total number of voters but the number of votes cast. There were five two-member constituencies in which each voter could mark his ballot for two candidates.)

Hint Macdonald Serving His Last Term

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Premier Angus L. Macdonald who led the Liberals to victory in Nova Scotia's provincial general election, fought what many believe will be his last contest at the polls.

Now 63 and with 20 years of political life behind him, the man who became the province's youngest premier when he formed a cabinet in 1933 is expected to retire after this term in office.

Holding the premiership until July, 1940, Mr. Macdonald resigned to become federal naval minister. He returned to the provincial field Sept. 8, 1945, and in October led

The premier, familiarly known as "Angus L", was born in 1890 at Dunvegan, Inverness county. His father was a Scot and his mother French.

SERVED WITH HIGHLANDERS

After attending public school, he studied at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S., Dalhousie University in Halifax and later at Columbia and Harvard.

He interrupted his studies at Dalhousie to serve as an officer with the Cape Breton Highlanders during the First World War.

In 1924 he became lecturer at Dalhousie's law school and five years later was named assistant dean of the faculty, a post he held until 1930 when he resigned to contest Inverness in a federal election, and lost.

In October of the same year he was named Liberal leader of the province and started his long record of election victories in 1933.

Criticized during the election campaign as being too old, Mr. Macdonald's reply has been:

"In 1933 they said I was too young; now they say I'm too old; I wish they would make up their minds.

Eisenhower Reaffirms Intention Of Not Forcing PoWs Go Home

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower Tuesday night reaffirmed that the United States and its Allies in Korea are sticking to the principle that prisoners of war must not be forced to go home.

"Our Allies are in full accord," Eisenhower said.

But if there was international unity on that issue, there was a sharp dissent from South Korea on the latest United Nations truce proposals. And at home, dissatisfacion was voiced by members of Congress with the current course of events.

"Even the best truce under present conditions will be extremely unsatisfactory," said Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, Republican Senate leader. He suggested that if the present talks fail, "we might as well abandon any idea of working with the United Nations in the east, and reserve to ourselves a completely free hand."

Representative I. Millet Hand (Rep.-N.J.) took issue with the no-forced-repatriation principle, urged that the administration stop "splitting hairs" and get a quick truce.

CLARIFYING STATEMENT

Eisenhower's statement, which the White House said was issued to clear up unspecified misunderstandings, said:

"Certain principles inherent in the United Nations command position. . .are basic and not subject to change.

"No prisoners will be repatriated by force. No prisoners will be coerced or intimidated in any way. And there must be a definite limit to the period of their captivity.

"The procedures used in handling the prisoners must reflect these principles."

South Korea (through ambassador You Chan Yang, told the state department the latest Allied truce proposals are "completely unsatisfactory." Rising anger over the proposals, which have not been officially disclosed, was evident in Seoul.

FEAR KOREA DIVIDED

The objection appeared to be a fear that a truce would leave Korea divided, with the Chinese Reds in North Korea indefinitely.

"We will fight alone if necessary even if we are exterminated," ambassador Yang told newspapermen Tuesday after a 70-minute talk with Walter Bedell Smith, acting secretary of state.

Informants said Smith reassured Yang that the U. S. will press for a unified Korea despite plans for an armistice along the battle line.

Yang said his government "is insisting that a unified Korea be part of the truce picture."

U. S. officials, disturbed by this criticism, expressed confidence that the South Korean objections would not upset current negotiations. They said the idea of a unified Korea would be pressed at a political conference, set to follow any truce agreement.

Hastings Women Plan Coronation Tea Party

HASTINGS (ENS) — President of Group 2 of the WA, Mrs. Arthur Beamish was hostess for the May meeting with 29 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. F. Crate had charge of the worship, the theme being "Purity of Heart"; the scripture from the book of Matthew was read by Mrs. James Essex.

Mrs. George Rigby, delegate to the convention, brought back a report, interesting and capably given. The secretary and treasurer gave their reports. Mrs. George Pickens donated another quilt top.

The flowers for the church for June will be looked after by Mrs. L. Humphries, Mrs C. Oliver, Mrs. Nyenhuis, and Mrs Rymerson.

Plans are going ahead for the Coronation tea to be held on the lawn at the home of Mrs. J. H. Hess on June 4. Mrs. A. Waters will be hostess for the June meeting. Committee is Mrs. L. Humphries, Mrs. H. Oliver, Mrs. A. Waters and Mrs. A. Poole.

Arcaro To Ride In Plate Race; Canadiana Out?

By JIM BASTABLE

TORONTO (CP)—The chalk-eaters and the ordinary guys who like to take a two-buck fling on the horses wondered today if Canadiana, their pin-up filly in the autumn, was just another bangtail in the spring.

The wonder horse of Canadian racing last year may be scratched from the June 2 running of the Queen's Plate, at 1⅛ miles, and the greatest test of her brief career. It all depends on a one-mile workout she will make Thursday or Friday.

Canadiana's owner, industrialist E. P. Taylor of Toronto, said Tuesday the three-year-old filly will be given a run over a fast track before he decides whether to start her in the $20,000-added Plate classic, the country's top turf event.

NOT AT HER BEST

Canadiana was an 8-to-5 favorite in the winter book—the shortest odds in Plate history—but came fourth in the Plate Trial last Saturday. She was 1-to-10 at post time and finished two lengths behind the winner, Blue Scooter, the second choice at 11-to-1.

Taylor said Tuesday:

"We know what Canadiana can do. If she doesn't work up to that, she isn't herself, and she's too valuable a filly to be sent nine furlongs when she isn't right."

Taylor also announced that Eddie Arcaro, one of the all-time great jockeys, has been commissioned to ride for him in the Plate.

Canadiana was third-ranking filly in North America last year, won nine of her 11 starts as a two-year-old and collected $40,762 in purses. She was beaten only once on Canadian soil in 1952 when she raced wide and virtually was pulled up at Thorncliffe Park in Toronto.

In her only defeat in the United States, Canadiana was carried wide at Pimlico and was beaten by 1½ lengths.

Harvie Ward Scores Impressive Win

HOYLAKE, England (AP)—Defending champion Harvie Ward of Atlanta, Ga., scored an impressive victory and runner-up Frank Stranahan of Toledo a weird one as the second round of the British amateur golf championship was completed Tuesday.

But another top-flight United States golfer, veteran Jack Munger of Dallas, suffered the same fate as three of Britain's front-line players. He was beaten, 2 and 1, by A. M. Bucher of Scotland in the third round.

Three of Britain's top entries—Gerald Micklem, John Langley and David Blair—were upset by fellow Britons.

Ward, who beat Stranahan last year in the third straight all-American final for the British title, smothered Irishman John Caldwell, 7 and 6.

LONG PUTTS CONCEDED

Stranahan played six-foot, four-inch Ian Patey of Chester, England. Stranahan finally pulled out a 2 and 1 decision in a match where long putts were conceded and short ones missed by both players.

Gordon Whitehead, a Manchester fishmonger, turned on Micklem, the 1953 English champion, and won 2 and 1, in the day's biggest upset.

Scotsman David Blair was beaten, one up, by a fellow Scot, Graeme Patrick.

Langley, already named to the British Walker Cup team which will meet the Americans at Marion, Mass., in September, lost by the same margin to Alec Gray of Scotland.

BC ENTERS CNE MEET

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia will send a coach and at least 10 athletes to the newlyorganized Canadian National Exhibition track and field meet at Toronto Sept. 5.

Lloyd Swindells, B.C. Track and Field Association president, announced this Tuesday after meetings with George Duthie of Toronto sports director of the CNE. Duthie told track officials that B.C. probably would be advanced $3,500 to take its track stars to the Ontario city.

Financial assistance for the meet will come from Toronto sportsmen donations. Athletes from every province are expected to compete.

"It will be a fine thing for us and for all track and field in Canada," Swindells said.

Duthie, on a coast-to-coast tour to help organize provincial meets leading to the Dominion competition in September, suggested that this year a limited number of events should be scheduled. Track officials balked at this and urged that a full list of men's and women's events should be on the card and that Labor Day, Sept. 7, should be included in the meet.

"Women athletes are definitely in the plan and events for them are scheduled," Duthie said.

Scanning Trail For Climbers

KATMANDU, Nepa. (Reuters)—Anxious eyes scanned the narrow trail leading to Katmandu from Mt. Everest today, watching for native runners who will bring word of the success or failure of the British expedition attempting to conquer the world's highest peak.

Mountain experts said that if the men of the climbing team failed to reach the summit last week-end, they probably now are digging in to await another spell of good weather.

Weather forecasters said at least one fierce snowstorm was expected to assault the 29,002-foot peak today.

Atmospherics cut off all news from the expedition's radio transmitter, so nobody knows whether they made it. If they did, the news is on its way down the icy slopes with runners, who cannot arrive before next Saturday.

Bay Of Quinte Meet Draws 500 Delegates

OSHAWA (CP)—Some 500 clergy and laymen today attended the Bay of Quinte conference of the United Church of Canada. The two-day conference began Tuesday.

Seven counties, from Pickering east to Renfrew, are represented.

GRADUATING from Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph Tuesday, Cameron Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton A. Clark, RR 2, Peterborough, received his bachelor of science degree. During his final year he was president of both the OAC Students' Administrative Council and the OAC-OVC-Mac Union Council.

One Sidewalk At A Time City Decides

From its experience on Devon Ave., board of works will hesitate the next time a petition asks for sidewalks on both sides of a street.

"This is the first case we've had of a petition for both sides," City Engineer Chalmers told the board Monday night.

The construction bylaw was passed last year. A belated request from three residents of the south side was considered Monday night, but the board decided that the effect of the original petition should continue and that the bylaw should stand.

The latest objection was from James B. Clark, F. B. Smitheram and John Haldimand, asserting that they constituted 50% of the south side and that the assessment of their property exceeded 50% of the total value on that side of the street. City Clerk Outram recalled for the information of the board that a petition for sidewalks on both sides, May 19, 1952, carried the names of 91.6% of the property value.

Four residents of the south side at that time requested that their names be withdrawn from the petition. To remove doubt about its presentation, a second petition was circulated on both sides, and again the request was confirmed.

City Clerk Outram remarked that if two separate petitions had been obtained, one for each side of the street, the required percentage could not have been reached on the south side in view of the opposition indicated in the recent appeal dated May 15 this year.

City Solicitor Huycke, speaking about "the work" authorized by the construction bylaw (for the two sidewalks), said the petition had been verified by the Clerk, and the council thereby "was bound to pass the bylaw."

One of the comments was that, if a walk was laid only on the north side, more or less use of it would be made by people living on the opposite side.

Mr. Huycke said that signatories to a petition could have their names deleted prior to the passing of the desired construction bylaw, but not afterwards. In this case the bylaw was introduced in council and passed and received the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board.

A motion by Ald. W. J. Beggs recommended that a letter of explanation be sent to the three amendment-seeking owners on the south side of Devon Ave.

All the owners on the north side asked for a sidewalk, and those on the south side were evenly divided, for and against. The motion carried.

Defeated Dandelions In City Hall Lawn

Apparently none of the dandelions on the City Hall lawn survived the parks department herbicide treatment applied by watering can. The grass is in complete possession.

Meanwhile, City Engineer Chalmers was ready to spray goat's beard in several sections of the city on Tuesday, but the heavy rain temporarily stalled that campaign.

"I wish we could get citizens to help up in fighting this weed," Mr. Chalmers said today. "It has taken considerable hold in the north end of the town and also in Ashburnham, in the vicinity of Armour Hill and down as far as Maria St."

Police Say 'Pick-Ups' Morals Threat

Visiting Teen-Agers Pose Problem For Lindsay Police

LINDSAY (ENS). — Lindsay police have been working for the past few weeks to crack down on a problem which, they say, has been seriously threatening the morals of Lindsay's younger 'teen agers.

A court case last week resulted in the acquittal of four Fenelon Falls youths on vagrancy charges after they had become stuck in a local millyard in their car.

A 17-year-old Lindsay girl was in the car with them at the time and complained to police, stating that she had been promised a ride home from the main street by the youths and wound up instead in the lumber yard.

SERIOUS PROBLEM

During the trial, officers John Henley and Percy Mark of the local police complained to Magistrate E. A. Gee that it had become a serious problem, that of local girls being picked up on the main streets by youths from other towns. Lindsay boys were not implicated to any extent.

The police said that the purpose of the visiting 'teen-agers was obvious, and stated that the morals of the girls they were picking up were being threatened by such occurrences.

Crown Attorney Lorne Jordan noted that the girls were not entirely blameless. Later, the officers said that the problem had reached serious proportions some weeks ago, but had declined since the police began a drive against it.

"We wouldn't mind so much if they picked up adult women," said the police. "They can take care of themselves; but these girls don't know what they are doing, and it has made for some trouble with the parents in the past."

Station Agent Retires After 43 Years

LINDSAY (ENS). — A native of the Peterborough district, born in Ennismore Township, G. C. Telford, station agent at Lindsay for over 30 years, retired this week from the CNR express service after some 43 years' service, believed to be a record.

Officials of the Canadian National Express and district agents and fellow-employees gathered with Lindsay citizens and friends of Mr. Telford at the Hotel Benson for the presentation dinner on his retirement. He was presented with a purse of $125.

Mr. Telford started his railroading work with the Davis-Thompson office in Peterborough, and learned the express business there. He later went to runs in the Toronto-Niagara, Toronto-London, Toronto-Huntsville districts and worked for some time in Northern Ontario with the T and N O Railway, running around Timmins, Haileybury, and the gold area of the North.

FIRST PASSENGER TRAIN

He was one of the crew that took the first passenger train int Timmins. In 1914 he was appointed express agent at Haileybury, then six years later moved to Lindsay, where he has been ever since.

During his services with the company he put his musical talent to work, and was a member of the express company's quartette that included the late Fred W. Skitch of Peterborough, one of the pioneers in radio broadacsting in Canada.

He was an active member of the Kiwanis Club, and the IOOF, where he was presented with his 25-year Jewel some years ago. Mr. Telford was married during his working in Haileybury to the former Mary P. Barry, of Renfrew, who died last December. They had two sons, Bertram of Deep River, Clarence at home and Mrs. (Betty) John McLaughlin at home.

Something New

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—Something new is included in a contract signed Tuesday between the Southern Colorado Power Company and its AFL workers: each employee gets his birthday off as a paid holiday. The provision is in lieu of a holiday Armistice Day, Nov. 11.

A HANDSOME PORTRAIT of the Queen was presented to PCVS at Tuesday afternoon's assembly by the president of the Key Club John Eastwood (left, above). It was received on behalf of the school by principal C. S. Browne and will be displayed temporarily in the school library.

Reynolds Construction Co. Moves Head Office Into City

One of Ontario's largest housing contractors, Ernest Reynolds and Son, have moved to Peterborough and plan to make their permanent headquarters in the city. For several weeks the company has been bringing its equipment to Peterborough and storing it until all arrangements for the move have been completed. William Reynolds said the company will have its offices in the Royal Bank building on George St.

For the past two and a half years the Reynolds company has been working in Kingston and its main offices were located there. The company under two contracts built 251 houses, permanent married couples' homes, for the Department of National Defence.

BUILT IN PETERBOROUGH

Prior to moving to Kingston the company was in Peterborough, but only temporarily. They built 326 houses in the south end (the Monaghan Road, Rose Ave., McKellar St. area) and in Ashburnham. They were two years, beginning in 1948, on those houses.

Mr. Reynolds said he liked Peterborough as a place to settle down. He pointed out that the city has a "lot of diversified industy" and that "we received very good co-operation from the people and council."

"We haven't had a break in eight years," said Mr. Reynolds. "Now we're repairing, painting and getting settled again."

The company first started under Ernest Reynolds in Carleton Place in 1931. There throughout the thirties the company became well known for its construction on schools, bridges and other jobs.

Then in 1945 the company turned to housing. It started into this venture in Kirkland Lake, building 55 houses, then later moved to Timmins for another 100 homes. The company after that contract moved to Peterborough for a 326-house project.

Garlic And Onion Said Aid To Fertility

NEW YORK (AP)—Garlic and onions—in goodly quantity—are two items that can help increase male fertility, an international medical meeting was told Tuesday.

Dr. Raymond Cross of Dublin, speaking before the first world congress on fertility and sterility, also recommended sterile men dine also on bananas, celery, parsley, honey, cheese, marmite, molasses, treacle and a well-known brand of Irish stout.

In many cases, he reported, fertility in the male fluctuates in direct ratio to frequency of demands upon reproductive chemistry, and recommended the normal male space these demands every 10 days at the least, or even every six weeks. Fifteen months would be ideal. Dr. Cross said, but admitted that [illegible]

First Instalment Taxes Being Paid

First of the three instalments are due as follows: June 4 by residents of the south and centre wards; June 11 west and north wards; June 18 Ashburnham and Claraday.

Business tax was due May 14. Property owners who prefer to avoid rush in paying their inevitable tax bills have been depositing their cash and cheques during the last week.

City Treasurer Couper said that quite a number who are confirmed to the practice of one call "and get it over with" have sent in their cheques for the three instalments.

They may be drawn in three cheques, dated for the separate instalments, which are not cashed until tax payments are due.

Second instalment dates are: Aug. 6, south and centre wards; Aug 13, west and north; Aug 20, Ashburnham and Claraday.

Third instalment: Oct. 1, south and centre; Oct. 8, west and north; Otc. 15, Ashburnham and Claraday.

Five Pickets Arrested As Deputies Injured

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (AP)—Picket-line clashes sent two sheriff's deputies to the hospital and resulted in the arrest of five pickets today as salaried employees continued to cross the lines at two General Electric Company plants.

It was the third day of a back-to-work movement of 4,000 white-collar workers at the invitation of the company. The plants had been closed since April 6 in a strike by the International Union of Electrical Workers (CIO).

Cars attempting to enter the gates were rocked back and forth and nails were scattered on the ground.

Sheriff Albert Stone said he had 200 men on duty.

Those arrested were jailed without charge. They included John Maurillo, a sub-regional director of the CIO.

Band Concerts Scheduled For Two Parks

The annual Sunday night band concerts will be held again this summer at the Nicholls Oval band stand. The series of concerts, arranged by the Recreation Commission, will be by the Salvation Army Temple band and the Peterborough Citizens' band.

Alex Sinclair, recreation director, said today the first concert will be June 7 by the Citizens' band under Bandmaster Walter Parnell. The two bands will follow with alternating weekly performances.

Besides the concerts by the bands, the Peterborough Film Council will again provide films for several Sunday night programs. Then during the three weeks that most of the city factories are on holidays, July 19 and 26 and August 2, the concerts will be by records provided by the public library and films from the council.

SOUTH-END CONCERTS

Mr. Sinclair pointed out that other concerts will be provided on week nights throughout the summer at King Edward park for southend residents. These concerts will be by the Salvation Army and Citizens' bands.

A special Sunday evening program will be planned for June 28 at the Oval. Mr. Sinclair said a variety program including perhaps the Peterborough accordion band, the Peterborough barbershop chorus and films will be held that night.

Rush On For Decorations To Celebrate Coronation But Supplies Already Short

Requests Besiege Chamber of Commerce Last Minute Decision Likely To Leave Many Stores, Homes Bare

With Coronation Day next Tuesday less than a week away, a last-minute rush is on throughout the city for patriotic decorations. Indications are that a lot of people are going to be caught short in their plans to decorate their homes and places of business if they have left off ordering materials until now, in spite of a published request by Acting Mayor T. D. Miller last Friday to "get a little proud and gay about this rare occasion and string up flags and buntings."

The Chamber of Commerce office was beseiged with requests by telephone and in person today for supplies of decorating materials.

"I don't know where we're going to get them all," Secretary-Manager James Fraser said.

Mr. Fraser's assistant, Bob Hamilton reported to the C of C's board of directors at noon today that $500 worth of decorations had already been sold to members of the organization to decorate stores and industrial plants.

ALREADY SUPPLIED

Items which the C of C has supplied to its members as part of a special service include prints of camera portraits of Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh by the Ottawa photographer Karsh, cardboard crowns, royal coaches, reproductions of Westminster Abbey, illuminated scrolls and "beefeaters."

Meanwhile, the downtown section of the city is beginning to take on a festive appearance as flags and buntings have been hung out on public buildings and PUC workmen were busy stringing colored lights and assisting firemen in stringing colored pennants between the lamp-posts.

The pennants were purchased by the city in 1948 to mark the visit of Lord Alexander as Governor-General. They were subsequently stored and had since become stained with dirt so that it was necessary to have them cleaned before they could be used again.

NO CHARGE

One local firm was approached and quoted a price of 15 cents for each of the 500 pennants. Then Miss Mabel Gillen of Burtol Cleaners offered to clean them free of charge as her contribution to the decoration of the city. As a result, the job was done at no cost to the citizens.

In addition, 200 cardboard crowns and ciphers have been placed on the lamp-posts in the business section, paid for by the merchants of adjoining premises.

Among the first of the public buildings to be decorated is the city hall which is gay with a row of flags along the front and flying from staffs on the grounds.

A unique feature on the postoffice building is the presence of crowns behind the clock faces in the tower visible at night when the clock is illuminated.

Many of the merchants have already completed their coronation decorations with a few notable displays. Others have materials on hand for window displays which they plan to complete before Coronation Day. It is expected that some will work on their displays this afternoon but a few outstanding ones are being held in abeyance until just before the great event.

Church Officials Ask Tot Lot Be Discontinued

By request of church officials the supervised Tot Lot operated by the Recreation Commission at the All Saints' Anglican Church will be discontinued this summer.

The church said that destruction of church property by older children was the reason for their request.

There was a motion put forward by Alderman A. B. Burrows that the playground committee look into the matter of finding another suitable location for a Tot Lot to replace the one at All Saints' Church

The Canadian Scottish Club requested a grant from the commission to purchase a soccer ball to enable them to carry on soccer in the city league. The request was turned down because there was no provision in the commission's budget for the ball.

Residents of Burnham's Pt. belonging to the community club in that area requested that the commission remove the Burnham's Pt. hall. The club has disbanded and children are smashing windows and screens of the building.

It was moved by R. J. Bolton that the matter be referred to the Properties Committee, informing them that the commission has no further use for the building.

OSTRANDERS NEW STORE OPENS AT 1 P.M. THURSDAY

Now 60 Cents A Foot

Price Boosted For Lakefront Crown Lands

Effective May 25, 1953, new regulations affecting the sale of Crown Lands for summer resort purposes has been put into effect. The price of land that sold for 30 cents a foot frontage has now been increased to 60 cents a foot and survey charges increased from $80 to $125.

Applicants must now erect buildings valued at a minimum of $1,000 against the $500 requisite heretofore. Lands to be used for commercial purposes must have buildings worth $3,000; the old requirement was $2,000.

Another new ruling pertains to property frontages. All new surveys committed following the first of this year reserve a 66-foot frontage, riparian rights in order to avoid flood damage claims against the department. The only townships where this rule does not apply, at present, are South Burleigh, Methuen and Harvey.

CATERPILLAR CONTROL

Although the forest tent caterpillar nests are now making a showing in the district, the intensity of infestation is expected to be light this year compared with the past three or four.

The introduction of the diptera fly—called locally the grey fly—into the infested district areas in 1952 has reduced the caterpillar population to almost zero point, officials say. This fly lays its eggs in the live caterpillar and the parasitic larvae destroys the host insect.

WARBLE FLY CONTROY VS. FISH MORTALITY

Many townships have been spraying cattle for warble fly control and the insecticide contains five per cent rotenone which is deadly poison.

A case was reported in Durham County where crews who filled their portable truck tanks with water at a speckled-brown trout stream washed the tank at the same time. The resulting toxic residue in the water killed many fish and the department were called in to investigate the matter. Officials are asking farmers to exercise control of this operation.

23 Portuguese Trawlers Visit St. John's For Supplies

By STEVE HERDER

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Twenty-three salt-stained trawlers of the Portuguese fishing fleet have arrived here to take on supplies, bringing their annual complement of high-spirited sailors to lend a romantic flavor to this old seaport.

Brignt yellow dories bob over harbor waters as crew members visit friends on other ships and go ashore to buy clothing and other luxury items for the folks back home.

Foreign vessels have been coming here for centuries to take on supplies prior to renewing their search for cod on the Atlantic fishing banks.

Two hundred years ago, square-rigged barquentines roved nearby waters and they're still coming. One square-rigger, the Gazella, is believed to be at least 100 years old.

Like the other ships in the fleet, she is painted white and has auxiliary power. The ships ring harbor berths and lie anchored in the harbor.

They add color to the waterfront scene as some 1,800 fishermen, taking advantage of a week-long layoff to catch up on their washing, hang shirts and other garb out to dry in the rigging.

After taking on fuel, salt and provisions, the vessels will head for the Grand Banks, where they'll spend a brief spell before moving to waters off Greenland.

In September they return here for more supplies, put in some more time on the banks and then sail for home in time to avoid the cold Atlantic autumn storms.

As usual, their holds will be filled to capacity with prime cod, each ship having about 300 tons to show for the seven-month search.

Seven other ships are taking on supplies at Sydney, N. S.

VIGIL FOR A YOUNG MASTER — Waiting patiently beside clothing of his master, Lobo, pet dog of 15-year-old Ronald Bivens, keeps a mournful vigil while police grapple for Ronald's body in a pond near Welmouth, Mass. The boy drowned while experimenting with a home-made underwater breathing device.

Canada's Largest Importer

TORONTO (CP)—Canada has been the largest importer of capital goods in the world in recent years, the monthly review of the Bank of Nova Scotia said today.

During 1951, Canada imported more than $1,000,000,000 worth of machinery nd transport equipment and $815,000,000 worth of consumer goods.

The review says: "Canadian experience bears out the oft-demonstrated principle that an increasing degree of industrialization makes a country not a poorer but a better customer of other nations."

The large imports of machinery reflected the demand for many highly-specialized types of capital goods arising from Canada's post-war capital investment program. Consumer imports included small automobiles, quality clothing, watches, wines, china and fancy biscuits.

Even Tenements Sport Coronation Displays

LONDON (Reuters) — London's stately coronation route has no monopoly on decorations. Down in the grey, east end tenement district, gay bunting is going up where washing usually hangs.

Iron railings are wound with red, white, and blue ribbons. Portraits of the Queen are stuck on window panes. Golden paper crowns and royal cyphers adorn the drab, brown doors.

At the end of Russia lane is Queen's square, site of some of the most dismal tnements. But today it is a blaze of red, white and blue pennants. Underneath, children run, dance, and shout, while their fathers hammer at a wooden stage for the big Coronation party.

Seek Pay Increase

OSHAWA (CP)—The United Auto Workers of America (CIO-CCL) opened negotiations at the General Motors plant here Tuesday for a supplementary pay increase. Under a five-year contract which runs until June, 1955, GM employees receive a guaranteed annual increase of three cents an hour. The union wants the guaranteed annual increase boosted to four cents an hour.

Rebuilding Program Completed Ostranders Ready To Open Store

Five years and 21 days after first opening a store in Peterborough, Ostranders Jewellers are re-opening the company's George St. store following a $50,000 rebuilding program.

The rebuilding program followed a $100,000 fire of unknown origin which gutted the store Nov. 17, 1952.

A completely new and ultra-modern store will be open for public inspection at 367 George St., Thursday. The only similarity between the new store to "Ostranders" before the fire is the type of merchandise and the first storey front which is again green vitrolite. The second storey front exterior has been changed from buff to red brick and the glass bricks have been replaced by a casement window.

SHOW WINDOWS ENLARGED

The store front show windows have been enlarged to display more merchandise.

Inside the store has been decorated and equipped with the latest in display and light fixtures. The newest feature is a private diamond room where customers can inspect rings and stones in complete privacy.

Shadow box display boxes equipped with indirect lighting and new display wall sections have been installed.

A drop ornamental ceiling makes an attractive decorative feature and the best in lighting effects has been obtained by a combination of fluorescent and spot lighting.

The back of the store has been rebuilt as a gift section with walls of plywood peg board in soft colors. Here, too, special display shelves and sections show merchandise to the greatest advantage.

NEW WORKSHOP

Behind the store is a new workshop.

Manager Mort Knox also reported future building plans today. As soon as the building in the Zeller's block is completed the Ostranders' store will be extended 14 feet back for further office area.

The second storey has been finished in modern offices which the company will be ready to rent very soon.

"Thursday we would like people just to come and have a look at our new store," Mr. Knox said. "There will be specials and we have already stocked for the tourist season with special emphasis on types of china that has consistently proved popular with American visitors."

Following the November fire Ostranders opened temporary quarters at 163 Hunter St. W. This store has been closed during the past few days while the staff was engaged in preparing for Thursday's opening in the George St. Store.

The company first opened a store in Peterborough, May 7, 1948. It replaced the old Schneider Bros. Jewellers, which the company bought in 1947.

Doucett Cables Frost Of Tornado Damage

TORONTO (CP)—Acting Premier Doucett has sent a cablegram to Premier Leslie Frost, now in London for the Coronation, describing the damage caused by last Thursday's tornado in Sarnia and townships in Lambton, Perth, Oxord and Middlesex counties.

He reported that the townships appeared to have suffered greater damage than Sarnia on the basis of population but because of "the admirable spirit of persons in rural communities, appeals for aid were withheld until Sarnia's exact situation was clarified."

Red Cross relief efforts are in progress in the stricken areas and the highways department is working on clearing the wreckage in most rural districts.

Flood Threat Ends

TOWERING QUEEN—Six-foot, three-inch Queen Salote Tupou, only ruling Queen invited to the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, is greeted on arrival at London's Waterloo Station. The stately monarch of the Tonga Islands, in far-off Polynesia, will be one of the hits of the coronation ceremony if she wears her scheduled Tonga costume—a cocoanut fibre skirt over a silken native robe.

Royal Romances Have Handicaps

When Elizabeth II is crowned next Tuesday her husband will kneel before her and speak his homage as her "liege man of life and limb." Here is the story of the romance that made Philip the Queen's husband. This is the third of five articles on the Queen's life.

By JAMES F. KING

LONDON (AP)—Elizabeth was only four years old when the first speculation about her husband-to-be began under the ungrammatical headline in a London newspaper: "Who will the princess marry?"

The publicity on her heart affair never ceased until millions by radio heard her soft-spoken marriage vows.

In spite of this the romance of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip of Greece was a real love match by all accounts. The intriguing by political matchmakers, which so often has beset royal romancing down through history, in this instance was all in the direction of making love's path smoother.

WHEN DID IT START?

Just when it began no one is quite sure. The chances are that Elizabeth and Philip had met even before the first headline appeared speculating on her future husband.

Both are great-great-grandchildren of Queen Victoria. They grew up in the same circle and undoubtedly attended the same children's parties. But Philip, five years older, was more interested in ships than girls at that age.

"When I grow up," he was quick to tell everyone, "I'm going to be a naval officer like my uncle Dickie."

The princess was only 14 and Philip was a cadet at the naval college at Dartmouth when they made the first impression on each other. Elizabeth went with her parents for the presentation of the "King's dirk" to the prince as the top member of his class. The fair-haired, six-foot prince and the princess saw a lot of each other that week-end, and out of the meeting grew a letter-writing relationship that continued through the war years.

ARRANGED LEAVES

Philip was careful to arrange his naval leaves so that they coincided with parties the blue-eyed princess might be attending.

But royal romances have their handicaps. Even after Elizabeth was sure Philip had won her heart, protocol dictated that they must not be seen together in public too often. Post-war night-club visits—usually in groups of six or more—meant only a couple of dances together.

Word leaked out that an autographed photograph of the bearded Philip in his naval lieutenant's uniform had a prominent place on her dressing table.

Philip had none of the drawbacks of the German, Prince Albert, who became the consort of Queen Victoria. Nevertheless there were some political considerations to overcome.

Philip was a refugee, a Greek prince, and he was baptized in the Greek Orthodox Church. He was sixth in line for the Greek throne.

HAS NO GREEK BLOOD

Philip was born in Corfu but has no Greek blood. He is a grandson of Prince William of Denmark who accepted Greece's throne in 1863 as George I. He is a descendant of Queen Victoria on the maternal side.

Philip was brought to England as a one-year-old by his uncle Dickie after a rebel Greek government forced another uncle, King Constantine, to abdicate. He was brought up as a typical aristocratic school boy and in the Anglican faith. In the Second World War he took part in Mediterranean fighting in a number of ships and served on convoy duty around the world.

As a 20th - century princess, Elizabeth was free to marry of her own free choosing with two restrictions. The throne's ties with the Church of England barred her from marrying a Roman Catholic, and she could not marry without the King's consent.

RENOUNCED TITLE

Close friends took the engagement for granted when Philip spent his summer holiday with the Royal Family at Balmoral Castle in Scotland, and then took out British citizenship and renounced his Greek title in the winter of 1946-47.

But palace officials, sensitive about the private life of the heiress presumptive to the throne, were issuing denials of any impending marriage.

The only palace announcement was that Princess Elizabeth was going on a four-month tour of South Africa with the King and Queen. A love-sick girl took off on the battleship Vanguard for the long journey to meet Zulu warriors and other polyglot future subjects.

She carried off her role well, in line with her training, and won the affection of the South Africans, though there were times when she was bored. She complained about meeting so few young people.

"One would think they almost forgot that Margaret and I were coming when they planned the program," she said.

PLEDGE GIVEN

The cold war was beginning and Elizabeth came of age during the South African tour. In a broadcast from Capetown on her 21st birthday she gave this pledge:

"My whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to the service of the great imperial family to which we all belong."

Like any young girl in love, she was anxious to see her fiance, now just plain Lieut. Philip Mountbatten. And she let go with a few dance steps on the quarterdeck and hummed, "People will say We're in Love" when the Vanguard docked at journey's end.

Elizabeth was sure in her mind, and within two months, on July 10, 1947, the palace officially announced the engagement.

Winston Churchill sounded the theme in the House of Commons: "Millions will welcome this joyous event as a flash of color on the hard road we have to travel."

On the eve of the wedding, the King conferred a title on his future son-in-law, "His Royal Highness, the Duke of Edinburgh."

A world radio audience heard the ceremony in Westminster Abbey Nov. 20, 1947. Elizabeth promised with trembling lips in the traditional words of the Church of England service "to love, cherish and to obey" her husband.

New Projects Sought By Nova Scotia

HALIFAX (CP)—Nova Scotia is looking for new manufacturing projects to augment its lineup of basic industries.

The department of trade and industry says pulp and paper and textiles are high on its list. Also sought are industries in the fields of chemical products and precision machinery.

In the more distant future, but still the subject of surveys, are manufacture of diesel engines, fish leather, pipes and tubing and electrical equipment.

Industry Minister Dauphinee is hopeful about the province's industrial future. The forecast industrial expenditure this year, by government and private enterprise, totals more than $150,000,000 and represents a 13 per cent increase over last year, a rise matched only by oil-rich Alberta.

GREATEST INCREASE

The department says the establishment of new manufacturing plants gave Nova Scotia the greatest percentage increase in employment of any province between 1946 and 1950.

It gives government loans the credit for sparking many of the new enterprises. Departmental figures list establishment of 15 new industries since 1944, and expansion of 14 others, through government backing. The loans totalled nearly $2,000,000.

The industries are turning out a variety of products running from fish and fish derivatives, to margarine, vegetable products, millinery, insulation materials and metal products.

Industrial growth is shown in figures of production revenue: $183,000,000 in 1939 to $255,800,000 in 1950.

Asks Commemoration Of Laura Secord Walk

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — A yearly commemoration of Laura Secord's historic walk was suggested Tuesday night by B. C. Walters, inaugurator of the Niagara grape festival.

Addressing the Lincoln County Historical Society, he said the youthful Mrs. Secord "probably changed the course of history" by walking 20 miles over rough trails from Queenston to Beaver Dams to warn British troops of an impending attack by the invading Americans June 24, 1813.

Mr. Walters said the route followed by the Canadian heroine of the war of 1812 could be retraced by an automobile pilgrimage each year and that a commemorative ceremony could be held at the house where she met the British forces.

Drowned In Lake

MIDLAND (CP)—Arthur Leroux, 25, of Penetanguishene was drowned Tuesday while trying to swim ashore after fire broke out in the bilges of a 26-foot power cruiser on Lake Cognashene, 20 miles north of here. Police said the heavy rubber boots he was wearing when he jumped into the lake may have pulled him under. Richard Robitaille, 16, of Cognashene escaped from the fire and explosion which wrecked the launch.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. Cecile Would Like Postpone Labor Day

OTTAWA (CP)—Postponing Labor Day for two weeks would add millions of dollars in tourist revenue, Travel Minister Cecile of Ontario told a Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night in suburban Eastview.

He said that because Labor Day, the first Monday in September, is regarded generally as the end of summer, Canada loses a heavy volume of tourist business. Educationists had objected to his idea, but he believed adjustments could be made in the school curriculums to compensate for the added time off.

Bundle Of Clothing Believed Fugitive's

PORTLAND, Ont. (CP)—Police, combing this eastern Ontario area for a "paper bag gunman" who robbed the local branch of the Royal Bank of $4,876 Monday, found a bundle of clothing Tuesday believed worn by the fugitive.

The clothing was found at the side of the highway running through the village, between the bank and a nearby church.

The bandit entered the bank just before closing time, ordered two customers to lie on the floor, shoved a paper shopping bag through the teller's window and told the acting manager, John Coulter of Montreal, to fill it with money. He then fled.

Ottawa Spent $100,000,000 On Agriculture

OTTAWA (CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner said Tuesday night that the Liberal government spent more than $100,000,000 on agriculture last year, about $25,000,000 more than originally estimated.

But two Conservative governments which had preceded the current Liberal regime had reduced spending on agriculture "almost to the vanishing point" while in power the minister said in a speech prepared for the CBC's political broadcast, the Nation's Business.

In a direct appeal to the farmers' vote, Mr. Gardiner said that "this is election year again in Canada" and predicted the tussle at the polls will be a straight battle between the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives.

DOUBLE JOB

While Mr. Gardiner criticized the Progressive Conservatives on the English network, Postmaster-General Cote criticized the Progressive Conservatives on the French network. He said the party lacked principles and had no policy.

The Progressive Conservatives spoke in favor of lower taxes, but at the same time would increase them to pay for new projects and outlays, Mr. Cote said. They said the army was inadequate, but recommended a cut in arms and equipment. The Progressive Conservatives, he said, suffered from "political vandalism."

The federal government has imposed a quarantine on a 50,000-square-mile area.

Batsman On Big Flattop Takes Man Of Iron Nerves

ABOARD MAGNIFICENT (CP)—A man must have iron nerves and iron will to become and remain a batsman on an aircraft carrier.

If the operation of a warship could be said to hinge on one man at all, that man on this flattop would be either Lieut. Bob Williamson of Port Stanley, Ont., or Lieut. Bob Falls of St. Thomas, Ont., the two batsmen aboard.

Though Port Stanley and St. Thomas are only some 10 miles apart, Williamson and Falls hadn't met until they took up "batting."

The batsman, standing at the port-after corner of the flight deck, signals the carrier's aircraft home. With two brightly-colored paddles, he tells the pilot whether he is too high or too low, too near one side or the other, whether he is approaching too fast or slow, when to cut the engines for the actual drop-on or whether he should go around again for another try.

A batsman never is allowed as much as one mistake. He must always, without fail, be right. Not only may a mistake cost lives but it will wreck the pilots' confidence in the batsman and possibly destroy the effectiveness of the squadrons aboard.

Williamson claims that it's all a matter of temperament. Even to think of becoming a batsman, a man must have had the flying experience and have such confidence in his knowledge of aircraft that he knows he's going to be right every time.

Details of all the landings on the Magnificent are noted by the batsmen, who carefully go over the details with the pilot concerned. It is painstaking work but it helps to maintain confidence in the two-way operations.

Williamson, who has been flying for more than a decade and trained for his present job for six months in Florida, says the batsman strains every nerve to get every plane in on its first approach.

Often there are split-second decisions to be made, decisions which must be right.

Williamson and Falls both keep flying so that they are familiar with any type of plane which might settle on the carrier.

3-Man Board To Advise Reserve Army

By DOUGLAS HOW

OTTAWA (CP)—The army has asked three retired generals to tell it what to do about a big problem child—the reserve force.

Establishment of a three-man board to advise Lt.-Gen. G. G. Simonds, chief of the general staff on reserve force matters was announced Tuesday.

The board will visit reserve units across Canada "to gain first-hand knowledge of the current activities and problems" of the part-time force which in two world wars was the foundation of Canada's overseas fighting effort.

THREE MEMBERS

The three members are Major Generals Howard Kennedy, CBE, MC, of Ottawa, now head of the government's eastern Rockies forestry conservation board, H. F. G. Letson, CB, CBE, MC, of Vancouver, former secretary to the governor-general, and E. J. Renaud CB, CBE, of Montreal, former officer commanding the military area with Montreal as headquarters.

The problem of the reserve force has already been under study for months at army headquarters and various ideas for improving it have been put forward. The idea now apparently is to ask the three generals to take a long, hard look for themselves and then to give their views on these proposals.

Karl Clemens Winner Of Speaking Contest

MARMORA (ENS)—In a close public speaking contest in the town hall Friday evening under the supervision of Inspector G. Nelson of the Central Hastings Inspectorate, honors went to Karl Clemens of Marmora S.S. 1, who spoke on "A Visit to the Public Library."

Phyllis Walsh of Deloro Public School was second with "The Boyhood of Paderewski". These two scholars will join winners of other sections of the area in competition for the inspectorate championship at Tweed in the fall.

Judges were Leighton McGinnis, Mrs. A. Deans and Mrs. J. M. Brownlie who were unanimous in their decision. Reeve Ritchie Wells of Marmora village was chairman.

Between speeches a sing-song was conducted by Miss Olga Wurm, school music teacher of Madoc, with Mrs. A. F. Fraser as accompanist. Mrs. Fraser also contributed some piano selections.

Inspector Nelson commended the contestants, who represented six district schools.

Opposition Develops Over Freight Rates

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Opposition developed here Tuesday to the proposed revision of freight rates which opponents claim would put London shippers of bulk merchandise at a 33-cent per hundredweight disadvantage to those in Toronto.

London prepared an official protest at a hearing of the board of transport commissioners scheduled for here June 10 for the two-fold purpose of hearing argument on freight rates and on level crossings.

J. W. Murphy, MP, Lambton West, called for a united district opposition. He said he would refer the issue to Sarnia Chamber of Commerce.

Reinstatement Not Approved

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—An umpire Tuesday ruled against the reinstatement of Cornelius Steers, one of 32 Ford of Canada employees fired following the wildcat strike in 1951. Steers' case was the last to come before the umpire.

The decision was handed down by Judge Harold E. Fuller of Welland, who was called in to settle this final case.

Of the 32 cases, 20 discharges were substantiated, nine employees were ordered reinstated with penalties and three ordered reinstated without penalties.

Steers, a plant committee man, failed to appear before the umpire earlier although an appeal was entered on his behalf by local 200, United Automobile Workers (CIO). The charge against him and several others who were dismissed was that they entered the company powerhouse and cut off power supply.

Need Adequate Sex Instruction

TORONTO (CP)—Young couples about to be married need adequate sex instruction, Dr. J. J. Geoghegan of the Homewood Sanatarium at Guelph said Tuesday night.

Addressing the Catholic Women's League, he criticized what he called "psychiatric materialism" as applied to marriage problems.

"Marital disharmony is insidious and corroding," he said. "It relentlessly and ruthlessly undermines and destroys the relationships of the home and distorts the personality of those caught in its meshes."

Cancer Catalogue Big Help In Diagnosis Of Disease

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—A cancer catalogue is one of the weapons for better diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

The catalogue is a number of glass slides each containing bits of hundreds of different types of cancer. With each slide goes a description of what it looks like, the patient's case history, the diagnosis, treatment, follow-up and comment by an expert.

One such catalogue is being prepared here at the University of Colorado medical school by Dr. Richard Mulligan, professor of pathology.

The samples go to 80 pathologists in 10 states—Colorado, the Dakotas, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah, Arizona and Nevada.

The United States public health service sponsors this catalogue or registry. It is doing or has done the same in other centres serving other states. The purpose is to help doctors recognize and classify various forms of cancer more easily and accurately. Better Diagnosis means better treatment

Dr. Mulligan is planing a catalogue of at least 300 cancer sites and types. So far he has completed 50. The project will take two to three years.

Says Church Should Give More Peace Leadership

TORONTO — The Christian church has given the world little leadership in the search for global peace, declared the Rev. A. J. Wilson of Toronto at the annual conference of the United Church of Canada in Trinity Church Tuesday.

Except in rare instances, and then mostly through abstract pronouncements, the church has ignored its responsibility as a peace leader, Dr. Wilson said. This, he said, was unusual because of the [illegible] history. "Our religion from its inception was committed to the establishment of peace on earth among men of good-will," Dr. Wilson told the conference.

"The general council of our church at its meeting in Hamilton laid upon the board of evangelism and social service the responsibility for a crusade for peace within the church," he continued. "This was encouraging to all members who were waiting for just such evidence of leadership and had been pressing for it. For, by our neglect, we had arrived at the position where we were almost afraid to use the word 'peace', an essentially Christian word, for fear of being charged with allegiance to subversive movements."

NEEDED FRIENDSHIP

Dr. Wilson blamed the democratic nations of the world for not making friends with the earth's less fortunate people. "These people are in revolution against hunger, landlordism, poverty and enslavement," he said.

"But the Communists have pleaded their cause, taken their side, professed their friendship. We grant that communism must be restrained in its plan to conquer the world. Yet it seems incongruous that the democratic nations have always to be aligned with a totalitarian medieval institution, reactionary fascists, old men representing an outworn order that has long since lost the respect of millions."

History could be a guide to the church in its plan for peace, he suggested. Some of the fiercest [illegible] Roman Catholics and Protestants. Neither side had given up any of its convictions, he said, but they had learned to live together, were on speaking terms with each other, and did so by appeal to reason and not by force.

The committee on evangelism and social service at the Toronto conference commended the Prime Minister, the minister of external affairs and the government for leadership in the Colombo Plan. The committee also urged the government to devote a larger proportion of the national budget to such unselfish purposes.

This, the committee said, would demonstrate the Canadian people's will for peace, based on sympathy for human need. Canada's contribution to the Colombo Plan ($25 million for 1953-4) was a constructive step toward an abiding peace, but was only a small percentage of the amount being spent on military defense.

The Rev. E. Crossley Hunter, pastor of Trinity United Church, Bloor St., was elected president of the conference on the first ballot.

Lady Lions To Buy Curtains For Town Hall

MILLBROOK —(ENS) —The Lady Lions met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Wilfrid Elson, with 17 members in attendance and the president, Mrs. W. W. Kennedy, presiding.

During the business hour, the ladies decided to accept the application of June Blair as supervisor of the children's playground for the summer months.

As usual, it is the intention of the ladies to assist at the booths on June 10 at the spring live-stock fair, Mrs. Charles Quackenridge, Mrs. Ron Palmer and Mrs. J. W. Wright to assist the president in the purchasing of supplies.

The secretary reported on the sale of tickets for the Cooking School held last week and the club's share in the profits, after which the president asked that a letter of thanks be sent to the Chamber of Commerce for this privilege.

As the town hall in our community requires new curtains for the stage, it was the president's desire that the club should make this their main project for the year.

The nominating committee presented the following slate of officers for 1953-54.

President, Mrs. Charles Brackenridge; 1st vice-president, Mrs. A. R. Payne; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Alex Gilbert; secretary, Mrs. James McMaster; treasurer, Mrs. J. Crowley; press correspondent, Mrs. Reg Fallis. Group leaders are to be appointed at a later date.

The ladies decided to hold their June meting in Peterborough at a dinner party, when the new officers for 1953-54 would be installed, after which they would attend the theatre.

At the close of the business portion of the meeting, a social hour was spent in playing court whist, prizes going to Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Brackenridge. Mrs. Hobbs was the winner of the lucky draw.

Budget Estimates Leave Deficit

EDMONTON (CP)—The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire opened three-day business sessions of their national convention Monday with the approval of estimated national budget expenditures of almost $25,000.

In the report of the national finance committee, Mrs. Peter L. Robinson of Toronto called for estimated expenditures of $24,780. However, the estimated income of $23,310 will leave a deficit of $1,470.

Total receipts of the 933 chapters during 1951-52 were $861,346 and disbursements were $869,575.

Cash and investments on hand Jan. 15, 1952, amounted to $1,336,238, the bulk of which is held in trust for First and Second World War memorial scholarships.

Mrs. Robinson also reported that two study bedrooms to house memorial scholarship winners have been built in London House, England—a residence for British, Commonwealth and Empire students. Cost of the two rooms was $3,000.

TWO HAVELOCK BOYS have arrived in England for the Coronation. They are Flight-Lieutenant Carleton Longmuir, right, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Longmuir, and OSRP Robert Anderson, left, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anderson. F/L Longmuir is stationed at Gros Tenquin, France, flying Sabre jets, and was one of 45 from his station chosen to attend the crowning. OSRP Anderson is a member of HMCS Quebec, which has arrived in England. He was successful in winning a draw for a seat along the coronation parade route.

HEADS WOMEN'S GROUP—Dr. Martha Law of Toronto, president of the Canadian Federation of University Women, will preside at the council meeting of the organization in Winnipeg 5-6. Dr. Law, elected last year for a three-year term, was the first full-time appointee to the dental division of the Toronto health department.

Describes Survey Project

Mr. John Pierce, who recently returned from a surveying trip on the Ontario-Manitoba border, gave an interesting account of his activities at the meeting of Trinity Mr. and Mrs. Club. He also showed a movie filmed during his three month project. His specific purpose was to cut a line from Geraldton to the Albany River to show the boundary between the Thunder Bay and Cochrane districts. This was necessary to facilitate maps being made that would help to assess Canada's forest resources, he explained. Mr. Pierce also tested new equipment for the government to prove its adaptability for winter conditions in bushland. He said the line that was cut, about 15 feet in width, will last for many years because of the extremely slow rate of growth in this northern area. Members enjoyed refreshments at close of the meeting.

Present Badges Of Service For Work In Red Cross

Badges of service, awarded for long, faithful and outstanding service to Red Cross, were received Tuesday evening by eight members of the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Their names and the citations have been forwarded to Ontario Division at Toronto following a recommendation at the annual meeting in January All names submitted were accepted.

Mrs. R. H. Turner, an honorary member of Canadian Red Cross, and also honorary member of Peterborough Branch, read the citations and the badges were pinned on by Mrs. W. R. L. Blackwell, local president.

Those thus honored are: Mrs. G. S. Cameron—for almost 15 years on the executive, supervisor of the women s workroom one day a week during the war, receptionist at the Blood Donor Clinic, and convener of publicity; Mrs. S. L. Smoke—for service in the workroom during the war, helping with refreshments served to blood donors, convener of the social committee, and a helper in emergency.

Miss Eva Brown—for nearly 10 years active service in the blood donor clinic and supervising sewing done by Ashburnham ladies; Mrs S. O. Shields—vice-president, for her supervision of sewing done in south end of city during war and for convening the home nursing classes; Mrs. W. A. Hinds—for outstanding work on the executive as a member of the first aid disaster service, the blood donor committee and as convener of swimming and water safety committee.

Miss Frances Bonnycastle received the badge on recommendation from the Ontario division for 15 years service in Junior Red Cross. This group provides whatever is necessary for the comfort of crippled children throughout Europe and has done a wonderful job in providing ambulances.

Not present to receive their awards were Mrs. W. M. Cruthers, a faithful worker during the war and since on the visiting, welfare and social committees, and Mr. T. A. MacKay who did outstanding work with the war brides, meeting their trains, seeing that they had refreshment, and taking them to their destination, meeting their in-laws for the first time.

The regular meeting, conducted by Mrs. Blackwell, included her own report on the meeting of the executive committee of Ontario Division, which she attended on Monday.

Mrs. Charles Ray reported on the Apsley Hospital under charge of Miss Shirley Brown of Peterborough since April 15th. She said Mrs Brown has visited 30 homes, four schools and treated 136 out patients, as well as having two mothers and babies in the hospital during the month. She has also done 14 X-rays and was continuing with this work.

Peterborough's blood donor service recently extended to Montreal it was reported. Canada Packers had packed the blood in dry ice and it was in perfect condition when relatives reached the hospital there with it. Mrs. Ray said five extra donors had been secured on Sunday, May 24th, for a woman patient in hospital and she had been out of danger before the day was over. April donors at the two hospitals totalled 185.

Mrs. S. O. Shields, convener of home nursing, reported fully on the refresher course at McMaster University, Hamilton, which she and her assitant, Mrs. O. L. Smith attended for two days.

The loan cupboard reported a flurry of activity the past month with all the beds and chairs out and a waiting list of seven for chairs. The executive had therefore decided to order four of the improved type metal wheel chairs and one wooden chair with leg supports suitable for patients with broken limbs.

Miss Helen Gerrard reported the sewers are on the last lap of the work undertaken this spring—making blue denim overalls for children. She had on display flannelette night attire, and other garments, four quilts which have been donated by church groups and some of the knitted things.

A suggestion was made by publicity chairman Mr. C. G. Collins on how the Red Cross might participate in the coronation day parade. The members decided to leave the decision whether to follow this plan to the discretion of Mr. Collins. The branch has not been invited to take any part in the celebration the president said.

It was decided to hold no meeting in June unless an emergency arises.

DOROTHY DIX:

Man Unable To Budget Poor Matrimonial Risk

DEAR MISS DIX: We have a fine son, 35 years old, who has one serious fault—he has never learned to budget his income. He has always spent more than he made. Now, he is going with a girl of 20, has given her a diamond ring (bought with money borrowed on his insurance) and, although he has a good job, he seems to me a precarious matrimonial risk. The girl doesn't know he has borrowed money, doesn't know he is in debt elsewhere, and believes he earns more than he does. We [illegible] trouble, when, after they [illegible] the girl learns he owes money. Do you think the girl should be told now the true facts?—W. W.

RELIES ON PLEASURE

ANSWER: The young lady certainly should be informed of her fiance's money difficulties, but I doubt if you'll get any thanks for your interest. She is apparently concerned chiefly with having a good time, and once she realizes that marriage with your son is not going to be a round of pleasure, there's no doubt but that she'll break the engagement. If you are willing to incur your son's displeasure to save him and the girl from future unhappiness, tell her the truth.

The ability to accept financial responsibility is a "must" in the making of a good marriage. Though lack of it in one partner may be made up by exceptional financial acumen in the other, lack of it in both portends trouble.

When deceit is added as a further complication, there is no chance that either your son or his fiancee would be happy after marriage.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Although I am considered attractive, I rarely have dates. I'm a high-school junior, and feel very unhappy when my girl friends discuss their beaux and I have nothing to contribute to the conversation. Can you give me any advice?

LYNNE W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Some girls just take a little longer to impress their personalities upon eligible young men, but looking hopefully into the future is cold comfort when one wants dates now. I can suggest speed up your dating quotient. A self-addressed, stamped envelope will bring the list to you, together with my own leaflet, "The Way To A Boy's Heart."

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am much interested in art and would like to know how to contact a group with the same hobby.

BETTY D.

ANSWER: Many city high schools now have evening calsses open to all. Why not enroll in one? You will also find fellow hobbyists at the Y.W.C.A., or similar organizations in your town.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: After wearing my class ring for several months, my friend, Vincent, gave it back to me the other night with no word of explanation. I love him, and was sure he felt the same way about me, but now I have my doubts. I'm 15 and he's two years older.—JILL D.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Vincent's action was certainly very rude, but you must realize that, at 17, most boys haven't learned how to handle their emotional problems. You are entitled to an explanation and should ask for one. Don't be belligerent about it; make the approach as tactfully as possible.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: The boy I like just broke up with his girl friend because she went to the movies with someone else. Do you think I have a chance to get him?

CARRIE

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Don't be too eager to move into another girl's territory. This was probably just a lover's quarrel. If you attempt to take over at this point, the boy may date you for awhile, then go back to the other girl, leaving you desolate. Better find an unattached boy.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Asparagus Soup On Special Purpose Menu

Cream of Asparagus Soup
Sliced Baked Back Bacon or Midget Roll
Mustard Pickles
New Vegetable Salad
Potato Chips
Hot Parkerhouse Rolls
Fresh Crushed Pineapple and Pound Cake
Sliced Strawberry Fruit Cup
Coffee

Recently I seem to be surrounded by determined reducers. We had our monthly meeting of the Press Club and the dessert was chocolate eclairs — plus three servings of fruit cups for the perennial reducers in the club. It should have been the other way round— fruit cups for most of us and the eclairs for the two or three lovers of rich desserts, for longing eyes were cast on those fruit cups by most of us.

The above meal is designed to give a choice of dishes allowed to reducers. They can choose the bacon, vegetable salad and fruit cup, and, if their calorie-allowance will stretch for it, the soup, It is a Jack-Spratt,-and-his-wife menu.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

Three tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon grated onion or finely chopped green onion or chives, 3 cups milk, 1 cup liquid in which asparagus is cooked, 1½ teaspoons salt, shake of pepper, 1½ cups very finely sliced asparagus cooked 10 minutes in 1 cup boiling water, ½ teaspoon bottled condiment sauce or MSG, shake of paprika. Melt the butter in double boiler, add the onion or chives and cook over direct heat gently for 5 minutes. Do not brown. Add the flour, stir until smooth, then stir in the milk and asparagus liquid, then cook over boiling water when thickened, for about 10 minutes. Stir it a few times. Add remaining ingredients and heat through. Sprinkle with paprika when served. As a variation use 1 cup canned consumme in place of 1 of the cups of milk.

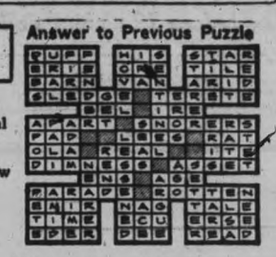
BAKED BACK BACON

A 2-lb. piece of back bacon, if sliced thinly will serve 6. Sprinkle over the fat surface 1-3 cup brown sugar mixed with ½ teaspoon mustard and ⅛ teaspoon cloves. Place in small open pan and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. allowing 35 minutes per lb.— about 70 to 75 mintues in all. This does not require basting. This is delicious sliced cold. Sometimes I bake a piece of bacon like this to have in the refrigerator to slice cold for lunches or sandwiches.

NEW VEGETABLE SALAD

One cup each small cubes unpeeled red apples, finely cut celery, cooked new peas, cooked chopped green beans, ½ cup each finely chopped ripe olives (do not leave these out— they give this salad its character), finely chopped sweet pickles, finely chopped walnuts, mayonnaise. Mix apples, celery, olives, pickles, walnuts. Arrange alternate layers of peas, beans and apple mixture in salad bowl, sprinkling each layer with salt as you go. Dot with the mayonnaise and mix in gently. Garnish with small inner lettuce leaves or sprigs of watercress. This amount will serve 6 or 8 and is a very popular salad with the men.

POUND CAKE



While eggs are low in cost I thought you might be tempted to make this. It keeps well and slices neatly and is an ideal accompaniment to the fresh pineapple and strawberries now in season.

Three and three-quarters cups sifted cake flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1¾ cup butter or margarine, 2¼ cups sugar, 8 eggs— yolks and whites separated. Sift together the flour, and baking powder 3 times. Cream the butter with the rind and nutmeg until fluffy then gradually cream into it 1¾ cups of the sugar while beating. Beat yolks until light and thick and add to the butter mixture, and beat until smooth. Beat whites until stiff. Add remaining ½ cup sugar to beaten whites until just blended— do not overbeat whites at this stage. Stir 1-3 of the flour mixture into the butter mixture, then fold in ½ of the whites, then repeat these 3 additions until all is used, beating well between additions. Turn into the loaf pans 10 x 5 x 3 inches which have been buttered paper-lined and butter again. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr, for one hour and 20 minutes or until cake shrinks from sides of pan.

6—In Memoriam

FALLIS—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Robert Charles Wesley, who passed away suddenly May 27, 1952.
A beautiful memory dearer than gold
Of a son whose worth can never be told,
Alone, unseen, he stands by our side
And whispers "Don't grieve, death cannot divide."
Deep in our hearts his memory is kept
Of one we love and can never forget;
And though the years be many or few,
We will always be thinking dear Bob of you.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Mom, Dad, Ivan, Everett and Larry.

THOMAS — In loving memory of George Thomas, who passed away May 27, 1950.
Today I am thinking of someone
Who was always kind and true,
Someone I loved with all my heart
Dear George, that someone is you.
Your heart, the truest in all the world,
Your love the best of all,
No one on earth can take your place,
You are still dear to us all.
—Remembered by his loving wife.

THOMAS—In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather.
You're not forgotten, father dear,
Nor ever shall you be
As long as life and memory last,
We shall remember thee.
—Sadly missed by Ethel, Clarence, Frank, Carol and Gloria.
